Rushton.

The annual co-operative Children's Day was celebrated Sunday, June 14, with Providence Sunday-school, Salem and Union Point schools being invited to co-operate in the work. The attendance from the several schools was good, there being about 115 scholars present. The program furnished by the Southern Baptist Sunday-school Board was ably carried out by the little folks. A collection of over $10.00 was taken up for the Bible fund to be used in sending Bibles to destitute places. Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said "It is more blessed to give than to receive." At noon dinner was served in profusion for which the ladies have our warmest thanks.

At 4 o'clock the meeting closed, everyone feeling that a glorious day had been spent in the grand Sunday-school work.

MARVELS OF RADIUM.

GREATEST PUZZLE WITH WHICH SCIENCE HAS TO DEAL.

It is Obtained From Mineral Called Pitchblende Found in Bohemia—A Piece the Size of a Buckshot Worth $20,000—Very Dangerous to Handle.

A fresh announcement just made to the Academy of Sciences in Paris by Monsieur Curie, co-discoverer with his wife of the most extraordinary of all chemical elements, radium, brings the wonderful properties of that substance once more to public attention. Radium, whose existence as an independent element was finally demonstrated last year, presents about the greatest puzzle with which science has to deal. It seems to violate—although no scientist is prepared to admit that it actually does violate—the fundamental laws of energy. In a word it gives out energy, unceasingly without revealing the source. It appears to draw upon an inexhaustible supply, and yet receives nothing in return from without. In this respect it seems to realize the dream, which science has pronounced impossible, of perpetual motion.

M. Curie's new announcement is to the effect that a piece of radium is continually giving off heat, keeping itself at a temperature of 27-10 degrees Fahrenheit above its surroundings. This is sufficient to enable it to melt its own weight in ice in less than an hour and to keep on melting ice at the same rate indefinitely.

If radium were an abundant substance, think of the consequences of this strange property! But unfortunately—or, perhaps, fortunately—radium is one of the rarest things upon the earth. It is never found in the pure state. It must be dissociated from the other substances with which it is combined, by long, tedious and costly chemical operations. It is obtained from a mineral called pitchblende, found in Bohemia, and during the two or three years that have elapsed since its discovery by Mme. and M. Curie of Paris they have succeeded in separating out of tons and tons of pitchblende less than two pounds of radium. That is all that exists, uncombined, in the world, and even that is not the pure thing. It is mingled with more or less barium.

The Curies do possess, however, one tiny bit of chemically pure radium. It weighs about half a grain, and is said to be of the size of a buckshot. M. Curie has declared that he would not sell it for 100,000 francs. If he and his wife have a monopoly of this precious substance they are not getting rich out of it. The demand is not active. A little tube is offered in Paris for $5000.

A thief who should run off with a bit of radium as big as a small diamond would find that he had caught a Tartar. If he kept it in his pocket, it would produce an inflammation that might cost him his life. If he held it near his eyes, he could easily lose his sight. If he handled it much, his fingers would get sore, and might have to be amputated. M. Curie is quoted as saying that he would not venture into a room containing a kilogram of pure radium; for, if he did, he would probably lose his skin, his eyesight and his life!

This being so, let us examine a little more the properties of radium. We have noted M. Curie's recent announcement about its giving off heat. It gives off light also. Pure radium shines in the dark, although it is not hot like a flame. But, most wonderful of all, it constantly projects into space around it streams of invisible corpuscles, smaller than atoms, with a velocity as great as a hundred thousand miles per second!

It is this marvellous and ceaseless bombardment of its surroundings that makes radium so dangerous to handle. The infinitely minute particles can not, of course, be seen, but they affect photographic plates, and it was in that manner that the existence of these inexplicable radiating streams was first demonstrated.

Radium is omnivorous in its appetite for obscure and mysterious properties. Not content with its penetrating streams of pulverized atoms, it gives off, at the same time, at least two other, different, kinds of rays. One of these resembles the ordinary X-rays from a Crookes tube, the other consists of something that is easily stopped or absorbed by interposed obstacles. But even these absorbable rays have the tremendous velocity of 18,000 or 20,000 miles per second.

M. Curie's buckshot of pure radium is, in some respects, a miniature of the sun. It draws no light, no heat, no energy, from surrounding space, but it radiates them generally and continuously upon everything about it. Helmholtz solved that riddle for us many years ago. The sun is no perpetual motion machine, and it violates no law known to science. By the gradual, and to us imperceptible, shrinking of its gigantic bulk it generates the energy that it gives off. A somewhat similar explanation has been offered to account for the mysterious energy of radium. Messrs. Rutherford and McCling of the McGill university, suggest that it is the breaking down of the atoms into the smaller corpuscles that are radiated away which gives rise to the energy whose expenditure without apparent source of supply so puzzles us.

In a few years it may be found that radio-activity is a common phenomenon in nature, playing a part even in things that concern our own welfare, of which we are now unaware. But radium is its chief source, so far as is yet known, and the study of this singular element may lead to a wide re-estimation of scientific theories.—Garrett P. Serviss, in Collier's Weekly.

NOTHING BUT TREES.

A Continent Long This Wonderful Woods of the Great Northwest. No more trees in the world is there such a forest as this. A few steps in any direction from the roads of the loggers bring one at once to the primeval wood.

Turn to the north. A thousand and five hundred miles you may wander, if you will, and never escape the inclosing silences of this wood. Across the British possessions, through endless reaches of mountains, snow-capped, inaccessible, and onward to Alaska, nothing but trees and trees—cedar, fir, hemlock, pine, spruce. Turn to the south. For a thousand miles of Sierra, through the heart of California, where grows the Sequoia, the monarch among trees, to the very deserts of the Mexican border, and you will find this forest still covering all the hills, thick, silent, and all but undisturbed. A continent long is this wood, facing the Pacific, here two hundred miles wide, from the water's edge across the heights of the Cascades and the Sierra, there narrowing to a thin, straggling, yet persistent growth along the mountain tops.

This tree before you, rising two hundred and fifty feet in air, straight and strong, thick-coated with brown bark, its mighty base setting firmly in the earth, its roots gripping deep, was growing before Columbus saw America. Five hundred years has it been standing here, raising its head to the sky. What storms it bent before; under what ages of sunshine has it gained strength; what lightning strokes have threatened it; what sweeping fires! And still it stands with the sublime majesty of age and strength, fearful of nothing—and the sound of axes knocking in the valley below!

But long before the seed of this hoary giant was sown in the wind, forests were old on these hills. For fifty thousand years and more have these mountains been forest clad, one forest rising five hundred years from youth to maturity, sinking away in ripe old age, and giving room to another generation of trees. Deep in the earth today lie some of these ancient forests, changed by the slow chemistry of the ages into coal, and now at last beginning to give out for men the sunshine which they stored up centuries before the beginning of history.—From Ray Stannard Baker's "The Conquest of the Forest" in the Century.

Peanut Eaters in Cars.

"If I could have my way about it," said a sensitive citizen, "I would have a law passed forbidding the eating of peanuts in elevated or surface cars, and requiring the guards or conductors to eject from the cars any person so offending. Men, strange as it may seem, not children, are the chief offenders in this direction. You may see grown men sitting in a car, and, regardless of their fellow-passengers, calmly eating peanuts and dropping the shells on the floor. To many persons the odor of peanuts within a confined space, as in a railroad car, is unpleasant, as the sight of the litter of shells on the floor must be to all. But the men peanut eaters go right on eating and so disposing of the shells. Why, I have seen a district messenger boy eating peanuts in a car do better than they in one way, anyhow; this boy put his empty shells into the paper bag from which he had emptied the peanuts into his pockets.

"I have seen men eat apples in an elevated car and throw the core under the seat. I have seen a man eat an orange in an elevated car, and not even take the trouble to do that with the orange peel, but just lay that down on the vacant seat beside him. But such men as these I regard as fine gentlemen as compared with the grown man who eats peanuts in an elevated car and drops the shells on the floor. Him I regard as—Well, the peanut eater I would have firmly, even if gently, put off the car."—New York Sun.

Traffic in Stolen Pets.

Many fashionably dressed ladies attended at Marlborough street police court recently, when a good deal of light was thrown on the disappearance and reappearance of valuable pet dogs. According to the police, the two men in the dock, Jewell and Skinnerton, made a business of stealing dogs from well-known people, and afterward restoring them in consideration of a reward, on condition that no proceedings should be taken. The first witness was Miss Viola Wilberforce, daughter of Archdeacon Wilberforce, whose Aberdeen terrier suddenly vanished one day in High Street, Bloomsbury. A friend of hers having mentioned Skinnerton, she wrote to him saying she heard he was clever at finding lost dogs, and could he find hers.

Subsequently he advised her to write "as a fool" to Jewell, who had the animal. "Were you able to reduce yourself to writing as if you were a fool?" asked counsel; and Miss Wilberforce, with a smile, replied "Yes."

Archdeacon Wilberforce gave evidence that Jewell called at the house with the dog, which he said he had bought for £1. He was given £3 10s., and another £1 was sent to Skinnerton.—London Express.

PRE-MAN'S BENEFIT

THE NURSES OF THE ARMY.

Women Regularly Employed With Marked Success.

A brief account by Dr. McGee, of the Nurse Corps of the Army as it exists now, has recently been published in the Journal of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States. A previous article described the conditions attending the appointment of trained women nurses for army duty, which began in May, 1898, and culminated in September, when about 1200 were employed. Between then and the present time they have served in the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Japan and the Philippines, and even in the Chinese campaign. The number is now fixed at 100 on active duty, with a small body of "reserves" who have been active service and are ready to answer future calls. Trained nurses are permanently stationed at the army hospital at San Francisco, at the one for tuberculosis at Fort Bayard, N. M., and at the largest hospitals in the Philippines. They are temporarily sent to any post where they may be needed. They serve under a section of the army reorganization law framed in 1900, which provided that the medical department should consist of specified medical officers, of the enlisted men of the hospital corps, and of the nurse corps (female). A superintendent is stationed in the surgeon general's office and a chief nurse is at each of the hospitals where nurses are serving. Recent regulations provide for an examination in nursing, cooking and allied subjects before promotion from the grade of nurse to that of chief nurse. Women are employed with marked success as teachers of nursing and cooking in the two schools maintained to give brief preliminary instruction to the hospital corps recruits. Dr. McGee urges that in the future the nurse corps be more largely utilized in giving systematic ward training to fit the hospital corps men for their duties in the smaller hospitals where they have no trained supervision. She also recommends the gradual formation of a large corps of reserves who have received some post-graduate military training.—American Medicine.

Our Spoiled Children.

The girls of to-day have been petted and made much of from their cradles. Everything has been done to make the hard places easy and the rough roads smooth. There is a grading and leveling in the schools nowadays in order that children may learn without their knowing it. A sort of "ignorance-extracted-without-pain system" it is from kindergarten to college. At home, if not at school, American children are regularly and unblushingly spoiled, and while the effects of such wholesale injury to the childish life often wear off with boys as soon as they go out into the world to compete with their equals on every side, in the case of girls the tonic of mingling in the affairs of life and work, without flattery or favors of any kind, is usually denied. With girls the petting and coddling continue long after womanhood is reached, and so the daughters do not get over the effects of the American manner of spoiling children as promptly and as thoroughly as do the sons. These spoiled children will have to love very earnestly and tenderly if they are to be really successful home-makers. The ability they have; the training needed they often have, and can always get, even if the illumination comes after marriage. It is the disciplined nature which will be most needed; the habit of doing distasteful things, and doing them cheerfully and continually; the power to give up cherished plans; to devise ways of helpfulness about things of small interest in themselves, and the regular practice of forgetfulness of self and remembrance of others in the recurring trifles of daily life.—Woman's Home Companion.

Exercise Brings Beauty.

Every woman who wishes to retain her health and beauty should walk at least two miles a day. As soon as breakfast is finished the woman who knows the proper way to care for her health rests for half an hour and then starts out for a long walk, the longer the better. She chooses the sunny side of the street and starts off at a smart trot. If she is seeking for slenderness she covers five miles without resting.

Pretty Things to Wear

Pleated blouses are much liked. Battlemented revers add to one's broadness.

Silk for croquet work is being used to stitch costumes.

A blouse with upstanding parts in box pleat is attractive.

Forest-green taffeta parasols are among the catchy sorts.

Mitered schemes die hard—that is, they are not dead at all.

Buttons are an important feature on coats and summer suits.

Brown in shadings is a good color for a quill on an ecrú hat.

Black embroidered white silk stockings are smart with black patent leather Oxford.

Light colored silk coats in both plain and corded silks are the smartest for summer for little girls.

Woolen materials show a tendency toward small square or diamond effects in two colors, almost like embroidery.

Linon crash in its natural tint is one of the most serviceable materials for young girls' skirts to wear with short waists.

The shoulder capes, so very fashionable for women, are just as desirable for girls. Much care should be taken in selecting their shape so as to overcome the rather short waisted effect they are apt to give. If a girl is short waisted the cape should be pointed in front.

Vaguerie is one of the latest stuffs for blouses, stronger than mousseline, finer and more silky than crystalline, something between the two, but it is very pretty, and gains in effectiveness from the contrast with the coarse guipures and flut lace with which the majority of blouses are encrusted.

Coarse linen crash and holland in deep ecru and ten tints are fashionable for morning blouses, trimmed with pure white Irish crochet or black-and-white embroidery; these are generally made in slip form, fastening down the back, or with a broad box-pleat in front, finished off with a small black bow or cravat.

A Midnight Tragedy.

It was nearing the hour of midnight. A faint light was burning in a poorly furnished room of a three-story tenement.

At a table in the centre of the room sat a man. His thin, nervous fingers trembled as he eagerly read the long expected letter. "It is just as well," he murmured, as laying down the finished letter, he took a shining revolver from his pocket. "It is even better so."

Slowly the hands on the clock approached the midnight hour. "Almost time," he muttered, buskily, "and all will be over. Perhaps it is for the best; she—she will never know!" Then a pause as his grizzled locks sank low on the table.

One—two—three minutes passed silently away. Then, a low, waiting cry was borne up on the night wind through the open window. Again it was repeated and again the cry reached the ears of the desperate man. "Now, now is the time," he cried as the slow, musical bell of the clock struck 12, and seizing the revolver he strode heavily to the window.

Again that low, mournful cry was wafted on the air.

"Bang! Bang!" Then deathly silence.

The next morning an old gray cat was found dead in the alley.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Why She Cooked It.

The happy faced man swung on to a College avenue car, and this was the story he told as an explanation for his good humor:

"I have a good joke on my wife. We have a new girl, a German, just over from the fatherland. She is a hard and willing worker, but is greatly in need of judgment and common sense. Yesterday my wife ordered fish and instructed the girl to serve it for dinner. As soon as I tasted it I knew it would be something interesting. My wife discovered it was not as fish as it should be. Her first mouthful caused her to ring for the girl.

"Mary, is this the fish that came today?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Didn't you know it was not good when you cooked it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then why did you cook it?"

"Well, you bought it, and I thought you knew it, too."—Indianapolis News.

Counsel For English Prisoners.

It is a curious fact that the laws of England make no provision for the defense of persons charged with criminal offenses when they have not the means to employ their own lawyers. In very serious cases the bench usually takes it upon itself to provide counsel, but thousands of persons are prosecuted each year without any legal advice. A bill has lately been introduced into the House of Commons which speaks to remedy in part this state of affairs, but it does not go to the extent of having the State pay for the services of the counsel, as is the case in this country. It merely provides for voluntary service on the part of the lawyers.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Effects of Bad Atmosphere.

It is possible that the school child may be quite as readily fatigued by inspiring the waste products of his fellows as by his own, and that the business man is more liable than the agricultural laborer to become run down, not so much because he works harder or more monotonously and therefore personally manufactures more waste products, but because his tissues are more liable to become saturated with the waste products of himself and others derived from the confined atmosphere in which he works. Excessive fatigue from a railway journey is likely to be noticed if the cars are crowded or ill ventilated.

Britain as a Coal Country.

Great Britain is likely to be a powerful competitor of the United States in the world's coal market for some time. According to an English expert the supply of coal yet remaining to be mined in the United Kingdom amounts to 80,984,000,000 tons, which, at the present rate of mining, would last 370 years. The same authority gives the total output of the world in 1900 as 767,636,204 tons, of which Great Britain produced 229,000,000 tons, or thirty per cent., and the United States 245,000,000 tons, leaving a balance of about thirty-five per cent. for the rest of the world.

The Biggest Locomotive.

What is probably the biggest locomotive in the world has just been completed at Schenectady for hauling freight over the Rocky Mountains. It measures seventy feet and on a level track can haul a train of cars a mile and a half long.

AGRICULTURAL

How a Hen Feeds.

Observe how the hens feed when out on the range. It is first a blade of grass or a leaf clover, then a short chase for a grasshopper or cricket. She now discovers a soft spot in the soil which she now believes worth investigating, and sets to work with the mining tools nature has given her with a view of finding out if it is "pay dirt." A fuzzy weed head is in her path and she stops to shatter down a few of the ripened seeds. She is drawn away from this repeat by another grasshopper, which springs down in front of her and jumps away again just in time to save himself from the dash which she has made at him. In place of the grasshopper which she didn't get she nips another clover leaf or blade of grass. Thus the hen feeds a little at a time and consuming hours in obtaining a full meal. It seems that people who see this every day might know that throwing down a measure of shelled corn on a bare spot is not the way to feed the hens. And those who do this receive conclusive proof that there is something wrong with their feeding during the time of year when the hen has no choice of food, but must live on what is given her by the owner.—Green's Fruit Grower.

No Oats in Orchards.

It has been many years since I first made the statement that a crop of oats is the next thing to a fire in an orchard. This feeling was forced upon me by the many injurious results I had seen in the orchards of others (but never in my own), and I have seen no reason to change or modify the statement.

All the small grains are injurious to orchards of any age. While the trees are young and a large part of the ground is not permeated by their roots, hence is not needed for their use, it is both reasonable and wise to utilize that part of it with temporary crops. But these crops should be such as require tillage and especially in the spring and early summer. Corn is not a bad crop. If not planted too close to the trees. Potatoes, sweet potatoes, peanuts, cotton, melons or almost anything that requires frequent stirring of the soil will do.

But oats are the worst of all the small grains for orchards, because they not only draw largely on the fertility of the soil but require a very great quantity of moisture. There are great differences between crops in the amount of water necessary to pass through them to the air from the soil in the course of growth. Oats are among the most greedy in this respect. Anyone who has farmed very much knows how an oat crop leaves the ground. And then, it grows so late in the season. It is after rye and wheat are in the shock, and sometimes stacked and threshed, that the oat crop is cut. Whatever may be done or not done with the orchard soil do not afflict it with an oat crop.—H. E. Van Deman, in Vick's Magazine.

A Lamb Creep.

When the lambs get about two or three weeks of age, they will begin to pick at the hay and grain. They will soon want to be eating themselves. To have them do their best they must have a separate place from the ewes to eat, where they can go at will when they feel hungry—what is termed a lamb creep, extending across one end of the barn where there is an abundance of sunlight. In here put flat-bottomed troughs extending the whole length of the apartment, with a board extending along the troughs, six inches above the sides, to prevent the lambs from getting their feet into it. As a lamb is very dainty about having his food clean. In here give them crushed oats, wheat bran, corn meal ground coarsely, and oil meal in the same proportion as I advised for the ewes. After they have learned to eat well, increase the feed until they eat all they will eat. If any feed is over, clean it out each morning and feed it to the ewes, as the troughs must be kept clean in order to have them relish their food.

Lambs that are made perfectly happy and contented (as it is the happy lambs that grow and put on flesh), being fed in this manner will be ready for market at eight or ten weeks of age, weighing from thirty to forty pounds or more, and will bring more net profit for the feed consumed than at any other age. But if the lamb is going to spend his life on the farm, instead of going to the butcher's block, I would recommend a different grain ration. I would feed but little corn meal, if any, keep his frame growing, give plenty of outdoor exercise, and let him develop naturally; then he will have more stamina when he grows to be a sheep.—American Cultivator.

Care of Sitting Hens.

Hens should sit for one week before placing eggs under them. Never remove a hen from her usual place of sitting, as she will not sit upon the eggs. If outside of henhouse, place a box over her to prevent her from being disturbed. In preparing nests, clean well, sprinkle about with kerosene, and place ashes and some soft hay in the bottom. The number of eggs should not exceed fifteen or go below thirteen. Don't let her off at all the first day, and after that once a day. Have some kind of inclosure to keep her from running off.

Feed whole shelled corn and always provide fresh water. If the ground is hard, loosen with spade or supply soft soil for dusting. If the hen is restless, remove the eggs, as they must not be allowed to become cold. Watch hatching, she must be furnished with before removal to coop, rub well with salt.

After hatching the hen should have seven or eight weeks, remove her boxes with ground corn. Place a vent rolling, and leave to her choice in bottom of coop, and clean often, sprinkling with kerosene. Give all the air you can without exposing them to slight draughts.

After the first two weeks feed four times each day with whole corn. Fresh water always be kept around the hen. Never let her during the early morning hours, when the chicks are small. When the time comes James A. Patterson, New York.

HEAT IN A BAKE OVEN.

The Simple Manner in Which the Temperature is Tested.

"Bakers have a curious way of just what the temperature of the oven is," said a baker who has been in business for more than a quarter of a century, "and they can tell almost a man who is an expert in the trade and he can tell what the temperature of the oven is by simply holding a handle of the oven door. It is a fraction of a degree. Bakers in other ways, of course, test the heat of the oven. For instance, in baking bread they sometimes throw a piece of white paper into the oven. If it turns brown the oven is at the proper temperature; or when baking cornmeal flour into the oven to test the heat. But the bakers are the best gauge, and when you go to think of the different temperatures required in baking different things, a small achievement to even approximate the heat of the oven by using the handle of the oven door.

"Bakers figure that during the time of a loaf of bread after it has been placed in the oven, it ought to be in a temperature of seventy degrees Fahrenheit. During the process, in order to cook the crumb, and the carbonic acid gas, steam, and drive off the alcohol, the side of the loaf must register at 220 degrees. In baking rolls, scones, tea biscuits, drop cakes, cakes, New York cakes, muffins, cakes and things of that sort the thermometer must show a heat of 350 degrees higher. When the oven is at 400 degrees it is fit for cream puffs, cakes, queen cakes, rock cakes, jelly rolls. At 350 degrees is for cup cakes, ginger nuts and suet ginger bread, spice cakes, such as in current, citron, pound, bride and on, may be baked. It requires a lower temperature to bake with cakes, kisses, anise drops and things of this class. But whatever temperature the old baker wants he can tell you he has it by simply touching the handle of the oven door."—New York Times-Democrat.

Defence a Bar to Business Failure.

"If I were asked to state what the chief misfortune is the greatest handicap in business I would say that said a downtown merchant the other day. 'A person who is crippled by misfortune to get around in some fashion—at least, he will not undertake more than he can perform. A blind person always knows his limitations, either retires from active participation in his business, or has assistants who can attend to certain details. But he does no defense against defeat. He does not know you are deaf and speak to you, and you perhaps do not think you are as deaf as you are.'"

"I know one man who lost his fortune simply because he was too vain. He ran a haberdashery shop on Broadway, and as he had been in the business for a good many years he was quite prosperous. An accident deprived him of his hearing, but he thought it would not prove a handicap to his work. He began to lose customers, and had to depend on chance patronage. Why? Simply because he could not hear what the customers said to him. If one asked him for a hat, he was apt to show him the latest in neckties. Shirts would be exhibited to the man who wanted half a dozen collars. His friends urged him to sell out and retire, but he refused to do so until he had sold his last dollar in trying to regain his patronage."—New York Press.

"As Wise as an Owl."

If ever the appearance of wisdom was mistaken for the quality of the extraordinary intelligence attributed to the owl. Why is it so much more than other birds, not to mention some other animals? Science can't tell you the reason. In the forest, over the brain of the owl is an immense number of air cells. They are the forehead that imposing appearance which has commanded the worship of Minerva down to the prosaic present.

To look wise when one makes little fuss and noise as the owl mean accomplishment. Looking and being generally alert is one of the ways to make yourself respected. To make you rather tiresome in your company, but think how much quieter you are if too noisy. The quiet of the owl is an example to imitate. It has a wisdom of its own. We have not a word in English to express it.—Our Animal Friends.

Jumbo.

Your correspondent had the pleasure of attending Childrens Day at Providence church last Sunday, the 14th inst., which is located about seven miles east of Clanton.

The program was very elaborate and interesting and no half scrutinizing eye could fail to see, nor lover of truth and the cause of Christ fail to admire, the interest those good people have in the work.
But your correspondent was equally favorably impressed with the most bounteous spread which was served at the noon hour to a crowd of many hundred, and it is not necessary to say that I enjoyed it to those who were there, for I showed my appreciation by my strict attachment.

It is a rare pleasure to visit a community like Providence, one in which the richest are poor, but the poorest live in abundance.

Did I have an optical delusion?
Was it my eyes? No, I really saw Mr. James Robinson take that home made ham from a box that was filled with many luxuries, but I never saw him put any ham back. I only saw that he fed a well cared for mule on home raised ear corn. Other things I noticed too many to mention, showing those people congregated there from Salem, Union Point and Providence were a religious, progressive and prosperous people, and when I noticed a smile on the face of our congenial Mose Robinson, one like a wave on the ocean, I could not but envy true brotherly love, a good appetite and a clear conscience, when on his strong arm he bore the provision box from the table to the carriage and said: "boys, it is not quite so heavy as it was when we came." I noticed Sherman Dennis, W. C. Robinson and Rev. W. S. Cox who were near by and seemed to say we don't care for any more. I was not surprised at the box not being altogether so heavy.

Boys, when you are longing for rest, careworn and hungry, there is no place like Providence, there, where they have home made ham and corn, though it does not rain in due season. x. y. z.

Waddy.

We are having more rain and some hail. The farmers have plenty of grass, and it looks fine this rainy weather. Mrs. J. F.
McKee and Mrs. L. D. Popwell made a flying visit to Waddy Saturday.
Rev. W. S. Cox visited his son, Mr. C. B. Cox, Saturday, and was the guest of Mr. H. M.
Mahan Sunday. Mr. and Mrs.
A. Killgore visited Mr. J. B. Robinson's family Sunday.

Miss Callie Robinson, who has been very sick, is up again.

Mrs. G. D. Rutherford and Mrs.
M. Robinson are improving; we hope to see them out again soon.

We learn that Mr. John Middle-brooks of Maplesville, who had his leg and foot broken by dray turning over, is getting along as well as could be expected; he has our deepest sympathy.

Worst of All Experiences.
Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your

Mrs. S. H. Newton, Decatur, Ala., "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble.
Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered. For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed

All Day Singing.

Sunday 21st inst. Those who were present were Messrs. H. J. Thomas, at the organ were Misses Lena Pyron and Emmet Townson.

There was the best of order, no refreshing water.

That beautiful rain last Sunday made us feel good; our crops are looking fine, or at least we tell the merchants so. Health in our community is very good.

On last Friday night, about 10 o'clock, the dwelling house of Mr.
John Beardin caught on fire and in a few minutes it was burned to ashes.
By some cause Mr. Beardin was awakened just in time to get his family out of the house. He comparatively saved nothing. Mr. Beardin gave the alarm which was heard by a few neighbors, but they did not get there in time to save anything.
It is supposed it caught from the stove flue. The roof of the kitchen was falling in when Mr. Beardin discovered the fire. A carriage house, one crib and a stable also burned. Mrs. Beardin had a fine garden which was burned to a crisp.
Mr. Beardin is a member of the Mutual Insurance Co., which will be a great help to him. People are laying by corn; if we get a few more rains we are going to make some corn. The Plow Boy.

Our Washington Letter failed to arrive this week. Another investigation needed.

In the peonage cases in the Federal court at Montgomery J. W.
Pace, of Tallapoosa, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years.
An appeal was taken to the U. S. circuit court at New Orleans, bond being made in the sum of $5,000.

The value of insuring with a good responsible company is shown by the promptness with which the loss caused by the fire at Mrs. Han-non's was met. Mrs. Hannon is insured with the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, represented in Clanton by Mr. C.
R. Mullins. Almost before the fire was extinguished Mr. Mullins had sent in the claim to his company, and it was promptly allowed, and next day the roof of the house was being recovered.

The law of exemption would be the better for some modifications.
It was doubtless the intention of the legislature which enacted it to protect the wives and families of insolvent debtors, so that they would not be turned out of house and home. But it was never intended to aid a man who, in the course of business, legitimately owes a few dollars, to claim the protection of the exemption law to evade payment of just debts. The man who strains the exemption law to this point only earns the contempt of all honest men.

The fire at Mrs. Hannon's last Friday again calls attention to the need of some organized effort for protection against disastrous conflagrations. While our citizens can always be depended upon at any hour of the day or night to respond to the cry of "Fire" they labor under many disadvantages which could be easily overcome. Clanton is big enough, and should certainly have a volunteer fire company, and at a small expenditure a few light ladders and several hundred feet of hose could be acquired.
The big water tank and pump at the depot and the big tank and pump at the court house would furnish a plentiful supply of water at either end of the town, and with an efficient fire company the town would feel reasonably secure against further devastating fires. It would doubtless reduce insurance rates, so that citizens would reap the benefit in more ways than one. Let us first organize a fire company, the rest will follow.

CHILTON county, in one particular at least, does more for the State of Alabama than any other one of the sixty-seven counties. Whether the State appreciates it is another matter. In this respect what Chilton does is of doubtful quality and not much in quantity. Perhaps it is not fair to give Chilton all the credit, as without the aid of Jefferson county it would not be possible for Chilton to show up in the business. So we must make Jefferson particeps criminis.

Of the few Republican newspapers in Alabama, Chilton (with the aid of Jefferson) is responsible for three! Not much can be said of all three. In point of age the Birmingham Times takes the lead; its editor lives in Chilton, and the ready-print concern in Birmingham does the rest. Next is the Birmingham Alabamian; its editor lives in Chilton, and the ready-print concern in Birmingham does the rest.

Last and least is the Clanton Union —its what-d'ye-call-um exists in Clanton and the ready-print concern in Birmingham does the rest.
What a trio for Chilton to answer for!

A TIGER, BUT NOT BLIND.

It has just been a short while since whiskey or no whiskey was an issue in our town, and a question discussed to some extent over the county; and if we are permitted to live to see another year, the same question is likely to come before the people again, and as it is a question that controls the moral sentiment to a great extent, and from past observation we know that the destiny of many young men, and the hope of sunshine in many homes, rest upon the position of a people in disposing of such questions. So it appeals to the Christian people of this town and county to shoulder arms of conviction and buckle the sword of Christ's teaching around them and declare a continued war from day to day and year to year, and place all restraints possible on such evils, for we know not what hour the demon will make his appearance in our own home and drag from there down to the lowest walks of debauchery and shame one of the brightest jewels therein. And it is unnecessary to go to other towns, to other countries, to temperance orders or to writers and lecturers, to sustain facts. Just appeal to your own observation. We have "the decision of every drunkard, and an expression from the calendar of crime, as to its influence and results in every shape and form it can be placed in. When man appeals to his best reasoning he frankly acknowledges the evils that exist.
But personal, selfish and financial interest seems to absorb respect for right, and the destiny of man is then viewed with but little regard.

So I will now pay my respects to the blind tiger in the shape of a human. Above all men he is the most disgusting. Who is he, and what is he? He is the character that force the whiskey traffic upon the people, sell it regardless of law and the interest of his country, and then sets himself up as evidence for the establishing of a saloon or a dispensary. He serves as an argument for the selling of whiskey, and he is about all the argument to be found. He furnishes an excuse.
Is that all? No, I say no! He is a robber and a murderer. Where does he live? On the dark corners of our town. What does he do?
He pretends to be your friend, and steals your character and robs you of your finance and lands your soul in an endless hell. And when he sees a boy traveling that road he has the nerve to stand off and smile.
God pity such a conception of life as this man entertains. Can we wonder at the calendar of crime increasing. Someone says what shall we do, shall we let him live?
I answer no! How are we to get rid of him? Will answer in next issue. So don't fail to look for me again.

I see him on every corner during the dark hours of nights. The devil is the follower of all such ruls and rights.

Your friend in right,
J. T. L.

COUNTY FINANCES ALRIGHT.

Clanton, June 24, 1903
Editor Banner—Please allow me to correct some wrong impressions that seem to have gone out through the county. I have just heard that our county is several thousand dollars in debt. I want to say that it is not true. The County Treasurer's books show that on the 13th day of May, 1903, there was in the county treasury from all sources $6,695.42, and not a dollar unpaid or outstanding against the county.
I hope this will put to silence the report that the county is in debt, and that it will satisfy all honest inquirers.
S. M. ADAMS,
Judge of Probate.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Mary Hudson died near Thorsby, June 11, 1903, at the age of 73 years. She joined the Baptist church in early life, and lived a consistent Christian; it was my fortune to be her pastor and I always found her cheerful and full of the spirit of the Master, and I have been requested to extend the thanks of the family to the neighbors for kindness in her sickness, and also to say that her funeral will be preached by Bros. Armstrong and Parrish on the fourth Sunday in July at New Salem church.
With love and sympathy,
S. M. ADAMS.

Cross Roads.

The farmers are progressing nicely with their crops. We had a nice rain on Sunday eve.
The Sabbath-school at this place is going on nicely.

Rev. M. J. Parrish filled his regular appointment here Saturday, and after preaching the church went into conference and opened the doors of the church; received members as follows: R. T. Grant and wife, L. L. Grant, Nettie Grant, by letter; J. T. Rockett, by experience. Sunday morning at 8 a.m. the church assembled at the water's edge to attend the ordinances of Baptism. Bro. J. T.
Rockett was buried with Christ in baptism, and as Christ was raised from the dead we trust that Bro.
Rockett will arise from the grave and walk in newness of life and be instrumental in the hands of God of causing others to fall out with the error of their way and fall in with the overtures of mercy and be saved upon the terms of the gospel.

At 9 a.m. the body assembled back at the house and Bro. J. S.
Jones, entertained the class 30 minutes. The congregation was led in prayer by Bro. S. M. Yates.

After which Brother J. L.
Dupree entertained the class 30 minutes. At 11 a.m. Bro. W. J.
Armstrong preached an excellent sermon from text Titus 2:1-2,
"But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine, that the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience." And I think that every one who engages in drinking strong drink could have heard the sermon would turn and lead a new life.

There will be an all-day singing at this place on the fifth Sunday in August, and the books that will be used will be the Christian Harmony and Sacred Harp. Come one, come all, and bring your books and baskets well filled with something good to eat. All lovers of old time music are cordially invited. Suc-

FOUR FREE SCHOLARSHIPS.

State Superintendent I. W. Hill has received notice that Alabama will be given four free scholarships in the Peabody normal school at Nashville.

The Scholarships are very desirable inasmuch as they carry with them $100.00 to each successful applicant with free books and free tuition, and railroad fare to and from the school.

Superintendent Hill has the disposal of these scholarships, and he awards them on merit for which competitive examinations will be held. He announces that examinations will be held at Montgomery July 16th and 17th, and are open to all white applicants. Superintendent Hill will be glad to furnish to prospective applicants any information they may desire.

Song Services

We will conduct a song service where we will begin a 20 days singing school.

RHINOCEROS HUNTING.

The Killing of a Big Rhine on the banks of the Nile.

I was dashing along, confident that the rhino must be far ahead, when Zowani whistled. I could see nothing till he pointed out the brute lying quite close to me. The sun beaming on her mud caked hide made it blend so perfectly with the red earth and yellowish grass that I should have walked right up without seeing her. She sprang to her feet. We both fired. She made a short dash toward us, but thought better of it and rushed down a small slope on to a flat bed of short reeds. Here she turned again and defied us. Again the heavy guns roared. She spun round and round several times, staggered, recovered and dashed off only to stop, however, under the next tree. The balls cracked, and in a wild chorus of thankful yells she toppled over, rose again, spun round and finally subsided into the grass. We went up quite close to finish her. She fought hard to rise and have a last charge, but the little pencil like bullet again sped on its sad errand, and the game old relic of prehistoric times breathed her last. We were sad men as we gazed upon her grotesque, misshapen form. Somehow one feels such a blatant upstart in the presence of the pachyderms when one thinks of the unbroken line that dates back unchanged into the unthinkable ages of the past.—Ewart Grogan in Outlook.

The Headman's Perquisites.

Strange and unreasonable laws guaranteed to the headman his full share of emoluments. He was well paid for his work and never suffered from a dull season. From the towns he received poultry and fodder, from the monasteries fish and game. The Abbaye de Saint-Germain gave him every year a pig's head; the Abbaye de Saint-Martin five loaves of bread and five bottles of wine. Cakes were baked for him on the eve of Epiphany. For each leper in the community he exacted—heaven knows why—a tax at Christmas time.
Les filles de Jole were his vassals. It was his privilege to seize in the market place as much corn as he could carry away in his hands, and the peasants thus freely robbed submitted without a murmur, crossing themselves with fervor as he passed. He had the power to save from death any woman on her way to the scaffold, provided he were able and willing to marry her. He was the first official called to the body of a suicide, and, standing on the dead man's breast, he claimed as his own everything he could touch with the point of his long sword.—Agnes Rep-plier in Harper's Magazine.

All Sirloins.

Holman F. Day's "Pine Tree Ballads" tells in verse a number of stories that actually happened "down in Maine," and are remembered there today by old narrators. One relates to Barney McGauldrie, a landlord of that state, at whose house famous men liked to stay, that they might enjoy a merry joke.

Barney was always loyal to his friends. At one time a new meat dealer came to town and tried to secure the landlord's trade.

"I have always bought meat of Jed Haskell," said Barney, "and I guess
I won't change."

"But," said the other, "old Haskell doesn't know his business. He doesn't even know how to cut meat."

"Well," drawled Barney, "I've always found that he knows enough about it to cut sirloin steak clear to the horn, and that's good enough for me."

The Penguin's Bump of Locality.

On shore the penguin is an awkward creature. Water is its element. When hunted on the ice floes, the birds generally try to run away in an upright position, but just as the hunter thinks he has got one the bird lies down on its white-belly and paddles along over the snow very quickly, the hard, smooth quills slipping over the snow crystals almost without friction. A remarkable characteristic of the penguin is his bump of locality. Both on shore and in the water he never loses his way.
To human eyes one ice floe is precisely like another, but under that roof of similar ice floes I have seen a penguin of the larger species find its mate on a floe after diving and swimming for a full mile under water.—Leslie's.

An Infallible Remedy.

Briggs—My wife has had a wonderful cure. She has recovered her voice after being unable to utter a word for nearly six months.

Griggs—You don't mean it! How did it come about?

Briggs—In the most unexpected way.
We happened to call at a neighbor's where they were playing cards. We thought we might as well take a hand.
What was the result? In less than five minutes my wife was asking in a strong, clear voice, "What's trumps?"

Startling Evidence.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Conunequaled. A recent expression

"I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began tak-a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally

COUNTY COURT.

A special term of County Court was held Wednesday, when Charley Youngblood was charged with presenting a pistol at T. J. Henderson at Mountain Creek. There was also a charge of carrying concealed weapons docketed against him. In the first case Judge Adams fined the defendant $10.00 and costs, and Youngblood confessed judgment. In the second case a nolle prosequi was entered.

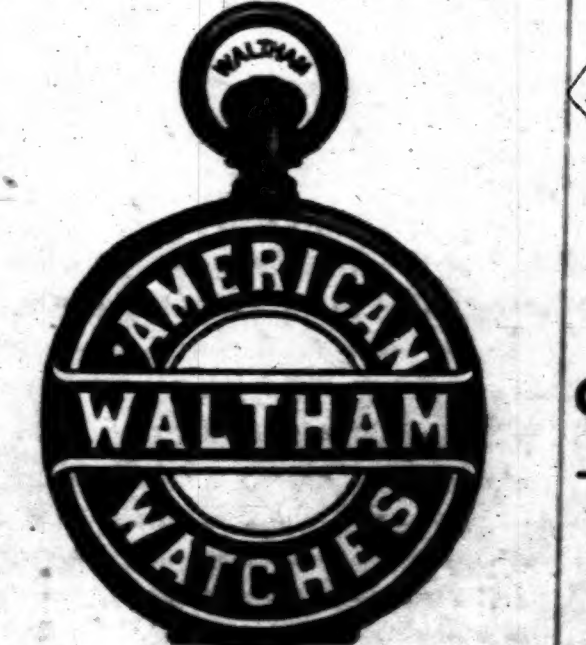

Monday evening Sheriff Morgan and Deputy Smitherman went to Mountain Creek and arrested Youngblood and in default of bail brought him to Clanton. They were too late to catch the train, and as they were anxious to get back to Clanton all three tramped the entire distance.

Protracted Meeting.

The protracted meeting which was commenced at the Baptist church last Sunday is a season of revival and refreshment. Dr. Curry is assisted by Rev. W. M. Blackwelder, D. D., an eloquent divine from Woodlawn, whose popular discourses are highly appreciated by the large congregations which fill the church at every service.

city some way and sell it to a shop for a dollar or two. The Americans do all the manufacturing; Germans do all the hardware business; the French all the silk and goods, and the natives all the business and run the saloons. Besides the archbishops and bishops less than twenty-five priests officiate around the chancel in the great cathedral every day. Somebody must come there to receive the offerings, grant absolution and remissions of sins. This is the largest cathedral

Automobile operators in France becoming more careful as the result of the recent disasters.

The Duke of Argyll has sold his island, in the Hebrides, to the Carthusian monks driven from France.

The Motor Age, of Chicago, has been interviewing the managing editors of the newspapers of that city, with a view of securing their honest opinion as to automobilism and their effect upon the country. With one exception, that of the public opinionist of the Tribune, all the money, advanced was favorable to the motor vehicle.

It is the fate of all despots to meet their own destruction by a fatal disaster. The Committee of Public Safety, when the papacy added the horrors of Inquisition to the usurpation of the sacred of human rights, and aggravated offences by the flagrant immorality of its priests, the tremendous storms avenged the long slumbering and accumulated wrath of centuries, which burst in the Reformation, disrupted her empire, and caused her the loss of three of her provinces.

Two great movements in the Middle Ages contributed to hasten the triumph of religious liberty in Europe. They were the Crusades and the Renaissance. The Crusades, which began in the twelfth century, was kindled by the Serpentine of Peter the Hermit, as he preached a crusade against the "infidel Turks." The purpose of rousing the Holy Sepulchre from the hands of the infidels, suddenly opened into a house where fire has been long smoldering, smothered in its own smoke, the whole suddenly wrapped in a sudden conflagration; a wide and violent conflagration, which consumed the whole.

In addition to these great movements and perhaps as a consequence of them was the spirit of adventure which now broke out simultaneously in Italy and Spain, France and England. Columbus and Henry the Navigator, a Genoese and a Portuguese, were inspired by Columbus, a native of Genoa. Italy, hundreds of adventures, braved the perils of the untraversed seas in search of new lands, or new passages to the East. New continents were discovered, new seas circumnavigated, new continents were discovered. The invention also was quickened, printing, movable types and the manufacture of paper from rags had but recently been perfected. The mariner's compass, the telescope, the general use of gunpowder, the telescope was invented and the heavens explored for new worlds, as the seas for new lands. The whole period was one of unprecedented activity and ferment. Copernicus, by his new system of astronomy, was the first to give new revolutionizing astronomy. All of these things had their effects upon the minds of men. The discovery of the size and shape of the earth, of its relation to other bodies of the universe, the immensity of the heavens, the changes of the systems of worlds in space; the changes of men's ideas as to the centre of the universe and the revelation that it was not the earth, but that the earth was an insignificant member of a system of worlds; the discovery of the uncertainty and instability of things they had been accustomed to regard as established beyond the peradventure of doubt, and led them to expect and compare them with the changes of thought and realms of life. The spirit of skepticism became general and pervaded even the church, and everything seemed to converse upon and conspire toward a single point, until nothing was left of the old world. Men were awakened to free the human mind from the old and the human spirit from the old.

Beginning with the struggle for religious liberty, it ran on to compass the liberty of the whole man and was destined to stop until he was free of all restraint. It was the struggle for the liberty of the conscience, the right of private judgment, political and personal freedom. That the man was not yet, and what shall be to be a new world. The great goal is to be a new world. The great goal is to be a new world. The great goal is to be a new world.

The New York Mall and thinks that the very worst of the said of the current flood of opinion is not what may be implied its origin, though in some cases it may be unpromising enough. The fact that it is not going where migration ought to go—to the land to the sections which are built up or to be built up. It is instead to the States which are becoming crowded, and particularly the great cities, and to manufacturing sections in Pennsylvania and other States where a congested population is already a problem.

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

That watches over our business, that wanders round when the clock has struck ten, that might be said to come around Clanton with a real funny sight I am sure you will see.

Well, was sleeping, the day's work was over, and he slept by his beautiful score. When he was pleasant, his face fairly beamed. In a bright, the baby was screaming.

to Plunkard's we went, Evans muttered in gloom. "How high will it be?" "Ten cents at least, but ten cents will do."

from all appearances we are going to have a very quiet Fourth in part of the country, but there are various preparations being made in different directions, so that the people can go visiting and have a big time.

The protracted meeting at the church was brought to a close Wednesday night. It has been an interesting meeting through good results are confidently expected.

at Sunday afternoon a goodly number went down to the creek on Smith Ferry road to witness the baptism of two new members, the M. E. church, Miss Ada and John Rollins; Bro. Rollins performed the ceremony.

On Wednesday morning the child of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Adams, one of the sweet little ones, whom we had hoped to see grow up in grace, but the Lord has his choicest blossoms in his own good time; may He be with the bereaved parents in this, their hour of trial.

On the 24th of June, Jemison, A. F. & A. M. No. 411, met at the Hall to begin a program long to be remembered.

At 9:30 a. m. Dr. D. W. Williams of Oxford opened the praise-meeting with efficiency after which, with his number of male members, he marched to a near grove where a number of merry people were waiting for the installation of officers, and the laudable address of Dr. Williams, whose words were given attention of all.

After this speech Rev. I. Wind gave a pointed talk after which a prepared dinner was served. In the afternoon the Masons reassembled in the hall to complete the business of the day and soon the Worshipful Master's dismissal closed the masonic number to the other features of the enjoyable day. Many thanks are extended to the committee of arrangements and the general conduct is commendable to all who were present.

Mrs. Cloughton is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hannon, at Dunham. Mrs. Gaslon and two beautiful little children from near Fort Payne are visiting Mrs. R. D. Martin. Messrs. Glover and Ensign lately made a business trip to Plantersville.

Miss Virginia Grace has lately treated her friends to a most delightful entertainment.

Mr. Robert Grace has accepted a better position in Mississippi and moved his family there, to the regret of the many friends made his goodness.

Our old friend, Mrs. Waterworth, and friend, David Vines, her nephew, have moved to their old home near here.

Mr. Jones has brought a beautiful and most charming bride from New Orleans. In a few weeks she has made many friends.

Shep Bearden of Selma has lately visited the "old folks at home" here.

Crumpton Graham's friends regret his departure for his home in Tampa, Fla. Our friend ever managed to make friends by his general ways. "Come again, Crump," is the echo of your many friends' voices.

Our town was saddened last Friday, the 26th, by the sudden death of Mrs. Annie Martin. She had been sick about five days, and was pronounced by her physician convalescing, when she was attacked with something of the nature of a congestive chill, and died in a few hours. She was of a most amiable disposition and a member of the Methodist church. Every respect was shown the family; the stores were closed. Deepest sympathy is extended the devoted husband and all the other members of her sorrowing family. Her sister, Mrs. Herbert, from Riderville, and her brother and wife Tena Jones, are with her family here.

CLANTON, ALA.

In 1653, when New York was first incorporated as a city, by the Dutch West India Company, under the name of the City of Amsterdam in the New Netherlands, it contained a population of about 1000 souls, whereas the New York Sun. At that period the greatest capital of the world was Paris, with a population of about half a million. The population of London and its suburbs was less by a quarter. In the 250 years since then London has risen to the first place among the cities of the world and New York to second place.

American locomotives have received another testimonial in their favor, states the Philadelphia Record. This is from Sir George Whitehouse, manager and chief engineer of the Uganda Railway. He says our engines proved perfectly satisfactory, and were ten per cent. cheaper than the English, and better suited for a mountain railway. It was at hill climbing in Jamaica that American locomotives beat English machines. They were specially designed for the steep grades on the island. On the Uganda road there are twenty-six American and eight English steel viaducts. To such an extent, has the American iron and steel industry invaded the Dark Continent in the face of the competition of all Europe.

It may as well be admitted that college training doesn't teach a man to keep books or to sell goods. What education aims to do is to educate to develop the man, to awaken him to the problems of the world, to widen his horizon. There is no danger that not enough attention shall be given to commercial development. But there is a possibility that the business man may become narrowed to his task and fail to take an interest in the world of ideas about him, reflects the Kansas City Star. Education ought not to prevent a man from acquiring the necessary details of business. And it ought to make him a more valuable citizen. That most successful business men believe this is shown by the fact that they are sending their sons to college.

It is frequently asserted by psychologists that the person who has reached the age of forty-five is incapable of accepting new ideas or of making a radical change in the purposes of life. This assertion is based on the physiological fact that at about that age the physical capacities reach their highest limit, and that from that time expenditure gradually increases upon income. It is evident, however, that psychological development is taken to be synonymous with the physiological, which is by no means the case. It does not follow that, because the body has ceased to grow or because it has reached a period when there is gradual decrease in the physical powers, the mind has also attained its acme of capacity. The instances are too many of men who have continued with unabated mental powers to the age of seventy or even eighty years of age to give warrant to any dogmatic assertion as to the age limit, observes the Christian Register. Many men have reached the fullness of their powers only after sixty, and others continue to gain in influence and even in mental vigor far beyond that age. These are facts of biography and of history, and no scientific theory can gainsay their truth.

Public Opinion prints the following interesting translation from a Berlin journal named Die Woche: The German people have the author of the "Bürgerliche Gesetzbuch" to thank for regulating the rights of the mother. Whereas formerly the law recognized only the father's sovereignty, now, under the head of parental rights, the duties and privileges of both father and mother are clearly defined. The parental right of the mother is, during marriage, the same as that of the father. If the father dies, the mother immediately takes his place. It is no longer required that she have a guardian for her children. The parental right of the mother ends if she marries again, though in that case she may be appointed the guardian of her children. In divorce the guilty party forfeits his or her parental rights. If both are at fault, the sons over six years of age are assigned to the father, the rest of the children to the mother. If the father becomes a criminal and is condemned to at least six months in prison, a guardian must be appointed for the children as long as the marriage holds, but if the marriage is annulled, the mother is given full parental rights, just as if the father were dead.

First in Forty Years.
A dispatch from San Juan, P. R., says: Five cotton gins have arrived from the United States and will be immediately installed. They are the first gins to reach Porto Rico in forty years. The cotton planters of the island now cover 11,000 acres and the area is being increased yearly.

Ozark will have electric lights in the near future.

Gadsden Brick company has been idle several days owing to an accident. The drum to the mill in which the clay is ground burst in some manner, tearing itself to pieces and causing the plant to be shut down until a new one could be ordered. The drum will cost $100 and the cost of time will be very heavy.

New Pumping Station.
The pumping station constructed by the Tennessee company on Village Creek, near Ensley, to supply water for its various industries, is nearly completed. This is a much larger concern than the old one, and will supply three times the amount of water. The supply of water has been a serious question with all the plants at Ensley. This will now be no longer a question to be considered, as the Tennessee Company can supply it in abundance. This station will supply the Semet-Solvay company, the furnaces, steel plant, blooming mill, Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 mines, and the plow factory. All is now complete but the connecting of the pipes.

On the morning of the fourth of July President Roosevelt will send from his Sagamore Hill home at Oyster Bay a message formally opening the Pacific cable to the Philippine Islands. The message will be one of greeting and congratulation to Governor Taft.

Surveyors are running a branch line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad to Pineapple in Wilcox county. The teachers' normal will be held at Albertville all through this week.

The record of the industrial growth of the south for the second quarter of 1903, shows an increase over the corresponding period last year. During the second quarter of 1902 in the thirteen southern states there were 1,164 new industries.

The table for the second quarter of 1903 gives a total of 1,346 new industries for the same thirteen states, or an increase of 172.

Among the most important new industries launched during the past quarter were 208 woodworking plants, 127 mines and quarries, 81 cotton and woolen mills, 31 brick and tile works, 28 canning factories, 66 compresses and gins, 31 flour and grist mills, 77 gas and oil companies, 70 oil mills and refineries, 31 iron working plants, and other large concerns that are using and developing the natural products of the south.

The wonderful development of oil fields can be traced to Louisiana, with twenty-four new natural gas and oil companies, Texas with twenty-eight, Kentucky with six, Tennessee with five and other states scattering.

In the establishment of new flour and grist mills Tennessee leads with seventeen. Tennessee is also in the front rank in new woodworking plants, showing thirty-one for the quarter, while the record for Mississippi, the next in number, is twenty-four. In iron working plants Alabama leads the southern states for the quarter, with Texas second and Tennessee third.

It is also interesting to note that Arkansas put in nineteen of the sixty-six cotton gins and compresses reported, being more than any other state.

Harbor Improvements.
United States Minister Thomas at Batavia, Brazil, reports to the state department that the government has embarked on a scheme for vast harbor works at Rio, involving the building of two and a quarter miles of stone docks. The cost of this work will be $62,000,000, which is to be raised through a lane placed by the Rothschilds. The bonds are to be sold at ninety per cent and bear five per cent interest which is to be secured by dock charges of three per cent on merchandise. In spite of Mr. Thompson's efforts the work has been let to a British firm.

MACHINISTS WANT INCREASE.

May Be a Strike in the U. S. Navy Yards at Washington.

Representatives of the machinists and pattern-makers at the Washington navy yard called upon Secretary Moody and laid before him a complaint regarding the recommendation of the wage board fixing the wages for the machinists in the navy yard. Unless their demands are favorably met the machinists threaten to strike and the pattern-makers will endeavor to secure a congressional investigation. Secretary Moody has taken their demand under advisement.

Messrs. Lewman Bros. have closed the contracts for the commissaries at Locks Nos. 1 and 2, near Demopolis.

ENSLEY STEEL AND WIRE PLANT

Will Start Again When Gadsden Steel Plant Is Finished.

It is reported that the Alabama Steel and Wire Company is making arrangements to open up their Ensley plant within the next month. It is said that G. H. Schuler, who has been hard at work for some time past constructing his steel plant at Gadsden, is soon to return and look after such repairs as are necessary.

The rod works have been closed down a month or two and as they employ nearly a thousand men their opening up again will be hailed with delight.

The Schulers, it is said, will be able to secure from the Ensley steel works such material as they will require for the first few months of operations, after which they hope to be able to supply their rod and wire works from their own plant at Gadsden.

It is believed that there will be no trouble again with these works, as hereafter they will be able to control all the material they want at satisfactory prices.

New Ovens.

Blue prints will shortly be made up for a battery of three hundred coke ovens to be constructed by the Woodward Iron company at Woodward, it is stated, and contractors are waiting to bid on the same. The Woodward already has a large number of ovens near their coal mines in the vicinity of Dolomite, and it is expected that the new ovens will be put up close by those already in operation.

The difficulty in securing material such as brick and stone is delaying the completion of coke ovens now under construction in various parts of the state. The statement is made that by fall there will be sufficient ovens in the state to supply every demand for that product of furnaces in Alabama. At present the monthly receipts of coke are heavy. Coke has been very expensive for some time. The new coke ovens at Flat Top belonging to the Stone-Shellfield company will be in operation in the near future.

Ovens at Empire, in Walker county, are being delayed. Work is progressing nicely on ovens at Battelle, Trussville, Holtz and other points in the state.

Paper Plant for Ensley.

The Barrett Manufacturing company of New Orleans is soon to have one of its managers in Ensley to further plans for the erection of the roofing paper plant, which is to operate in close connection with the Semet-Solvay company.

The latter has been disposing of nearly its entire stock of tar products to New Orleans markets, where it is used in the manufacture of finished roofing. The purpose is to remove the paper manufacturing part of the concern to Ensley, close to the Semet-Solvay plant, thus saving transportation. It is said that the New Orleans plant has been shipping all its paper roofing output to the Birmingham district for the past ten months. This new plant will require several new buildings, and when in operation will employ about fifty men.

The Cane Crop.

The weather during the past week has been good from the cane raisers' standpoint, and rains, combined with high temperature, have greatly promoted the growth of the cane crop. This kind of weather will do much to retrieve the backwardness existing, due to the hitherto unpropitious season, and wherever there is a stand of cane it will be pushed in its development. On the lower coast the cane crop seems to be particularly good. In other parts of the sugar district such advanced conditions can not be reported, but good growing weather will rapidly bring the crop up to the laying-by stage in all parts of the sugar belt.

It is reported that the farmers of north Alabama have harvested the best crop that has been grown in years.

CORNWELL

HEARD FROM.

Is In Mexico and Wants To Come Back and Settle.

Following the letter received by Dr. R. H. Reed from Kossie Todd, written in the city of Mexico on June 19, stating that he had met Captain Cornwell on the street, a letter has been received by a prominent citizen from Captain Cornwell himself. The gentleman who received the letter does not wish to make it public at this time but states that he will probably do so.

Captain Cornwell, the letter states, wishes to return to Bessemer, and says that it is his intention to pay the debtors what is owed to them, dollar for dollar. His familiarity with the affairs of the bank and with the value of the assets, he suggests, would greatly facilitate an early settlement, and he purposes to give his notes for what will still be due depositors. He says that in paying in full, of course, take time but he is yet a young man and there is no reason why he should not pay up.

If the friends of Captain Cornwell can arrange matters as they hope to so that he can return unmolested there seems every possibility that he will again be in Bessemer at a comparatively early date. His present whereabouts are carefully guarded, but he writes that he is well and anxious to get back and straighten matters out.

An interesting fact brought out by his letter is that Captain Cornwell was near at home at the time of the failure of the bank. As previously published he told his wife when leaving home that he was going away for medical treatment. He writes that he went to an infirmary in a neighboring city and was there at the time of the failure. He read the accounts in the papers and has since kept in touch with affairs here.

On reading of the failure and the feeling against him he left the country. He claims that he expected $18,000 from the Chase National bank on the Monday preceding the failure, which would have tided the bank over, but that the bank returned his collateral saying they could not accommodate him.

Cut To Pieces.

Well Known Young Man Meets Death Under Wheels of Train.

George Houston, a well-known young man of Jonesboro, was run over Thursday night by an Alabama Great Southern train and instantly killed, his body being mangled beyond recognition.

From the best evidence to be secured, Houston was lying on the track. As the train was pulling out from Bessemer at rather high speed, it was impossible for the engineer to stop, for he was only a short distance from the man when he saw him. The engine and several cars passed over the body, and dragged it for at least fifty yards before the train could be brought to a standstill.

News has been received of the killing of Frank Lowd at LaGrange, Tex., at the hands of W. E. McWilliams, of Tusculum, the killing having been entirely justifiable.

The Affidavit Man.

J. Wilburn Haralson, against whom there are five indictments charging conspiracy to hold in peonage, was arrested at Columbus, Ga.

The indictments allege that Haralson while in the employ of George D. Cosby, in Tallapoosa county, entered into a conspiracy with other persons to hold negroes in peonage. Haralson was known as the "affidavit man." He is said to have made the affidavits against the negroes so held.

According to the latest returns there are more than 200,000 miles of main track and 35,000 miles of double track and sidings in America; making in all more than 40 per cent of the railroad mileage of the world. This, if divided up among the people per capita, would give each person something like 20 feet of private railroad track.

It is semi-officially announced from Washington that an extension of the Memphis and Charleston railway, controlled by the Southern, will be built from Stevenson, Ala., to Chattanooga. The terminus of the road's own tracks is now at Stevenson and from that point its trains run into Chattanooga over the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad under a lease. The traffic over the latter line has grown to such proportions that it is now difficult to operate the trains of the two roads. The Southern has adopted a survey for the extension which embraces the tunneling of Lookout mountain, as already announced. The proposed improvement will cost about $5,000,000.

The furnaces of the Alabama Consolidation company have been blown out and shut down in order to make the necessary connections with the 300-ton furnace recently completed. While the men were busy turning in a stream of water to cool the fire and blow her out an unusual amount of gas accumulated, which caused an explosion, and the bell was blown out at the top of the stack.

STATUS OF THE PASTOR.

DO NOT WISH TO BE YOUNG MINISTERS' WIVES.

The Methodist Young Women's Association holds a possible Fifth Avenue. The Doctor Has Taken Precedence.

There is in this age of material progress a large race after of the same month in 1902. It has become apparent that the minister of the gospel, as he was in the past, is no longer a man and recognized thirty years ago, has been displaced. The doctor of divinity in the worldly sense of sentiment. Four women attend church services to each other to be found there, but this general observation holds good regarding the appearance of the minister.

The husband-hunting young woman and her determined and ambitious mother the young minister of the gospel holds a possible fifth place. Today Samuel M. Merrill, of the Episcopal church, was called to substantiate the general impression of these assertions. As to the romantic side of the preacher, however, he holds that it was the romance of the man himself, says the romance of his cloth, that where the position was considered.

In the middle west especially there are hundreds of thousands of observations of the churches of a generation ago who recall when frequently there was consideration of a married clergyman in the filling of a pulpit vacancy would cause a faction of mothers with marriageable daughters to enter such vigorous protest as some to split the church. The position of most of the sober-sided members of the flock would be against the engagement of a "boy" preacher, while certain of the mothers with daughters eligible to matrimonial adventure would find the young candidate especially "eloquent" or "spiritual" or "sympathetic." This condition prevailed particularly in those churches which made their own votive choice of the minister.

Today, save in the smaller rural churches off the railroads and away from touch with the great money centers of the country, the question of the young preacher was never less pronounced of factions.

When the young preacher was the mark of especial favor with ambitious mothers, there were fewer representatives of the profession to draw from in rural communities. As a rule four preachers could find livings of some kind in a town that could support perhaps only two doctors. There would be one druggist, perhaps, a cashier in the one bank of the place, a railroad station agent and a postmaster. The lawyer of the place could be upon accordingly this pinkings, and most likely already married. Beyond these the choice of son-in-law would lie in the grocery and dry goods stores, hardware store and the coal dealer's office.

Today one not familiar with the conditions in the smaller towns of the country would be surprised to know how sharply they are reflecting the life of the cities, said a traveler who has made observations in the country towns of the middle west especially. "For instance, there is scarcely a wealthy man in one of these places who has not made his ventures upon the boards of trade and the stock exchanges of the big cities."

He can talk about millions with all the natural ease that comes to Wall Street frequenters. The seeming ease with which promoters and corn kings and wheat kin have made fortunes has impressed the man in the country town quite as strongly as the impression has been marked in the population of the cities, and to talk to him now of a local man whose claims to wealth are in a patty $15,000 or $20,000, is to provoke a smile of patient consideration.

In general, too, the whole country has increased in wealth, and as this has come about, and the intricacies of civilization have multiplied, room has been made for more of the professions in the small towns, and nearly every one of these has profited more than has the ministry. It seems in these small places that as more money is accumulated, which ought to go to the struggling ministers already in the town, the disposition is, instead of collecting to the good of those already there, to build two or three more debt-laden churches and create a half living for two or three more preachers.

It is pretty well recognized that the worldly lot of the preacher in the small town is not to be envied by any young woman who is not as much wedded to the cause of his mission as he is himself. All else being equal, it is pretty certain that the doctor and the registered pharmacist and the bank book-keeper will make the better salary, and when you consider that so many wives of ministers who have not taken a degree are denied the use of the appellation of "doctor," such as the wife of the dentist over the drug store may use when speaking of her husband—why, is it any wonder that the preacher isn't cutting much matrimonial ice?

In Chicago, recognizing that a mother with daughters is entitled in some way to carry that worldly desire to see them married even into the church, it may be remarked with surprise that just to that extent the minister is worldly. Of the men who have succeeded in Chicago in

The socialists in this country constitute one of those small parties
that hang on without steady growth
to the two great parties of the country with which nearly every sensible citizen prefers to act, because
one can thereby accomplish something. In the small parties nothing can be accomplished, or rather
has been accomplished, of great value in the history of this country.
The Republican party stands today
for privilege and aristocracy, and
the privileged classes support it,
and it is strong in the sinews of
war. Its campaign funds run up to almost fabulous sums. The Democratic party is the party of the masses. It stands for liberty without license, and for the rights of the many. In the one or the other the sensible voter can find a rule to be found, and there is for that reason little room in this country for small parties. There is no room for socialism. Whatever is lawful
and desirable can be obtained through the Democratic party.—

When the American farmer rises
early in the morning it is to look over broad and fertile acres that are
his own. When he goes forth it is to fields that no human being can lawfully step upon without his consent. When he gathers and garners the harvest he stores up what,
in a vast majority of cases, no greedy
and rapacious landlord can take
from him. It is all his. The proceeds of it are to clothe and feed
him and his family and educate his children; to be the support of his old age and the heritage of his posterity. Looked at from every point of view, it is doubtful if there is another human being under the heavens who has more cause for carrying a light heart and a contented mind, for regarding the past
with satisfaction and the future with hope, than the American farmer.—

SUNDAY NIGHT'S SERMON.

The sermon on Sunday night at the Baptist church was perhaps the most impressive that has been delivered by the Rev. W. M. Blackwelder during this series of meetings. His theme was the separation of the good from the wicked—
the sheep from the goats—on the day of judgment.

Rev. W. M. Blackwelder first
read from the 16th chapter of St.
Luke, commencing with the 19th
verse. "There was a certain rich man who was clothed in purple and
fine linen, and fared sumptuously
every day." He then read from Matthew, 25th chapter, 31st verse:
"When the Son of Man shall come
in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall he sit upon the throne of His glory, and
before Him shall be gathered all nations; and He shall separate them
one from another, as a shepherd
divideth his sheep from the goats."

From these two passages of scriptures Bro. Blackwelder preached a powerful sermon. He first called attention to the awful solemnity of the day of judgment when all nations shall be gathered together before the judgment seat—when you and I must answer for that
which we have done in the flesh
and in the body. That day will be when time shall be no more. But we will have to answer for that
which we do now; our influence, whether for good or bad, lives after
we are dead. Our day of judgment must necessarily be when the fruits
of time are developed. That is reasonable, we cannot be judged
until time is no more. For instance: the teachings of Ingersoll, Voltaire and all of the enemies of God in the past still live, and others who may come in the future—all have to be responsible for their teachings. Those who have gone before, and those who are yet to come, will have to answer at the judgment day for the influence they
have exerted upon others, and each
and all will have to account for the
influences they have set in motion.
Abraham lives to-day, Paul lives
to-day, Spurgeon lives to-day, and others will live in the future, and
as our influence is directed for good God will give us the reward due us.

God wants us to get our hearts
filled with correct notions of eternity. Sometime you and I must stand before the bar of God and will have to answer for that which we do in our lives here. There will be one test of human character—
there are only two classes, the good
and the bad—and these are represented by the sheep and the goats.

Here and now men are divided into many classes—religious, social,
and on other artificial lines, but after all it is the character of our lives which has to be answered for at the day of judgment. The great distinction can best be gauged by comparing our lives with that of Christ
—are we living in accordance with His precepts and examples. The day of judgment is the day of general classification; the day when the fruits of man's influence in this world must be weighed and balanced; all must stand before the bar at
that day and answer for that which they have done in this world
whether it is good or bad.

There are many impediments that intervene in the good intentions of Christians trying to carry out the commands of Christ. Tares will come, but Christians know that the tares may be uprooted. There is another class who believe that as
the judgment day is delayed, they need not fear the day, but they will have to meet the consequences
of sin and of their ungodly life.
"Then," as Jesus says it that little world haunts us up to the judgment day.

I am not theorizing or speculating to-night. Jesus shows us two classes—the sheep and the goats.
Those in this life who have consecrated themselves to Christ, those who have worked out their salvation, will stand out at last—the sheep. Their character reaches its perfection and love its sweetest repose. "Come, ye blessed of my Father, the fullness of the godhead
is open to you, open through all the ceaseless ages of eternity. Jesus Christ guaranteed that before the foundation of the world. We shall be joint heirs with God and Jesus Christ.

Then there will be the class on the left. O think of that awful day when the dread sentence is pronounced: Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I know you not.

Children's Day at New Salem.

New Salem Sunday-school, under the direction and able management of the worthy superintendent,
Bro. Felix Eiland, celebrated Children's Day exercises in the presence of a large congregation last Saturday, June 29.

Rev. S. O. Y. Ray, Associate
Editor of the Southern and Alabama Baptist, preached an excellent sermon at 11 a.m. Rev. S.
M. Adams addressed the school at 3 p.m. He spoke some gracious words, full of comfort and encouragement for the faithful worker.

We had a fine dinner, a good program exceedingly well render-
ed. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves, especially the pastor
and superintendent, as they each received a real nice present from
the school in recognition of their services. Collection for Bible fund amounted to $5.00. The ladies of the church and community deserve
much praise for such a bountiful supply of things good to eat.

Shoults.

Well, it seems like we have had enough rain the past week to make two crops; I guess we needed all
of it on this crop or we would not have got it, the good Lord knows best what we need. The weather has cleared off and we are going to handle that grass to a finish.

Mr. John Ellis was first to report
a cotton bloom in this section. I guess I'll be next. I can't keep from bragging on Poverty Ridge
for good crops.

A wagon load of folks went to see the twin pines Sunday.
The ice cream supper at Mr.
Merk Smithman's was enjoyed by all present Saturday night.

Miss Ida Shoults has recently returned home, but her thoughts
goes back to Bessemer.

Mr. C. F. Shoults is putting in solid time up on the M. & O. R. R., Sundays.

Mr. C. W. Shoults is the general manager of the basket dinner on the 4th down at Tempey, known best as Fifteen. I guess the 4th will catch some of us destroying
hay. We learn that we are to have a singing school taught by Mr. Veazey of Mulberry, commencing the third Sunday in July.

I have heard it said that the devil stayed in dark places. This must be true, for the boys go down in the ivy thick below the church spring to drink their wildcat liquor. Boys, please don't do this any more. BIG LK.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

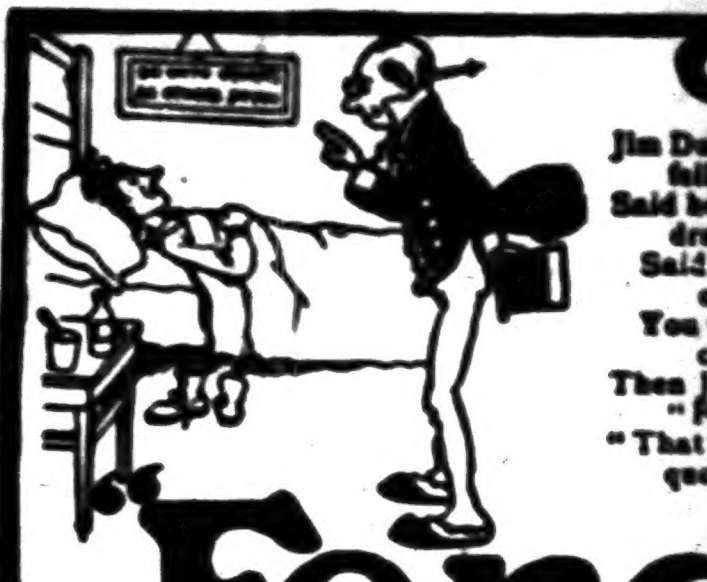

Washington, D. C., June 29, 1903
Last week I told the readers of this correspondence about the Hon. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, the man who will be next floor leader of
the democracy in the national House of Representatives. I will now tell them about the man who will be his chief opponent in the democratic caucus, and who, though
he is still an avowed candidate for
the honor, practically concedes his defeat, and that is the Hon. Champ Clark, of Missouri. The most of the people of the country know Champ
Clark, not alone because of his work
in the congress of the nation, and he has been in that body about ten or twelve years, but because of his work in the press of the country as
the contributor of a weekly letter anent current political events always written in a reminiscent manner and very entertaining. Champ Clark is one of the most picturesque figures
in political life to day. He leads the democratic avil chorus. He is the knocker-in-chief of the democratic minority in the national House of Representatives, and when he gets to
his feet he does hit the republicans
some of the hardest blows ever administered to them by any speaker
on the democratic side of the House.
He has a way of telling the truth on
the republican party that is very attractive to the democrats of the country. It is homespun truth told in an old-fashioned homelofy manner that is decidedly refreshing because it is so seldom we hear it.
When in action, Champ Clark needs
more floor space than any man in the House. He flings his great long arms around like sails, and he pounds
his desk like a deep water two gallon baptist preacher. The only trouble with Champ Clark as a leaver would be the fact that he is too uncompromising. He hits hard and tells the truth, but he does it in such a manner as to excite the animosity
of the opposition, leaves sore
spots that never heal, and does not convince the republicans of the righteousness of his cause. When a man is honest, even though he be
a republican, he is open to conviction in many matters, but if he is insulted and his feelings hurt by the man who makes the speech, and
who, otherwise, would convince him
of his error, he thinks of nothing
but revenge, and he gives the man
no credit for his unanswerable argument and his intellectuality.

That is the trouble with Champ
Clark. He makes enemies for himself and his party by his speeches
and does his cause no good. Therefore, he would not make a good leader for the minority party in the congress, and his friends and admirers knowing this have chosen John Sharp Williams in his stead. There is no better man and no better democrat in congress than Champ Clark,
but he is to indiscreet by his vehemence to be a successful leader, and
hence he will not be chosen by the democrats when they meet in caucus
next November. There is another reason why Champ Clark is not the popular man for leadership. He seems to have an especial antipathy
to the so-called gold democrats who
and he never loses an opportunity
to roast them to a brown turn when he is on his feet in the House. That not only does no good, but it antagonizes the element that we want to come back and affiliate with the party in the next campaign. They are as good democrats as anybody on
the tariff and trust questions, which will be uppermost in the next campaign, and the only question on which they are at variance with the dominant faction of the party is on
the money question, and all concede
that it will not be one of the issues in the campaign next year. The bi-metallists have won their contention that more money was needed to do the business of the country on
in order to bring prosperity to the nation, because there is to-day one-fourth more money in circulation
than there was in 1896, but it came
in gold on account of the gold discoveries in Alaska, the failure of crops in the old countries, and an avalanche of money and gold placed
in circulation during the Spanish-American war. With the money question eliminated those people will come back and vote the Democratic ticket next year.

The socialists in this country constitute one of those small parties
that hang on without steady growth
to the two great parties of the country with which nearly every sensible citizen prefers to act, because
one can thereby accomplish something. In the small parties nothing
can be accomplished, or rather
has been accomplished, of great
value in the history of this country.
The Republican party stands today
for privilege and aristocracy, and
the privileged classes support it,
and it is strong in the sinews of
war. Its campaign funds run up
to almost fabulous sums. The Democratic party is the party of
the masses. It stands for liberty without license, and for the rights
of the many. In the one or the other the sensible voter can as a rule be found, and there is for that reason little room in this country
for small parties. There is no room
for socialism. Whatever is lawful
and desirable can be obtained
through the Democratic party.—

When the American farmer rises
early in the morning it is to look
over broad and fertile acres that are
his own. When he goes forth it is
to fields that no human being can
lawfully step upon without his consent. When he gathers and garners the harvest he stores up what,
in a vast majority of cases, no greedy
and rapacious landlord can take
from him. It is all his. The proceeds of it are to clothe and feed
him and his family and educate his
children; to be the support of his
old age and the heritage of his posterity. Looked at from every point of view, it is doubtful if there is
another human being under the
heavens who has more cause for
carrying a light heart and a contented mind, for regarding the past
with satisfaction and the future with
hope, than the American farmer.—

The sermon on Sunday night at
the Baptist church was perhaps the
most impressive that has been delivered by the Rev. W. M. Blackwelder during this series of meetings. His theme was the separation of the good from the wicked—
the sheep from the goats—on the
day of judgment.

Rev. W. M. Blackwelder first
read from the 16th chapter of St.
Luke, commencing with the 19th
verse. "There was a certain rich
man who was clothed in purple and
fine linen, and fared sumptuously
every day." He then read from Matthew, 25th chapter, 31st verse:
"When the Son of Man shall come
in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall he sit
upon the throne of His glory, and
before Him shall be gathered all
nations; and He shall separate them
one from another, as a shepherd
divideth his sheep from the goats."

From these two passages of scriptures Bro. Blackwelder preached a powerful sermon. He first called attention to the awful solemnity of the day of judgment when all nations shall be gathered together before the judgment seat—when
you and I must answer for that
which we have done in the flesh
and in the body. That day will be when time shall be no more. But
we will have to answer for that
which we do now; our influence,
whether for good or bad, lives after
we are dead. Our day of judgment
must necessarily be when the fruits
of time are developed. That is reasonable, we cannot be judged
until time is no more. For instance: the teachings of Ingersoll, Voltaire and all of the enemies of God in the past still live, and others who may come in the future—all
have to be responsible for their
teachings. Those who have gone before, and those who are yet to
come, will have to answer at the
judgment day for the influence they
have exerted upon others, and each
and all will have to account for the
influences they have set in motion.
Abraham lives to-day, Paul lives
to-day, Spurgeon lives to-day, and
others will live in the future, and
as our influence is directed for good
God will give us the reward due us.
God wants us to get our hearts
filled with correct notions of eternity. Sometime you and I must stand before the bar of God and
will have to answer for that which
we do in our lives here. There will
be one test of human character—
there are only two classes, the good
and the bad—and these are represented by the sheep and the goats.

Here and now men are divided
into many classes—religious, social,
and on other artificial lines, but after all it is the character of our lives
which has to be answered for at the
day of judgment. The great distinction can best be gauged by comparing our lives with that of Christ
—are we living in accordance with His precepts and examples. The day of judgment is the day of general classification; the day when the fruits of man's influence in this world must be weighed and balanced; all must stand before the bar at
that day and answer for that which
they have done in this world
whether it is good or bad.

There are many impediments that
intervene in the good intentions of Christians trying to carry out the commands of Christ. Tares will come, but Christians know that the
tares may be uprooted. There is another class who believe that as
the judgment day is delayed, they
need not fear the day, but they
will have to meet the consequences
of sin and of their ungodly life.
"Then," as Jesus says it that little word haunts us up to the judgment
day.

I am not theorizing or speculating to-night. Jesus shows us two classes—the sheep and the goats.
Those in this life who have consecrated themselves to Christ, those
who have worked out their salvation, will stand out at last—the
sheep. Their character reaches its perfection and love its sweetest repose. "Come, ye blest of my Father, the fullness of the godhead
is open to you, open through all the
ceaseless ages of eternity. Jesus Christ guaranteed that before the foundation of the world. We shall be joint heirs with God and Jesus Christ.

Then there will be the class on the left. O think of that awful day
when the dread sentence is pronounced: Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I know you not.

Children's Day at New Salem.

New Salem Sunday-school, under the direction and able management of the worthy superintendent,
Bro. Felix Eiland, celebrated Children's Day exercises in the presence of a large congregation last Saturday, June 29.

Rev. S. O. Y. Ray, Associate
Editor of the Southern and Alabama Baptist, preached an excellent sermon at 11 a.m. Rev. S.
M. Adams addressed the school at 3 p.m. He spoke some gracious
words, full of comfort and encouragement for the faithful worker.

We had a fine dinner, a good program exceedingly well render-
ed. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves, especially the pastor
and superintendent, as they each
received a real nice present from
the school in recognition of their
services. Collection for Bible fund
amounted to $5.00. The ladies of the church and community deserve
much praise for such a bountiful
supply of things good to eat.

Shoults.

Well, it seems like we have had
enough rain the past week to make
two crops; I guess we needed all
of it on this crop or we would not
have got it, the good Lord knows
best what we need. The weather has cleared off and we are going to
handle that grass to a finish.

Mr. John Ellis was first to report
a cotton bloom in this section. I guess I'll be next. I can't keep
from bragging on Poverty Ridge
for good crops.

A wagon load of folks went to see the twin pines Sunday.

The ice cream supper at Mr.
Merk Smitherman's was enjoyed by all present Saturday night.

Miss Ida Shoults has recently returned home, but her thoughts
goes back to Bessemer.

Mr. C. F. Shoults is putting in solid time up on the M. & O. R. R., Sundays.

Mr. C. W. Shoults is the general manager of the basket dinner on
the 4th down at Tempey, known
best as Fifteen. I guess the 4th
will catch some of us destroying
hay. We learn that we are to have a singing school taught by Mr. Vezay of Mulberry, commencing the third Sunday in July.

I have heard it said that the devil
stayed in dark places. This must
be true, for the boys go down in the ivy thicket below the church
spring to drink their wildcat
liquor. Boys, please don't do this any more. Big Ike.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, D. C., June 29, 1903
Last week I told the readers of this
correspondence about the Hon. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, the
man who will be next floor leader of
the democracy in the national
House of Representatives. I will
now tell them about the man who
will be his chief opponent in the
democratic caucus, and who, though
he is still an avowed candidate for
the honor, practically concedes his defeat, and that is the Hon. Champ Clark, of Missouri. The most of the people of the country know Champ
Clark, not alone because of his work
in the congress of the nation, and
he has been in that body about ten
or twelve years, but because of his
work in the press of the country as
the contributor of a weekly letter
anent current political events always
written in a reminiscent manner and
very entertaining. Champ Clark is
one of the most picturesque figures
in political life to day. He leads the democratic anvil chorus. He is the knocker-in-chief of the democratic minority in the national House of Representatives, and when he gets to
his feet he does hit the republicans
some of the hardest blows ever administered to them by any speaker
on the democratic side of the House.
He has a way of telling the truth on
the republican party that is very
attractive to the democrats of the
country. It is homespun truth told in an old-fashioned homelike manner that is decidedly refreshing because it is so seldom we hear it.
When in action, Champ Clark needs
more floor space than any man in
the House. He flings his great long arms around like flails, and he pounds
his desk like a deep water two gallon baptist preacher. The only trouble with Champ Clark as a leader would be the fact that he is too
uncompromising. He hits hard and
tells the truth, but he does it in such a manner as to excite the animosity
of the opposition, leaves sore
spots that never heal, and does not
convince the republicans of the
righteousness of his cause. When
a man is honest, even though he be
a republican, he is open to conviction in many matters, but if he is
insulted and his feelings hurt by the
man who makes the speech, and
who, otherwise, would convince him
of his error, he thinks of nothing
but revenge, and he gives the man
no credit for his unanswerable argument and his intellectuality.

That is the trouble with Champ
Clark. He makes enemies for himself and his party by his speeches
and does his cause no good. Therefore, he would not make a good
leader for the minority party in the
congress, and his friends and admirers knowing this have chosen John Sharp Williams in his stead. There
is no better man and no better democrat in congress than Champ Clark,
but he is to indelible by his vehem-
ence to be a successful leader, and
hence he will not be chosen by the
democrats when they meet in caucus
next November. There is another reason why Champ Clark is not the
popular man for leadership. He
seems to have an especial antipathy
and he never loses an opportunity
to roast them to a brown turn when he is on his feet in the House. That
not only does no good, but it antag-
onizes the element that we want to come back and affiliate with the party
in the next campaign. They are
as good democrats as anybody on
the tariff and trust questions, which
will be uppermost in the next campaign, and the only question on
which they are at variance with the
dominant faction of the party is on
the money question, and all concede
that it will not be one of the issues in the campaign next year. The bimetallists have won their contention that more money was needed to do the business of the country on
in order to bring prosperity to the
nation, because there is to-day one-
fourth more money in circulation
than there was in 1896, but it came
in gold on account of the gold discoveries in Alaska, the failure of
crops in the old countries, and an
avalanche of money and gold placed
in circulation during the Spanish-American war. With the money question eliminated those people will come back and vote the Democratic
ticket next year.

After the program of both schools was finished, we had a lecture by Rev. N. A. Dobbs. He lectured to the parents first of the duties of them to go with their children to Sabbath school. And then he lectured to the children on the importance of Sabbath-schools and obeying their parents. He accredited his life of 77 years to the honoring of his father and mother. He made a lasting impression on both old and young, and we hope that his days may be prolonged, that he may go about doing good until the Master shall say enough done, and then be transplanted with loved ones on the other shore. We commend W. J. Vinson and L. Billingsley for their faithfulness as superintendents. The day was happily spent, and everybody was dismissed with a smile on their face.

CREOSOTE WORKS COMPLETE WRECK

Louisville & Nashville Road Sustains Heavy Loss at West Pascagoula.

The creosote works of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company at West Pascagoula were destroyed by fire Monday morning, caused by the dropping of a red hot bolt by some mechanics who were working on an elevated oil tank. The bolt fell into the tank and the explosion occurred and the workmen barely escaped with their lives.

The fire companies from Moss Point hastened to the scene with two engines and seven tug boats added their streams, but the fire was so hot that it could not be checked. The whole structure was burned, together with 23,000 barrels of oil, several cars and much valuable lumber, creosoted or ready for the creosoting process; also the section house and cottages occupied by the employees of the railroad and of the works.

The rails of the road were twisted into circles covering four hundred yards and all traffic was suspended. Even the ground was saturated with creosote and burned fiercely. The total damage is estimated at $250,000. Traffic was not resumed until 10 o'clock at night.

Truck Farmers Happy.
The truck farming industry is proving a bonanza for the farmers along the line of the Illinois Central road. Prices for all products have been much higher than anticipated on account of the lively competition with Texas shipping points.

During the week, Crystal Springs shipped 102 car loads of vegetables, principally tomatoes, and since the beginning of the season the total movement from this point has been 593 car loads, with the end not yet in sight. On one day a solid train load of tomatoes was shipped. The crop has been so large this year and the demand for shipping material so heavy that a box famine was the result.

Gallman also reports heavy shipments, especially of tomatoes, forty car loads having been forwarded to northern points.

Filed Protest.

Vice-President A. B. Andrews, of the Southern railway, has filed a protest with the Mississippi railroad commission against the increase in the assessment of the system, and asks for a hearing to present reasons why the increase should not be made. The main line of the Southern was raised from $8,000 to $9,000 per mile. The Mobile and Ohio main line was raised from $9,500 to $12,000 per mile, and the branches from $6,500 to $7,000 per mile. The Alabama Great Southern was raised from $13,000 to $15,000 per mile. Mr. Andrews points out that the recent floods and washouts on the Southern, and the strike on the Mobile and Ohio and high water at St. Louis have greatly reduced the prospective net earnings of the system for the fiscal year.

After the Greek Letter Societies.

Mr. W. D. Conn, of Corinth, a former student of the University of Mississippi, is authority for the statement that at the next session of the legislature a strong effort will be made to secure the passage of a bill abolishing the Greek letter fraternities at the university.

A similar attempt was made at the legislative session of 1900, but the bill did not secure consideration, and it seems that the opponents of the Greek letter societies are determined to push the campaign until it is brought squarely before the legislature for consideration.

Thousands Are Idle.

In the cotton industry as a result of dear cotton distress is increasing. All the mills at Aston-Under-Lyne, a manufacturing center six miles north-west of this place, are now closed temporarily. Thousands are already idle. It is feared other mills will close, causing widespread sufferings in working men circles.

Carrollton wants a better school for the town. At a meeting of the citizens held a few days ago, it was decided to issue bonds for not less than $2,000 nor more than $2,500 for the purpose of building a commodious school building with all modern conveniences and a city hall in connection. A committee has been appointed to go before the town council and have them order an election upon the question.

"MUM" IS THE WORD

Post Office Matters to Be Kept Quiet Hereafter.

A Washington dispatch says: The postoffice investigation is to be brought to an end by the stragglers and it will be up to congress to expose those guilty of irregularities in high circles whom this administration is disposed to leave severely alone because of future political consequences involved. This is the present plan of the administration. Postmaster General Payne summoned his four assistants into his private office and announced to them by order of the president that no further information bearing in the slightest on the postoffice investigation should be given out to the newspapers. They were instructed to give all clerks in their respective departments the benefit of this information with the further instruction that any breach of these instructions will be considered sufficient cause to warrant the summary dismissal of those so offended.

For weeks James S. Clarkson, T. C. Platt and other professional politicians have been urging the president to bring the investigation to a close, and evidence has been furnished that their advice is to be heeded and that the uncovering of rascals is to be hushed up for the present at least. Ever since Postmaster General Payne announced that there would be no investigation of General Bristow's report, which charged former higher republican officials with official irregularities it has been apparent that this investigation which President Roosevelt announced with much gusto would go from bottom to top is to be brought to a close as soon as possible.

Mum is the word in the postoffice department from now on. Mr. Payne has decreed that he shall do all the talking, and even he has his orders from the president to keep his mouth shut. Only the president can officially give out the postoffice news, and that means that there will be nothing doing save the arrest of two or three of the wrong-doers who were detected weeks ago, and whose cases are now pending before the grand jury here and in New York. Republican corruptionists with influence will go scott free in the opinion in Washington.

Fourth Assistant General Bristow said Tuesday that he did not know when to expect a completion of the investigation.

Mr. Bristow is going to Maine to spend part of his vacation fishing as soon as the investigation is over, but this may not be until late in the summer.

TONS OF GROFF FASTENERS

Found in the Milwaukee Postoffice.

Extra Mail Boxes.

Evidence bearing upon the postal investigation came to light in the Milwaukee postoffice Monday. Stored away in one corner of the basement is a big pile of Groff fasteners that were sent to Milwaukee for some unknown reason and without requisition about fourteen years ago.

There are two and a quarter tons of the fasteners in the basement of the federal building which will probably never be used unless they are shipped to Washington. None of them have been used since the day they were received. They came during the early years of the late Postmaster George W. Porth's term of office. No one ordered them so far as it has been possible to ascertain. There was no use for them. There are fifteen hundred sets of fasteners.

There is also stored in the basement of the federal building a lot of galvanized iron mail boxes that are made in Michigan. These were received about two years ago without requisition.

State Mill Closed.

The cotton mill at Speiglers, belonging to the state of Alabama, will be closed down. The high price of cotton makes it hard for them to make money out of the enterprise, and the mill will be closed down, at least till September 1, and perhaps longer. The convicts that are now employed there will be used elsewhere.

A Virtue of Necessity.

Governor Beckham has determined to take advantage of the necessity for keeping state troops at Jackson, Breathitt county, by making that place the scene of the annual camp of instruction of all soldiers of the Second regiment of the Kentucky national guard.

This will save the state considerable, as the camp of instruction is especially necessary this year in advance of the combined maneuvers of the department of the lakes, which is to be held in this state in October next.

Birmingham is to have an automobile club.

The charcoal furnace of the Southern Car and Foundry company at Gadsden has been sold. The names of the purchasers have not been given out.

There were 1500 baskets of tomatoes and 500 baskets of peaches shipped from Evergreen last Wednesday. Growers say they are receiving a good price.

The depot of the Western of Alabama railway at Auburn was struck by lightning Friday and burned to the ground.

THE SHAMROCK III

Promises to Prove the Most Dangerous of Lipton's Challengers.

Thomas Lipton's new cup challenger, Shamrock III, was given its first test in American waters Saturday in an informal trial with Shamrock I of Sandy Hook. In the first ten miles of a 15-mile beat to windward in a light air, the new boat beat the old one about ten minutes, and in a run of fifteen miles to leeward, nine minutes. There was a light, gentle sea and the new challenger slipped cleanly over, making little fuss under her bow.

Taking into consideration the assertion of English yachtsmen that Shamrock I is faster in a thirty-mile course than it ever was, and fully as much faster than Shamrock II, the new boat's first performance on this side of the Atlantic marks it as probably the most dangerous challenger Sir Thomas has brought over. In a light air and smooth water, it showed itself to be very fast. The chief purpose of the trial was to stretch the sails and resume the tuning.

Another Death at Jackson.

In a feud fight Saturday night near Daisy Dell, Breckin county, Hiram Barnett was killed and John H. Hecker and Jos. Hecker were seriously wounded. The men, with Samuel and Silas Burnett, met at the home of Miss Lelia Burnett, niece of Burns Fitzpatrick, who was the only juror against Curtis Jett. While discussing the course of Jett Fitzpatrick, John H. Hecker, the friend of Miss Burns, resented what was said and all began shooting. There've been no arrests and no one can tell who fired the shots taking effect.

Canal Discussion.

The state department has received a dispatch from Minister Boudpre at Bogota saying that the canal discussion had been opened in the Colombian house by a representative opposed to the canal treaty who began by calling for documents relating to the treaty. The government objected on the ground that it was not ready to present the treaty to the house, but would do so later. The government's position was sustained by a vote of 38 to 5.

FATHER AND SON SHOT.

Possession of a Dog Causes the Fatal Affair.

Set and Al. Bryant, father and son, were fatally shot Saturday morning near Albany, Ga., by J. S. Barfield.

The Bryants are saw mill operators and Barfield is a prominent farmer. It is said that misunderstanding grew out of the disputed possession of a dog. It is understood that ill-feeling has existed between the two families for a considerable time.

Constitutional.

Tennessee's supreme court has held the Adams law passed at the last session of the legislature to be constitutional.

The act is a temperance measure and provides for the abolition of saloons in all towns having a population of 5000 or under upon a submission of the question to popular vote.

Only eight towns in the state are exempt from its operation.

Jefferson county's coroner had four deaths to investigate Sunday. Fred Malish was found dead on the track at New Castle, mangled by a train, but it is known he was robbed of $50. John Brashier was found dead in a barber's chair at Avondale; heart failure. Two colored women died, one having been shot in a row.

A convention has been called by the permanent improvement committee of the Tombigbee river, to be held at Vienna, Ala., Tuesday, June 30. The convention will have for its object the permanent navigability of the river, and will memorialize congress to secure a channel depth of six feet the year round.

River Commission Reports.

The report of the Mississippi river commission has been forwarded to Washington today, and not until it is received and approved by the secretary of war will the contents be known. It is said, however, that of the allotment of $2,000,000 for levee purposes, Louisiana has been given the greatest apportionment; Mississippi comes next then Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky.

The battle flag of the Magnolia cadets, Fourteenth Alabama regiment, has been added to the state's relics. A fight is now being waged in Coffee county on the removal of the court house from Elba to Enterprise.

W. S. George, one of the suspects in the Birmingham union ticket office robbery, was released on preliminary examination.

Rev. Henry Kelsey, pastor of the Fourth Congregational church of Hartford, Conn., has been tendered the presidency of the Talladega college.

The academy of the Visitation at Mobile held its seventieth commencement last Tuesday.

ABDUCTION THWARTED

Alabama City Girl Stolen But Her Abductors Captured
and One Killed.

Gus Steadman was shot and killed in Alabama City Saturday afternoon by Policeman N. F. Jarrard and A. N. Burns while he was attempting to escape arrest. John Steadman had kidnapped Mable McKnight, a 13-year-old girl under promise of marriage and carried her to the woods and placed her in company with his brother, Gus Steadman, and a lewd woman named Sue Harvey of Chattanooga.

John Steadman met the girl while she was going to work at the cotton factory and forcibly took her against her will. Officers went in pursuit and overtook them. They were ordered to halt. Gus Steadman ran and attempted to draw a pistol. When both of them fired and Gus fell dead.

John Steadman and the Harvey woman were arrested and imprisoned. Mable McKnight is of excellent parentage. Much excitement was occasioned by the abduction and killing.

Epworth League.

Saturday night the 12th annual convention of the Epworth League, held at Opelika, adjourned to meet in Montgomery in 1904. The new officers are: President, M. H. Andrews of Prattville; first vice president, G. A. Grant of Montgomery; second vice president, Miss Mabel Wheeler of Birmingham; third vice president, Miss Helen Gill of Huntsville; secretary, Miss Ethel Hays; treasurer, John K. Watkins of Opelika; Leon M. Stephenson of Roanoke, league editor. The addresses of the Rev. H. M. DuBose and Bishop Candler were the features of the convention.

Don't Want Much.

During its meeting at Montgomery last week the Colored National Immigration Commercial Association's committee on resolutions reported a resolution favoring the chartering of ships during the year 1904 for carrying colonies to Liberia. A petition to the president and congress was read reciting wrongs from which the race suffers and begging an appropriation of one hundred million dollars to be allowed negroes who desire to go to Liberia. This petition, it was explained, does not mean that this shall be a wholesale deportation or compulsion on anyone to emigrate.

Alabama Banks.

Abstract of reports made to the comptroller of currency, on the condition of the national banks in the state of Alabama at the close of business June 9, shows the individual deposits to have been $17,469,057.18; percentage to deposits on hand, redemption fund, and due from reserve agents, 25.98; percentage of legal reserve to deposits, 20.74; total lawful money reserve in banks, $1,884,872.91.

No One Fired It.

While Jesse Edwards and his father-in-law, Mr. Williamson, were arranging their hooks on the banks of Mills creek Tuesday morning a double-barreled hammerless shot gun lying on the ground near by was discharged, part of the load taking effect in Mr. Williamson's leg and causing a painful flesh wound. No one was near the gun and it is a mystery what discharged it.

Reported Homicide.

Report comes of the killing of Humphrey Posey by his brother, Captain Posey, near Harmony, Jackson county. The place is isolated and details of the affair are lacking.

Over The Line.

James Roberts, 19 years old, son of J. Robert, of Chivers, while playing a "tug of war" was fatally injured and died as the result of the accident. They had made a line on the ground and each took hold of the end of a stick and tried to drag the other across the line. In the struggle young Roberts was injured and died from the effects.

At Montgomery.

The Third regiment, A. N. G., will go into encampment in Montgomery on July 8th. The place was definitely decided on Saturday at a meeting of several of the officers of the regiment and Adjutant General Brandon. Montgomery made a proposition for the regiment to go there and the decision rested on the amount of money to be raised. The officers of the regiment demanded a certain amount and Montgomery asked until Saturday afternoon to see if it could be raised.

Twenty-four miners were killed and 35 injured by a gas explosion in a Mexico mine Sunday.

Resignation Forthcoming.

The resignation of Chancellor James C. Longstreet, of the Third chancery district, is looked for daily, but it is not expected to take effect for at least thirty days, as that length of time will be necessary in order for him to make the necessary personal arrangements to assume his new position as district counsel for the Illinois Central, which he has accepted in association with Judge Edward Marks.

FRILLS BENEFIT

THE MODERN MOTHER-IN-LAW.

A Charming Creature That Any Son-in-Law May Well Be Proud Of.

The early years of the twentieth century with their ultra-civilization, common sense and delight in novelty, will be known to history as the period of the annihilation of ancient traditions and superstitions. Through long centuries the obnoxiousness of the mother-in-law was a firmly cherished article in the creed of every married man. He held it as an utter impossibility that his wife's mother could be other than an aggressive, interfering, ill-tempered creature who cumbered the earth, and most particularly his own threshold.

As late as twenty years ago the average benedict seemed under the impression that the mother-in-law was created solely to buffet and torment the husband of her daughter, and to afford a mirth-inspiring topic for the comic papers. She was the luckless exception in the ordinary run of mortals who had neither merits, nor charm, nor reason d'être.

But now man is inclined to regard this type of mother-in-law as a myth evolved from the imaginations of his unappreciative predecessors. The modern mother-in-law is a youthful, jolly, exquisitely dressed woman, rather more juvenile in her taste and appearance than her daughter. Domesticities do not, apparently, interest her, and instead of interfering with the cook, she likes to spend the morning with her son-in-law on the golf links. Instead of scolding him and calling him John, she generally alludes to the master of the house as "dear old Crumpets," or calls him by some equally felicitous nickname, and flirts mildly with him when he takes her to the theatre. She restrains her daughter's certain lecture propensities and never invites herself to the house or stays a day longer than she is expected to.

The mother-in-law of today is, in fact, almost an incentive to matrimony. To be on such confidential terms with so charming and experienced a member of her sex, as the relationship insures, cannot fail to be a pleasant condition of affairs for the harassed and easily bored modern man. The up-to-date mother-in-law is sympathetic, amusing and the embodiment of tact. She knows how to gloss over her son's youthful deficiencies, and to convince him of her husband that he had married the most charming member of a fascinating family.

Instead of taking a painful delight in dilating upon her son-in-law's faults and shortcomings she secures popularity by diplomatic allusions to Jack's many and conspicuous virtues. Why the chameleon should thus have changed its spots and the role of the mother-in-law so utterly have reversed itself may be explained by a variety of reasons. Woman is a wary creature nowadays, and the son-in-law a proverbially difficult bird to capture. The common sense, too, of the early twentieth century woman has taught her the ineffectiveness of ill-temper and invective in arguments with the "mere man." The modern mother-in-law may not be less of a tyrant than her predecessor, but she has at any rate had the wit to change her weapons and methods of attack for the art and craft of feminine charm and persuasiveness.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Don'ts For Athletic Women.

Don't exercise one part of the body too much and another part not at all. Let the development be symmetrical. Don't use too much force. If exercise is too vigorous, you will be exhausted before you can complete it.

Don't exercise beyond the ability of the heart to keep pace with you. Palpitation is a certain indication of excess.

Don't exercise for at least an hour after meals.

Don't forget that a bath should follow exercise.

Don't use iron dumbbells, but wooden ones. The former chill the blood.

Don't have intermittent attacks of exercising your muscles. In order to receive any benefit you should devote some time daily to athletics.

Don't forget that where there's a will there's a way. If you really mean to become strong and shapely, the way is easy and simple.

Don't forget to inhale slowly and deeply when performing any exercise. This will make the chest deep and full.

Don't think that athletics should be matter of inches and pounds only. Their increase is certain to tell most beneficially on the health and spirits as well.

Don't exercise a moment after you feel exhausted.

Don't stand with the back bent over, the shoulders thrown forward, the head dropped and the chest sunk in.

Don't protrude the hip and abdomen, or rest the weight unevenly upon the feet. No exercise is of any benefit whatever unless the correct standing position is taken every time.

Don't forget that every woman is as young as she looks, but that she cannot look young with a broken figure.—Washington Star.

Dainty Comforts For Summer.

In every home where one or more girls abide, the pretty summer dresses made from lawns, dimities and chiffies will accumulate, says an exchange. One season's wear leaves them bright and pretty, just enough out of date to make them undesirable for another season, yet the material is almost as good as new. The most convenient way of utilizing them is in making comforts for the beds in summer. They are strips or as large squares as possible, sew the parts together for the lining. One pound of material is sufficient for the three, but not spend your time in quilting the best knot with a pretty corner sash. They require to be washed and their light weight makes them comfortable indeed.

The process of making may be simple, too. One need not bother quilting frames, but pin the four corners of the lining to the carpet, and the batting evenly, lay on the top and carefully pin or baste the top together, then remove to a table and a couple of hours the quilting will be done. Bind with the machine in the manner continuously for the top and they are good yet. New Orleans Picayune.

Retinal Notions.

Some fantastic ideas are being plotted in connection with English weddings just now, and one of the latest is a large basket, behind which the bride and bridegroom stand to receive their friends. The basket stands over their heads, and the basket filled with tiny bouquets which are scattered among the guests when the bride and bridegroom have exchanged their vows. The basket is sufficiently well circulated by the friends as they wish them God speed. Muffs made to match the party and fashioned of chiffon and rose, trimmed with fruit and grass, are designed to be carried by the bride at some coming English bride. At a recent wedding the bride made departure from the ordinary practice by having little boys to precede her, dressed in the costume of boys, carried out in pale blue satin suits, with gold; she had four bridesmaids, who were in Empire dress, made of blue soft silk. This pretty bride's dress was of ivory satin embroidered with silver, and having sleeves of yoke of tucked chiffon.—Boston Eagle.

A Novelty in Summer Muffs.

A few muffs have been made to match the party, trimmed with fruit and grass, and in pink chiffon with roses. They are very well for bridesmaids. There is a good many fantastic ideas for weddings just now, and one of the latest is a large basket, behind which the bride and bridegroom stand to receive their friends. The basket stands over their heads, and the basket filled with tiny bouquets, which are scattered among the guests when the bride and bridegroom have exchanged their vows. The basket is sufficiently well circulated by the friends as they wish them God speed.

The Bloom Scheme.

In making a new sleeve or in making an old one down to date, there is one general scheme. The fullest part appears at the elbow and below the shoulder nearly to the elbow. As the cuffs into which this fulness is cut there are two styles; either a narrow cuff, or a deep and broad cuff, reaching almost to the elbow. This holds good for cuffs on suits especially. For shirt cuffs the narrow cuff is nothing to boast of.

Dainty Perfuming.

A thumb nail size bag of one of the perfume powder is put by the dressmakers in the sleeves of all bodies under the shoulder. The dainty way of using perfume, with the finger in cologne and dabbing over the eyebrows is harmless agreeable besides having a most refreshing effect.

The blouse effect in the front of jackets is just a trifle exaggerated. The most stylish buttons are the fronts of shirt waists that are very large.

So many colors are fashionable that one might almost say color is in vogue.

The knee-length coat is the style for all coat and skirt suits, whether linen, silk or wool.

Cross-stitch bands of many colors silk give style to many summer gowns and shirt waists.

Lace wraps of all kinds are being smart and even old lace wraps are being brought out again.

One of the newest models for the shirt waist suits has a shawl collar for the upper part of the waist, and as for the skirt.

A collarless jacket is not only cooler for summer, but displays the advantage the very smart collars wear this season.

A touch of white is needed in trimmings, put on in piping, folds, or with scalloped edges.

Tulle hats are much worn, and chiffon ones at present. The black, of row after row of the pleatings of tulle, are very popular.

A favorite sleeve for summer material fits close, almost to the wrist, and then has two wide bands of material faced with silk.

While short skirts are in vogue, the plain tailor-made skirt is considered correct, and is a most comfortable and convenient way of utilizing them is in making Successful Submarine Tests.

Some important naval maneuvers took place recently between the French and German navies near La Rochelle where the submarine boat Korian at the head of the French fleet, accompanied by four torpedo boats, succeeded in torpedoing a vessel on one side passed beneath the vessel attacked and discharged a torpedo against the other. The torpedo boat destroyers were unable to prevent the attack. The battleship Admiral Trehouart, representing the enemy's division, tried to pass the southern entry to the roadstead of La Pallice which was defended by the submarines Korian and Farfadet. The attack failed. Admiral Trehouart being torpedoed four times, equivalent to once for every one of the four ships forming the division which she represented.—New York American.

An American has invented an envelope which records of itself an attempt to tamper with its contents. The flap is imbued with some chemical composition which, when operated upon by a stamping process or any other means of penetrating its enclosure, records the transaction by causing the words "attempt to open" to appear. It is thought that the inventive will think twice before pursuing their researches in face of such an invention.

the correction of my eyesight by Dr. J. R. Roach. I have suffered for a long time with irritation of the eye, and have tried many specialists, but Dr. Roach has succeeded where all others had failed.

Mr. Wiley Smith, Clanton, Ala.
I got a correction for my eyesight from Dr. Roach, and am well pleased with the treatment.

Mrs. R. T. Grant, sister of County Treasurer Alex G. Dake, has been a great sufferer for many years with intense pain in her eyes and limbs.
Her eyes were irritated to such an extent she was unable to see at all.
After ten weeks treatment by Dr.
Roach, Mr. Dake says his sister is greatly improved in health, and her eyes are free from irritation and she can now see a little. The prospect is good for her to be permanently cured after Dr. Roach has further treated her.

Clanton, Ala., May 9, 1903.
Dr. J. R. Roach, Clanton, Ala.
Dear Sir: I wish to state for the benefit of everyone that I had suffered for many years with intense pain in my eyes and could not distinguish objects at all, and had been in that situation for over a year. Your prismatic treatment alone (without any medicine) relieved me almost at once, and now after ten weeks time I see very well, even being able to thread a needle with black thread.

I feel deeply grateful to you and hope that any others who suffer with their eyes will apply to you before it is too late.

Widow Boyd, of Cooper, is pleased by that Dr. Roach has improved her eyesight, as she has been a great sufferer for many years.

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

These warm summer days as you walk down the street
you may see a good looking young girl who is smiling and looking at you and you may think she is looking at you just inside of the Hopkins drug store.

There's a smile on her face, it's a joy, it's
a dream.
You only glance at it you'll think of
her smile and meet.
There's a smile on her face, it's a joy, it's
a dream.
You only glance at it you'll think of
her smile and meet.

It may fairly be said that last Saturday in Clanton was one of the greatest Fourth's that has been known in some years. But few people were in town, and not one salutary fire-cracker was heard during the whole day. Nearly everything was closed and a number of the younger folks went out in one direction and another. The farmers did not come to town, he was making the most of a fine working day in a backward season, and considering the rainy weather we have been getting it would appear that was right. Nothing like "making hay while the sun shines."

Being storm bound the other day at the post office I took occasion to have a look at Postmaster Dudley's arrangements. He has fixed up a very neat office, and has "a place for everything and everything in its place." There might possibly have been a little more room left for the post, but that is a small matter, otherwise he has a very compactly arranged post office. The business of the office continues to increase and necessitates the constant supervision of the postmaster, and Mr.
Dudley, with his assistant Will Camp, are kept fully employed.

It is currently reported that Mr.
D. Downs has severed whatever connection he had with the Union.
Mr. Downs has always been considered a shrewd business man, and his short venture in that particular line of business he proves himself shrewdness by getting out of it.
He said.

Reports, on the whole, are fairly satisfactory as regards the crop situation. While the season is backward it appears that all crops are growing pretty well and with propiet weather an average crop at least may be looked for. Corn is growing in fine condition, and the favorable weather cotton should come up to the average
time I see very well, even being able to thread a needle with black thread.

At the Baptist church, Sunday night Dr. Curry preached a very interesting sermon on "Baptism," preparatory to the observance of the sacrament, when Misses Lovey Smith and Sallie Foshee were imbued. The beautiful singing of the choir rendered the solemn service more impressive, and many an earnest prayer was wafted on high for the future welfare of the fair neophytes.

Well, our crops are looking fine down in South Chilton, and grass is getting a "hump" on itself.
We're having a considerable amount of rain, some say it is alright, while others say it is too much. Day labor is scarce but we think the reason is that a lot of our farmers, who are natural murmurers, collect around the stores and talk about last year being so dry and this year too much rain, and depict their condition in a very pitiful way and wind up by saying
"We don't know what will become of us." Therefore the day laborers come to the conclusion that, when in the course of human events it becomes necessary for a half-hungry, half-fed, imposed on set of men to dissolve the bonds of employer and employee a decent respect for the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to separation. Now, we imagine these are the causes that they have in mind. We hold these truths to be self evident that all men are created with mouths and stomachs and they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which is that no man shall be compelled to starve out of mere compliance to an employer, and that every man has a right to fill his stomach and wet his whistle with the best that's going.
The health of the community is fairly good, though our genial Doctor says he has plenty of work.
Measles have about subsided. Mr.
J. M. Grant and family are up again, and little Vinie Grant is convalescing. We trust no others will take them.

Our picnic failed to be. The Baptist and Methodist churches joined forces and intended having a picnic for the Sunday-schools on the 25th, and it promised to be quite a pleasant affair, but "the rains came and the floods descended" and all "stayed at home." However, we had a nice game of ball. Verbena played Blue Darters, the score stood 8 and 9 in favor of Verbena.

We wish to say that Plow Boy was mistaken in last issue when he said the Verbena boys got beaten at the time mentioned. Verbena played Blue Darters, the score stood 13 to 17 in favor of Verbena.

Mrs. Nelson, we are glad to know, is improving.

Our Sabbath-schools are strong and are doing excellent work.

Miss Georgie Thompson returned Saturday from a visit to relatives in Elmore county.

Politics!—Well, people are too busy in trying to feed "Sal and the shillun" to talk politics.

The farmers are progressing slowly with their crops, owing to so much rain. Crops look well in this locality, corn especially, which is very encouraging to farmers; cotton looks very well. But what do we care for cotton if we have plenty of hog and hominy at home.

ful skill of Dr. C. N. Parnell.

I am very glad to report that we are now having two successful Sabbath-schools in this settlement, one at Mulberry Baptist church every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock and the other at Isabella Methodist church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Both have good leaders and are very well attended, but we feel quite sure that they are not attended by the fathers and mothers as they should be. The fathers and mothers should thank God for an opportunity of raising their children up in a community where a Sabbath-school is near. I think if the people could only realize the great importance of the good work of a Sabbath-school they surely would strive to become much interested in the Bible studies and attend Sabbath-school every Sunday with their little ones with them. We,
as human beings, should be very thankful to God Almighty that He has given us so much work to do that He might keep us from being idle and wicked, and if all people would improve their time to the utmost of their advantages they now have, instead of grumbling at their present situation, it would be a great deal better for them and others, and the world would soon be to a higher standpoint. We think this community has done more for the cause of Sabbath-school work through the last spring quarter than it has always done, and we do hope that by the help of God it will continue the grand and noble work. JEROME WILLIAMS.

Further statistics of mineral output, just published, show that the United States produces more and the British Empire a little less than one-third of the coal, while Germany furnishes one-fifth.

It is said that a million dollars has been offered for a healthy stomach. Now, as it has been proved by experiment that a man may live with his stomach cut out, why may it not be possible to make an exchange of stomachs between a healthy man and a dyspeptic? There are plenty of poor men who would be willing to take the chance that they could take a weak stomach and infuse strength into it, observes the Christian Register. At least, for a million dollars they would be willing to make the experiment.

Lieutenant Ture of the French navy has after much study devised a plan for a ship the passengers on which will, he imagines, be proof against sea-sickness. He has caught the idea from the motion of a swing. As a general rule vessels are only set rolling from ten to fifteen seconds at a time, and as his would have a regular swing of twenty-two seconds he calculates that the effect of the waves would thus be counteracted. M. Ture's model ship would be of about 600 tons burden and would sail at a speed of nineteen knots. All the cabins would be well out of the water, as they would be constructed on a deck more than thirty feet above the sea level.

The Egyptian Gazette says that while the Sudan will take several years more to develop, there are practically no limits to the possibilities for outside capital which the recovered provinces afford. With great tracts of fertile soil now producing little but jungle, and with a water supply only needing scientific storage and distribution to fulfill all requirements, there is no reason why the Sudan should not become one of the world's greatest granaries. "All of these and other treasures are placed at the disposal of humanity at large by the extermination of the dervishes, and British enterprise must have lamentably deteriorated if it hangs back in the competition to cater for the wants of 25,000,000 people."

Hellgoland is to be repaired. One last effort is to be made to save it from disintegration. During the recent gales large masses of saline rock have fallen on the western side, owing to the wash of the sea and the influence of rains. It is now proposed to begin work on a large scale, with the object of endeavoring to check further ruin. The large caves are to be filled with cement, and in one threatened spot a thick wall fifteen metres high is to be raised against the sea. These operations, which have been ordered by the Kaiser, will occupy two years. There is a widespread opinion in German naval circles that the island must be preserved at all costs to protect the mouths of the Elbe and Weser.

The question of the origin of journalism in Europe has lately been discussed in the Belgian press at great length. From what has been published on the subject, it seems that the honor of having given birth to the first newspaper belongs to Belgium. In 1605 Abraham Verhoeven began to edit a paper at Antwerp called the Nieuwe Tijdingen. This sheet, it is claimed, was the first regular newspaper published in Europe. The first number of the Gazette de France, founded by Trophée Renaudet, dates from 1631; the Frankfurter Oberpostamt-Zeitung was founded in 1615. The London Weekly News in 1619, and the London Gazette in 1642. It is proposed to celebrate the tricentenary of the foundation of regular journalism by fetes to be held at Antwerp in 1906.

The fishery board of Scotland has experimented upon the migration of salmon to determine if the fish return year after year, to the same river. A metal tag bearing a number attached to specimens that are subsequently freed. The last report of the board recites that twenty-four salmon, so marked were caught during the next season. Of these twenty-four nineteen were taken in the same river in which they were set free during the preceding season; four were caught in water close to their birthplace, and only one in distant waters. This latter specimen was taken 500 miles away from the place where it was set free—in Norway. Salmon, remember, then, and have an acute sense of direction, as well as preference of a marked character.

Birmingham Electric Cars Coude in a Cut.

Eleven persons were injured Saturday afternoon in a street car collision which occurred at Ware's station on the Bessemer electric line. No one was fatally injured and the most serious of the injuries consist of broken bones. A number were slightly bruised and badly shaken up, but were able to go home without medical attention.

The collision occurred about 1 o'clock. Ware station is about ten miles from Birmingham and five from Bessemer. The collision occurred in a cut on a long curve and seems to have been the result of a change of schedule which was not understood by one of the motormen.

The most seriously injured are W. A. Norman, thigh broken, and M. A. Barnes, ankle broken. His leg was amputated after removal to the hospital.

The collision came without warning and the shattered glass fell in every direction. Several were slightly cut by flying fragments. The front trucks of one of the cars left the track, but the remaining trucks kept their places. Both cars carried trailers. Both motormen reversed their currents, put on air brakes and jumped from their cars.

Scottsboro Shooting.
A special from Scottsboro says that at a base ball game and negro picnic on the Fourth Bill Coffey, a white man who has done time in the penitentiary three times and who has just gotten back from serving his last sentence, shot and instantly killed Julius McBroom, a negro.

The murder was unprovoked and most cowardly, as the negro did nothing to deserve the attack made upon him by the ex-convict. The negro killed was drinking and was talking a little loud when Coffey ordered him to stop talking. This the negro did, and started to run off, when Coffey shot him in the back with a Colt's 44-caliber revolver, the ball passing entirely through his body.

After Coffey killed the negro he made for the mountains. A posse is in pursuit.

Immediately after the shooting R. S. Skelton, one of the most prominent men in the county, offered $150 reward for the capture of Coffey. Bloodhounds were telegraphed for.

POST OFFICE ROBBER

Shot and Captured at Oakman a Professional.

Early on the morning of the Fourth the safe in the postoffice was blown open. The noise of the explosion aroused Marshal Baker, who ran to the office in his night clothes and succeeded in capturing the thief. The man ran, but Marshal Baker shot him through the jaw with a 38-caliber Smith & Wesson pistol.

The thief says his name is Frank Harris. He is evidently a professional, as a full supply of tools were on his person.

A peculiar feature of the capture of Harris was his statement that he thought the marshal was a white cow, and therefore did not make an attempt to escape as early as he might have done. He says that he would have had plenty of time to escape had he known that the white object he saw coming toward him was a man. This is accounted for by the fact that Marshal Baker was in his night clothes.

In a friendly disturbance at Trussville Saturday morning John Bowen was seriously if not fatally injured by a friend while they were drinking together in a barroom. The bullet from a pistol struck Bowen in the breast and passed almost entirely through him. It lodged under his shoulder blade in the back.

Information comes that on Saturday Clint Mann, a white man, had killed Jack Clark at Bear Creek. He made his escape. The sheriff has offered a reward for his capture and delivery.

Governor Jelks has named Dr. S. J. Gay to be probate judge of Clay county.

The decision of the Alabama railroad commission in the rate cases was made public Saturday. It is the first order of the commission under powers granted it by the legislature recently in session, and the shippers in the state reap a benefit as a result of it. There are two decisions, covering the two cases before the commission, the one asking for a reduction of rates on grain and hay and the other asking for the adoption of the Georgia tariff in Alabama.

The commission has been considering these cases since March. The commission itself instituted the case citing the railroad to show cause why rates should not be reduced on food products and home-raised commodities in Alabama. When this case came up for hearing, B. B. Comer and others presented a case involving the question of establishing the Georgia classification and rates, and the hearing was postponed for thirty days in order that all parties might have an opportunity to prepare their cases.

The opinion prepared by Associate Commissioner Sanders goes exhaustively into the whole question. The commission did not see its way clear to adopt the Georgia rate and classification, but there are very material reductions ordered in the food product cases, and the consumers and shippers in Alabama will reap the benefit to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars.

There are several reasons set forth by the commission why they could not see their way clear, under the facts and the law, to grant the petition establishing the Georgia rate. The act creating the commission, and the supreme court of the United States declares the railroad companies are entitled to earn a fair and just return upon the value of their property, including appurtenances, and equipments. The supreme court of the United States has held that this earning must be based strictly on domestic business, and the interstate business cannot be considered by the commission in fixing intra-state rates.

The case was argued by both sides before the commission, and facts submitted show that the largest earnings in Alabama on domestic business are less than two per cent. Ranging from that down to actual deficits. The only roads showing earnings of two per cent were the Louisville and Nashville and the Western of Alabama.

When the combined earnings on domestic and foreign business are considered, only two roads in the state reach four per cent, and the remaining earnings are on a descending scale reaching as low as the fractional part of one per cent.

The capitalization upon which the earnings are based is much below the average capitalization of roads in the United States, and in no instance is as high as this average.

The figures presented show that on domestic business the earnings would be less than the legal rate of interest upon the capitalization of the various roads operating in this state, reduced as low as one-fourth of the funded debt, stocks and bonds.

Two Accidents at Pratt City.

Two accidents, which may prove fatal, occurred Friday. William Laird, fire boss at No. 1 shaft, had his arm torn from his body. He was near the engine when his sleeve was caught in the cog wheel, and his arm twisted from its socket, his side being badly lacerated.

James Overstreet was also badly hurt at No. 3 mines. He was going down the mines in a car. In some way the car got beyond control and smashed into an obstruction. Mr. Overstreet's head was seriously injured.

There is a balance to the credit of the University of Alabama of $8,696.09. The receipts for the year were $57,896.27; the expenses, $51,606.60.

The state will sell much property in Calhoun county for back taxes. A Kansas City capitalist will purchase the lands as a speculation.

Rural postal routes are to be established at Centreville and Headland.

The Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland has made an offer to the board of revenue of Montgomery county to compromise the bond case for $60,000. The offer was refused and the case will go to the court of appeals.

Suit for $10,000 has been brought by the Birmingham News against the Ledger for injuries received in an alleged false circulation statement.

A number of raised one dollar bills have been passed in Attalla recently. They were good imitation fives and passed at night very easily.

W. D. Lamley was appointed probate judge of Butler county to succeed Zell Gaston, resigned.

Twelve thousand acres of Cleburn county land have been sold at Edwinstown for the payment of taxes. W. H. Nance, one of the prominent citizens of Russellville, was thrown from his buggy and killed Friday.

Rail has been allowed in the Scottsboro lynching cases. $300 each was asked.

At the conference of American rabbis held at Detroit it was decided to counsel the maintenance of the Jewish Sabbath.

Killed By a Train at Talladega.

Hon. Joseph B. Graham and Miss Jeannette Joiner, of Talladega, were run over and killed by a Southern railway train at the passenger station Monday night.

Both of them were horribly mangled but lived for nearly two hours. Mr. Graham was conscious during his intense suffering and dictated his will just before he died.

Mr. Graham had gone to the station preparatory to leaving the city, and was standing on one of the tracks when Miss Bridges, his stenographer, accompanied by Miss Joiner, came to consult him about some business matter that needed his immediate attention.

The three were standing on a side track adjoining the station and some distance from them on the same track was a long string of freight cars. The incoming passenger train struck these cars and they were knocked against Mr. Graham and Miss Joiner. Miss Bridges being pulled out of the way by a gentleman standing near by. The cars passed over Mr. Graham and Miss Joiner, mangling their forms.

Mr. Graham was conscious until 10:30, when he began to sink rapidly. He died in a few minutes thereafter. Miss Joiner died at 11 o'clock.

Joseph B. Graham was one of the most distinguished citizens of Alabama, and was known throughout the south as a champion of the cause of education. He was solicitor of the Talladega circuit court, and was field agent of the Southern Education board. He made quite a reputation throughout the state as an orator during the campaign for Senator Morgan.

Miss Joiner was a daughter of George A. Joiner, one of the leading citizens of Talladega.

The unfortunate act caused intense excitement in Talladega.

While the chautauqua program was in progress a messenger rushed frantically into the hall asking for a physician and then a minister. When he had sufficiently calmed to tell of the terrible accident the audience was almost stamped.

PULASKI LEEDS SHOT.

Master Mechanic of L. & N. Wounded by Former Employee.

Pulaski Leeds, master mechanic of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, was shot and dangerously wounded by G. B. Worner, a former employee of the road. The shooting occurred in Mr. Leeds' office at the union station, Louisville.

Worner, after shooting Mr. Leeds, shot himself through the roof of the mouth, inflicting a wound which will prove fatal. Worner formerly lived at New Decatur, Ala. He had recently been discharged and it is supposed he was wrought up over some alleged grievance.

Coal Land Deal.

A rumor current in Birmingham is that a deal is on in coal lands along the Southern railway involving a cash outlay of $270,000. The property now has one mine on it in full operation, getting out several hundred tons of coal daily and another mine almost ready for daily operation.

The deal involves a large amount of coal lands. The mines up to the time of the suspension of work on the part of the United Mine Workers, have been in steady operation and there is a good demand for the product. It is understood also that in case the deal is made and the eastern parties become possessed of the property it is intended to make further purchase of adjacent properties and to develop on a large scale.

Orders Placed.

The Cologne Volks Zeitung, Berlin, says that American orders for 50,000 tons of steel rails, ingots, billets, etc., have just been placed in West Phalian establishments. The orders have been in negotiation for several weeks and have been often mentioned in the press as not likely to lead to business.

Petrified Curio.

While working on the tunnel of the Seaboard Air Line in Roper Gap, workmen struck a curiosity which has been taken out in sections and is now on exhibition in the commissary of the McAfee Construction company at this point. The curiosity is believed to be a petrified sea serpent. It was taken out from a point about 160 feet in the tunnel and efforts will be made to bring some expert to the place for the purpose of examining the find and in all probability it will be sent to the Smithsonian institute at Washington. Much interest is manifested in the serpent.

Worked to Save the Crop.

Twenty-five thousand men labored from early morning till late at night in the Kansas wheat belt Sunday. In twenty counties where the harvest is ready thousands of reapers are in action. Church services in many rural districts were wholly abandoned. Many women helped the men and others in carrying water to the fields for the harvesters.

AROUND THE WORLD

In Ten Minutes Cable Messages Encircle Globe

The Pacific cable was completed the night of the Fourth by the joining together of the eastern and western lines at Honolulu on board the cable ship, thus completing the entire line of telegraph from San Francisco to the Philippine Islands, a distance of over 8,000 miles, and making it possible to send messages in less than ten minutes to the most distant of submarine cable telegraph lines.

The time for sending the globe-encircling message had been set at Honolulu but the weather conditions at Honolulu were unpropitious and the event had to be postponed.

A message from President Roosevelt to the President Mackay of the Commercial Pacific Cable Company, was sent over the new cable and around the world in twelve minutes and Mackay's reply, going east from New York, was sent around the world in nine and a half minutes. The previous time for a message around the globe was made on one sent from the National Electric Light Association, New York City, in 1904. It took fifty minutes to transmit the message.

North Alabama Deputies Will Work on Salary Hereafter.

It is reported that the attorney general of the United States has directed Marshal D. N. Cooper, of the northern district, to put all field deputies on salary and discontinue the fee system. The order was issued several days ago, but is being held up on account of the attorney general not wishing to allow but three field deputies for the entire district, and the marshal insists that he can not do the work with less than seven men.

The northern district contains practically half the counties of the state and 80 per cent of the violations of United States laws are committed in this district. The office of deputy will pay twelve hundred dollars a year, but the work will be worth the money. Huntsville will probably get one office and one field deputy.

VALUE OF WARSHIPS.

POSITIVE THAT THEY ARE CHEAPER THAN WAR.

Importance of a Fleet in All International Matters—Lord Charles Beresford's Epigram—The Verdict of History—Natural Pugnacity of Human Race.

That battleships are cheaper than war, that we must have the force necessary to hold and defend what we possess, that an individual or nation must be prepared to guard his element as well as his life and honor, that the attacks of other persons or nations are simple axioms, these are simple axioms. When Rear Admiral H. C. Taylor, U. S. N., advanced civilization, with its numerous and effective safeguards, as well as against all forms of public disorder has indeed clouded these axioms and confused the reasoning powers of those who protest against war prepared to be postponed.

A LOVELY MARRIAGE.

On last Sunday evening as the sun posed himself low in the west, nature was all aglow in her beauty and as her fragrance was wafted by a gentle zephyr that caused the Etta Moore were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the home of the bride's father near Verbena, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Rev. Partridge of East Lake officiating. Miss Susie Grant acted as bride's maid and Mr. Watts Moore as best man. It was a scene which the angels might well have drawn aside the curtains of the skies and rushed to the very parapets of heaven to gaze down upon.

The bride wore a dress of white organdy elaborately trimmed in lace and ribbon. The room was profusely decorated with jasmines and roses, and being deeply shaded presented a scene of loveliness.

Miss Moore is a charming and accomplished young lady and one that has many admirers. Mr. Taylor is a young business man of rare ability and we feel sure that his future is promising with the genial company he has won. We trust that their lives may be as happy as their marriage was pleasant.

RIGHT OR WRONG

I wish to state before answering questions in my message of last issue, I stand as one that has opposed the whiskey traffic from boyhood, and suffered abuse indescribable; met all kinds of contempt, had advantages sought even to the shadowing of my father's house for my life because I said whiskey should not remain in my community. I will say right here it did not remain either. How many are in this town that are willing to say this and stand by it?

I realize the position a man is in when he opposes whiskey to the full extent. The more a man undertakes for right the greater the opposition. When you oppose that a man is engaged in it. Whiskey is the best and sharpest tool the devil has at his command, and when you try to take a workman's tools from him he is sure to contend with you. So my friends and brother Christians I give you these preliminaries that you may know that I understand something of the position
I am taking through your county paper. So come along and let's reason together our interest socially, morally, religiously and intellectually, should be blended together, and if a tear falls or a heart aches, or a home is dark, we should look for the cause and bind the wound instead of making another.

I am now discussing or laying a foundation to discuss a question that I would like for you to see its importance. This is a question that appeals to every young man or young lady that love their friends, and have any ambition for a higher life, and love their home, their father and mother. It appeals to every father and mother that have any affection for fallen humanity, that love their home, and love the interest of that child that their foresight hopes now cherish.

So now, my friends, when I listen to the story told that is now written with indelible ink on the mind, the heart and the soul, of persons now living in this town and community never to be erased while here in this world, tears are caused to fall, my ambition responds, my love for the temperance cause is renewed, and I must do my part let it be ever so little.

Again when I listen to the conversation of small boys on our streets, hear expressions from them complimentary to themselves on having been drunk and out at night under the influence of whiskey, I am made to think another heart will bleed, another tear will fall from some father or mother's cheek, and another dark page is being written in some one's history. Now, mothers and fathers let me draw a picture, while I paint you look on. I fancy I see a small cloud over the western hills; I see another one near by in the same direction; let me look again; I see several over the same way. Listen! I hear a low deep thunder; I feel the whole earth quiver; I see those clouds coming together; I hear the low heavy thunder, it is louder and heavier. Look!
I see the lightning as it flashes from one side to the other, playing a great part in the preparation for a storm. Look! I see the dark cloud coming this way; I hear the rumbling of the thunder and the wind combined; I see the dark shadow hovering over the mother earth; I hear the mother call for the children; I see her in her fright, as she gathers them around her fireside, making all preparations possible to protect them from the approaching storm.
She then consoles herself with the thought that it will not reach her home. Mother, this storm is controlled by the tide, and if it don't reach your home it will reach some other mother's home.

So I see in this picture just such a cloud gathering over the western hills of youth, and just such a storm coming over the life of young men subject to such an influence as whiskey will always place around them.

So mother and father the first small cloud over the hills of time may rise while the babe is at your knee, and it may be many years gathering, but the storms of life will come and they are controlled by the tide, and each one of us play a great part in directing and controlling this tide. So you see sentiment must be molded, the tide must

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, July 6, 1903
Notwithstanding the fact that the Postoffice Department investigation afforded President Roosevelt a fine opportunity to "make good" in a manner most pleasing to his countrymen, he has neglected the opportunity, has gone to his summer home and left behind him orders that the "gag rule" must be enforced, no news given out and the investigation practically abandoned.
The disclosures so far made leave no doubt in an intelligent mind that the investigation has only begun—that "worse remains behind."

The greedy fangs of corruption have fastened themselves upon every branch of the postal service.
Mr. Bristow's report gives substantial proof of shameless trafficking in offices, grafting in almost every bureau, of bold and brazen defiance of all civil service rules, and of the damnable pernicious influence of party considerations in the administration of one of the greatest departments of the Government.

One of the results of the investigation is the discovery that the four states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa have been especially favored in the distribution of rural routes.
As three of these are pivotal states in national elections, the reason of this favoritism is perfectly obvious.
If Mr. Payne is really ill, he cannot be blamed for it. A national scandal of this kind is enough to make anybody "sick." In its purely moral aspect, it bears a strikingly close resemblance to the Panama affair in France, which, in its course, besmirched the reputations of almost every leading politician.
The Postoffice Department has become absolutely rotten. Every branch of the service needs reform and lots of it. It is the President's duty to leave nothing undone to bring every culprit to justice. The scandal is no longer a matter of lurking suspicion. It has advanced into the indestructible realm of facts. This being the case, every political grafter, blood-sucker and briber should be hunted down and held up for public condemnation.
The national administration, which happens to be Republican, has reached the point where retreat is no longer impossible. It must, noisens volens, go ahead, honestly and fearlessly or take the consequences. Does the latest step look as though it were going to do this thing? Does it look as though the people of the country are going to get the facts of this matter when the "gag rule" is applied to the officers of the department and no action taken in the cases of men already indicted of heinous offenders?

The people will never know the extent of rottenness in the Post Office Department until there is a change in national administration.
A congressional investigation by a partisan republican majority will only smother things. How long will the people stand it?

A movement is now on foot to reorganize the entire naval administration. Mr. Moody, the Secretary of the Navy, now has a plan in his hands providing for the creation of a naval general staff. If this plan is adopted, the department institutions, such as the war college, or the bureau of navigation, will be merged with the general staff, whose chief will exercise the same supervision over the military divisions as the assistant secretary over the bureaus, and in the absence of both secretary and assistant secretary, the chief of staff will be acting secretary. The present functions and authority of the secretary will be maintained.

This reorganization plan should,
and undoubtedly will be adopted.
Ever since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war it has been apparent that the Bureau of Navigation is in need of a thorough overhauling. It has been a hotbed of political intrigue and chicanery.
The impertinent rule that some of the officials played in the Sampson-Schley controversy is well remembered. Anything that is calculated to remove the navy and army departments beyond the sphere of politics and offensive intrigue will have the nation's approval.

Carve Out In Two Days.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

Was Filled with Its Usual Quota of Disaster.

At Pittsburgh Independence day was one of fatalities and accidents. Up to midnight sixteen bodies had been taken to the morgue. Of the dead three were killed in a trolley accident, four were electrocuted, three were the victims of heat, two were run down by railroad trains and four lost their lives through fireworks.

An American flag indirectly caused the death of four persons during an electrical storm in Pittsburgh. The flag, soaked by water, blew against a heavily charged electric wire, causing it to break and fall into a pool of water. The pool was alive with two thousand volts and the four persons met death by falling into the pool.

Clara Fox was instantly killed while making a "slide for life" on a wire stretched from the Fort Dodge, Iowa, court house tower. The harness in which she hung became unhooked just as she was about to reach the end of the wire.

Three shops of the Manhattan Railway Company and their contents were destroyed by fire. The damage was between $100,000 and $150,000, the principal loss being fifteen motor cars. The company attributes the fire to fire-crackers.

At Davenport, Ia., before a crowd of 8,000 people a professional high diver was dashed to death on a barge at Grand Isle, in the Mississippi river, by the breaking of a ladder.

By the explosion of a cannon at Harlan, Iowa, one man is dead, one seriously injured, having a leg blown off, and another rendered blind.

One hundred and fifty persons were injured in Cincinnati in celebrating the Fourth. The more seriously injured are children.

Over twenty casualties, mostly of a minor character, were reported as a result of Washington's celebration of the Fourth.

Dynamite bombs placed on the street car tracks of Topeka blew the cars from the track.

At Barnes, Kan., a balloonist fell nearly 200 feet and was probably fatally injured.

St. Paul, Minn., reports casualties of the nation's birthday, thirty-five; none fatal.

Twenty-four persons were injured at Kansas City in celebrating Independence day.

The engineering features of the Pacific cable connecting San Francisco with the Philippine Islands would have been entirely different had it not been for the Midway Islands, the first and smallest insular possession of the United States. Without them a cable station on the Pacific possessions of some other government would have been necessary.

The value to the government which this first colonial possession has now become can be readily realized when it is said that without the Midway Islands as a landing place for the cable its long stretch from Honolulu to Guam could not be broken, and instead of being able to send twenty words a minute the speed would be reduced to six words, and the service made proportionately less satisfactory.

What benefit this isolated cable station in the center of the Pacific may prove from a strategic point of view may be demonstrated some day by timely orders to a fleet of battleships. That the station is considered valuable from this point of view is shown by the determination of the government to fortify the islands in the future for the protection of the cable station.

An extensive pickling or canning factory is projected for Citronelle.

Cornwell's Flight Traced to Mexico.

A letter has been received by the Bessemer authorities from the chief of police at New Orleans stating that Captain Cornwell, the defaulting bank president, spent several days in a private sanitarium at Abbeville, La., under treatment for the morphia habit immediately after he disappeared from Bessemer.

The letter asks for a description of Cornwell and states that the New Orleans authorities did not know at the time that the man in the sanitarium at Abbeville was wanted in Bessemer, as he adopted the alias of John Thomas while there and left before any steps could be taken for his apprehension.

While in Abbeville Captain Cornwell drew up a draft for $5,000 in favor of Dr. F. F. Young, in whose sanitarium he was being treated. After spending four days at Abbeville Captain Cornwell went to Houston, Tex. Here he presented the draft, but it was not honored. When next heard of he was in Mexico.

As no active steps have been taken to prosecute Captain Cornwell it seems that the chief of police at New Orleans did not know he was a fugitive from Bessemer and wrote asking merely for information.

Professor R. G. Goodwin, of Montgomery was elected principal of the Bessemer schools.

Bids have been received at Clayton for the erection of water works.

Enley has been made one of the school book distributing points.

Only four pieces of property were sold at Tuscaloosa's delinquent tax sale.

The line of road known as the Opp extension, connecting the Yellow River road with the Alabama and Florida division of the Louisville and Nashville, has just been completed, and it is expected that trains will be running over the line within a few days.

The new roadbed connects Florida with Opp, a distance of about twenty-eight miles, and opens up a territory which heretofore has not enjoyed the advantages of a railroad. It also opens up a new channel of trade for Pensacola. The line gives Pensacola direct connection with the southern Alabama and western Georgia cotton belt, and a trade which has heretofore been going to Montgomery and Savannah.

None, or a very small proportion of this trade has heretofore been received by Pensacola, for the reason that no direct connection was offered and the distance much greater than to other cities.

Another Ore Crusher.
The Alabama Coal, Coke and Iron company will soon erect another ore crusher at Attalla, and the North Alabama Mining Company will soon have one completed. The output of ore mines in this district will be almost double within thirty days.

This Mill Paid.
The Opelika cotton mills declared a 15 per cent annual dividend. Despite the heavy expenses the mill has had to meet it is in fine shape and doing a magnificent business, as evidenced by the large dividend. Considerable profit was put into the mill. The large addition will soon be completed and the output and profits will be increased.

It is announced that the prospects for building the Mobile and West Alabama railroad are now very bright. Capitalists from Tuscaloosa and Mobile are much interested in the project and definite action is promised at an early date.

Took Out the Mirrors.
Two hundred girls employed by an eastern concern reported for duty and saw that their mirrors had been removed. At first they suspected theft, but they were told by their foreman that orders had been given to destroy them all. The superintendent believes that too much time is devoted by the girls to the study of their complexions. The girls threaten to strike.

Garrett Krebs, of Kansas, owns 350,000 acres of land in Alabama which was sold for taxes.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Barlow Sage is Under the Weather, But Undaunted.

IS NOW SEVENTY-SEVEN

Wrote Out into His Garden for First Time in a Month—Deplores Recent Horrible Disasters Wrought by Terrors of the Elements.

When Ahab was king of Persia he got so mad with Haman one day that he walked out into the garden to let his cholier down—not his shirt collar, but to cool off his anger, for he might do something undignified. Then he came back and had Haman hanged on the gallows he had built for Mordecai.

Well, I walked out in my garden yesterday, the first time in a month, but I was not mad with anybody. In fact, I am pleased that I am allowed once more to walk outdoors and peruse the flowers and vegetables and pick a few strawberries April 24 and had a good watch me and have kept me peened up for months while the east wind chilled the air, but now they help me down the steps and up again and arm me around among the flowers. They are very beautiful from the window, but more so when you are near to them. We never had so many beautiful poppies before—all colors—all sizes—double and treble and as large as saucers. We had our first mess of strawberries April 24 and had a good mess yesterday, and have not missed a day. Our vegetable garden supplies the table bountifully, but the garden is not mine. The girls planted it and with a little help have grown everything.

We are enjoying the fruits of their labor every day, for we have potatoes, beans, peas, squashes, onions, beets and asparagus every day if we want them or have company. A little bacon with the beans and two spring chickens completes the first course, and then comes strawberry shortcake, which is always welcome. We live well at our house, and are not extravagant either. A bountiful dinner for twelve persons costs not more than $2, and the grandchildren consume half of that, bless their hearts. I do love to see them enjoy a good dinner, and they love to come here, and always have a kiss for poor old grandpa.

I was 77 years old Monday. June is full of our family birthdays. My wife was 71 on the 1st and I was 77 on the 15th, and my oldest grandson, who has my name, has my birthday. My mother has the 24th and our granddaughter, Caroline, is named for her and has her birthday. And there are some more in June that I have forgotten. Two little granddaughters brought me some nice linen (h'd'k'f's) before breakfast. These little gifts are sweet and help to smooth the wrinkles from an old man's brow. Our little 2-year-old loves to climb on my knee and pat my old cheek and call me "gampa" and that gives me more pleasure than a gold mine. May the Lord keep the little ones under the shadow of His wing.

Oh, the horror of horrors away out in Oregon. Will cloudbursts and fires and floods and shipwrecks never cease? Every day brings some new disaster, some wreck of innocent child life, some mother torn away. Lord, good Lord, have mercy upon the people and forgive all their sins. Like the poor fisherman I would say, "Lord, good Lord, I am a fool to speak to Thee, but save the children from the storm and flood and fire and pestilence." When I read the day's disasters my old heart throbs with pity, and, like the weeping prophet, I exclaim, "Oh, that my head were waters and my eyes a river of tears that I might weep day and night for the slain of the people"—40, 60, 100, 200, 400. Every day adds to pain and misery and anguish and desolation. Loved ones are gone and homes. Somehow when I look around me at all these happy hearts and faces and the flowers lifting their petals to the sun and the pigeons bathing in the pool and see the young people playing tennis down in the court and the contented negro plowing my neighbor's corn and the cow grazing in the pasture, I feel like it is almost a sin to be happy while so much grief and heartache abound all around us. It did not use to be so. In my youth we had no suicides; murders were rare; no crazy people filled the sanitariums; no chain gangs; no crime of any consequence. What is the matter with the world and the people? Even women have got to handling pistols and poison, and grave diggers have gone on a strike and we will have to dig our own graves before we die. Lord, help us all. Now let all the people say Amen.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

The discovery of the cause of a disease does not insure the immediate prescription of a remedy; but it is a long step in the direction of prevention, and it is in the fight against the cause of disease that the greatest progress has been made, asserts the Christian Register.

THE HALF-YEAR RECORD

But 5628 Commercial Failures, the Smallest Since 1900.

Liberalism Also Less—This Remarkably Good Showing Due to Growing Conservatism Among Business Men.

New York City.—Despite the fact that the stock market is glum with what J. Pierpont Morgan has termed "undigested securities," the half-yearly report of R. G. Dun & Co. shows that there have been remarkably few failures during the last six months. There were 5628 commercial failures, the smallest in any half year since 1900. This is considered, under the circumstances, to be a remarkably good showing.

Separating the half-year's failures into the three chief divisions, it is found that there occurred 1280 defaults in manufacturing, with a total loss of $26,135,144, as compared with 1418 last year for $24,940,020. Traders suspended to the number of 4033, against 4410 a year ago, and liabilities were $30,544,443 against $25,145,022. The third commercial subdivision, including brokers, transporters other than railways, and similar concerns, had 90 failures, with debts aggregating $10,117,673, as compared with 305 in 1902, with liabilities of $9,249,433. Banks and other fiduciary institutions suspended with indebtedness of $6,405,716, compared with similar liabilities of $16,797,763 last year. The report says:

"These statistics of commercial and financial mortality are most encouraging, for the events of the past six months were not such as to encourage expectation of a small number of insolventcies. Liquidation of securities averaging $15 per share for the sixty active railways during the half year, followed a fall of about $10 a share during the closing months of 1902, yet this shrinkage in the market value of stocks brought no such failures as would have occurred under similar circumstances in preceding years. This showing the report says was due to the growing conservatism among business men."

BUREAUS TRANSFERRED.
Important Branches of the Government Under Secretary Cortelyou.

Washington, D. C.—The transfer of the bureaus which are to be assembled under the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor to the new department took place. Secretary Cortelyou made a brief address on the objects and aims of the department, and there were several responses.

In addition to the bureaus of Corporations and Manufactures created by the new law the Department of Commerce embraces control of the following: The Census Bureau, formerly under control of the Interior Department; the Light House Establishment, the Steamboat Inspection Service, the Bureau of Navigation, the United States Shipping Commissioners, the National Bureau of Standards, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Bureau of Immigration and the Bureau of Statistics, from the Treasury Department; the Bureau of Labor, the Fish Commission and the Bureau of Foreign Commerce, the latter being transferred from the State Department.

MUST PROVE HE IS ALIVE.
Fusion Seeker Confronted With Official Report of His Death.

Sullivan, Ind.—James Watson, a veteran of the Mexican war, residing here, is unable to prove to the Pension Department that he is alive. Watson served as a private throughout the Mexican war in Company G, First Illinois Infantry. Toward the close of the war he was taken seriously ill, and the surgeon pronounced his case a hopeless one. His Captain failed to give him a discharge, but gave him a certificate showing that he had served in the above company. Watson lost this by destruction of his home by fire in 1892.

A short time ago he applied for a pension, and was greatly surprised to learn from the War Department that he was reported dead. Watson believed that his Captain, relying on the report of his surgeon that he could not live, reported him dead.

FACTS ABOUT MAN'S GROWTH

The growth of mankind, according to recent statistics, has increased up to the age of 30 years. This is a remarkable fact, according to the former belief, according to which men stopped growing at 22 years.

Boys and girls increase rapidly of their growth. The growth experienced in life comes between the ages of one and two, and girls grow about equally from five to ten the boys' growth, but from 10 to 15 the girls are the boys' superiors, and from 15 to 18 they are the superiors in weight.

But between 16 and 20 the girls forge ahead, taking at that time lead which they never relinquish. The boys cease their growth at 22, the girls theirs at 20. From 21 onward men, however, continue to grow, observations have been made on men though this growth is slight. They also increase in weight, but from 20 to 30 increases very rapidly.

Male strength increases markedly from the age of 19 to 29. From 19 to 30 the increase is very slowly to decline.

Female strength increases rapidly from 9 to 19, then slowly, and after 30 the decline begins. —Philadelphia Record.

A black and white illustration of a woman with dark hair, wearing a light-colored blouse and a dark vest, sitting at a desk. She is leaning forward, writing on a piece of paper with a pen. On the desk, there are several other papers, a small inkwell with a quill, and a small box. The woman is sitting on a high-backed chair. The overall style is that of a vintage advertisement.

Every sick and ailing woman.
Every young girl who suffers monthly,
Every woman who is approaching maternity,
Every woman who feels that life is a burden,
Every woman who has tried all other means to regain health without success, Every woman who is going through that critical time — the change of life — permitted to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., in regard to her trouble, and receive expert advice telling exactly how to obtain a CURE will be sent absolutely free of cost.

The one thing that qualifies a person to give advice on any subject of experience — experience creates knowledge.

No other person has so wide an experience with female ills nor such record of success as Mrs. Pinkham has had.

Over a hundred thousand cases come before her each year. Some casually, others by mail. And this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day.

Twenty years of constant success — think of the knowledge thus gained! Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman with an experience, especially when it is free.

Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter shows the result. There are actually thousands of such letters in Mrs. Pinkham's possession.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I have been under doctors' treatment for female troubles for some time, but without any relief. They now tell me I have a tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends down my spine. I have bearing down pains both back and front. My abdomen swells, I cannot wear my clothes with any comfort. Womb is dreadfully enlarged, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor, given in your little book, accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice. — Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 225 W. 7th St. (Boston), Roxbury, Mass.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I wrote to you describing my symptoms, and use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, entirely expelled the tumor, and strengthened the whole system. I can walk miles now.

our Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all who are afflicted with tumors, or any female trouble, to write you for and give it a faithful trial."—MRS. E. F. HAYES, 255 Dudley St., Roxbury, Mass.

Mrs. Hayes will gladly answer any and all letters that may be addressed to her asking about her illness, and how Mrs. Pinkham cured her.

NO FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letter and signature of above testimonial, which will prove its absolute genuineness.

be controlled before your children are safe from the disaster of the storm. The storm is fierce, the tide is great, and we must implore the assistance of the divine hand to change its course. I will answer my question by saying give me a force of true Christians with nerve and independent of conviction, we can close the saloons, put to flight all blind tigers and burst asunder dispensaries. Don't give me a Christian that will vote for whiskey; don't give me one that is a drunkard, for a man will not do much fighting against his convictions. Now, because the devil is at large shall we give him full sway? If so, the preacher should hold his peace, church doors should be closed and the Bible put up. Very Remarkable Cure for Diarrhoea "About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for my physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents cured me." Dr. J. R. ROACH

PRISMATIC TREATMENT A SPECIALTY
Imperfect Eyes are Often the Cause of Numbness, Ailments, as Headache, etc.
CONSULT DR. ROACH AND BE CURED

Read below a few of the numerous cures Dr. Roach has effected in your immediate neighborhood.
Miss Willie May Farnell, Stanton, Ala. For some time this young lady had suffered intense pain in her eyes and was at the point of giving up her studies, when she consulted Dr. Roach, who treated her eyes and furnished her with a pair of Brantman glasses, and she has not experienced any trouble since.
Mr. Rome Vinsan, Cooper, Ala. has a little daughter, about 10 years old, who had been taken from school on account of trouble with her eyes, but after Dr. Roach had examined her eyes and given them prismatic treatment and fitted her with proper glasses, she resumed her studies in a few days and has had no trouble since.
Mr. G. W. Wilkins, Billingsley, Ala. This gentleman took the course of prismatic treatment and not only has no more trouble with his eyes, but his hearing, which was very defective, has greatly improved. Mrs. G. W. Wilkins suffered from nervous trouble and the sight of her left eye was so poor that she could not distinguish objects. After wearing Dr. Roach's Prisms one week she can see so well with that eye as with the right one. Her general health, appetite, etc., is now better than for years past.
Mrs. W. A. Collier, Clanton, Ala. had suffered a great deal from nervous headache. She took a course of prismatic treatment from Dr. Roach and now has no return of the trouble.
Professor William C. Robinson, Clanton, Ala. had consulted several eminent specialists for his eyes and had been treated by them in the past four years, but none seemed to do him any good. He put himself under the care of Dr. J. R. Roach and by wearing his prismatic lenses has in the course of three weeks' time received more benefit than from all the others in four years, and estimates no price could get his glasses from him, if he could not replace them.
Professor J. W. Moore, county superintendent of education for Chilton county, had been suffering with his eyes, which his office necessitated him using a great deal, and now after having been fitted with glasses by Dr. Roach, expresses himself as entirely satisfied and has no more trouble.
Mr. J. W. Wyatt, Coosa county, Ala. There are eight members of this one family, and all are loud in their praise of the good resulting therefrom. One son in particular said he "had never got a good look at the world" until he wore the glasses furnished by Dr. Roach.
Deputy U. S. Marshal Frank Goodgame, Clanton, Ala. says he "had worn glasses bought from here, there and everywhere," and got no satisfaction from them, but that since Dr. Roach has fitted him out he is alright.
Mr. James Curlee, Cooper, Ala. This gentleman was afflicted with strabismus (cross eye) and suffered for years with headache and had been treated by others without any good resulting. Dr. J. R. Roach is treating him now and has about got the eye straight, the headaches are gone and his general health wonderfully improved. All without the use of any medicine whatever.
Mrs. W. M. McDaniel, Clanton, Ala. This lady says that she had suffered with her eyes for years, but that only under Dr. J. R. Roach's treatment has she experienced any lasting relief.
J. R. Billingsley, Thorsby, Ala. This gentleman and two members of his family have been treated by Dr. Roach and all express the utmost satisfaction with the results.
Widow Boyd, of Cooper, Ala. says that Dr. Roach has improved her eyesight, as she has long suffered for many years.
Mrs. H. B. Oliver, of Verona, Ala. states that Dr. J. R. Roach had fitted her with a correcting her eyesight; that she had others, but was better pleased with Dr. Roach's correction than any other she had tried.
Mr. D. I. Deramus, Verona, Ala. says I got Dr. Roach to fit me with a correction for my eyes after several others had failed to give me satisfaction, and I feel treatment satisfactory in every respect.
Mr. S. S. Scott, Verona, Ala. My eyesight had been a source of trouble to me for years past, and had repeatedly tried first one, then another, but without any results. Dr. J. R. Roach understood my case right away and fitted me up so that I can see better than long time past and my general health has greatly improved.
Mrs. J. G. Downs, Cooper, Ala. Thanks to a correction of my sight by Dr. J. R. Roach, I can see better than for many years. His treatment is highly successful.
Mr. Wiley Foshee, Clanton, Ala. I am taking the prismatic treatment of Dr. J. R. Roach, and after a third change find my eyesight much better now than it has been for years past.
Mrs. J. W. Moore, wife of County Superintendent of Education, says I got a correction of my eyesight from Dr. J. R. Roach, and find my eyesight greatly improved. I thank Dr. Roach for the treatment he has done me, and hope others will also be benefited by treatment.
Miss Edna Rembert, Clanton, Ala. says I am well pleased with the correction of my eyesight by Dr. J. R. Roach. I have suffered a long time with irritation of the eye, and have tried many specialists, but Dr. Roach has cured me where all others had failed.
Mrs. Wiley Smith, Clanton, Ala. I got a correction for my eyes from Dr. Roach, and am pleased with the treatment.
Mrs. R. T. Grant, sister of Clanton, Ala. says I am well pleased with the correction of my eyesight by Dr. J. R. Roach. I have suffered a long time with irritation of the eye, and have tried many specialists, but Dr. Roach has cured me where all others had failed.
Clanton, Ala., May 9, 1903.
Dr. J. R. Roach, Clanton, Ala.
Dear Sir: I wish to state to everyone's benefit that I had intense pains in my eyes, and could not distinguish objects at all, and had been in this situation for over a year. Dr. Roach's prismatic treatment alone (without any medicine) relieved me at once, and now after ten months I see very well, even able to thread a needle with my eyes. I feel deeply grateful to you and hope that any others who are afflicted with their eyes will apply to you before it is too late.
MARG A. FOSHEE

THE MAN ON THE CORNER
The light of the moon, 'tis a glorious sight,
To see the man whom you're anxious to spoon,
You ask her to wed you, you care not how soon—
While the man in the moon is looking.
You go with a crowd in a wagon to ride,
The chains two by two, get your girl by your side,
You take the back seat, whatever be the reason,
The man in the moon will be looking.
The wagon rolls on (this is twist you),
And the chains two by two, get your girl by your side,
You take the back seat, whatever be the reason,
The man in the moon will be looking.
You have the back seat what you say can't be heard,
By your own dear, sweet, little bird,
And nobody else will be looking.

The camp meeting now in progress at Lomax is one of the old sort. An arbor has been erected for the accommodation of visitors, while a cooking tent is provided for the refreshment of the weary. A large crowd was gathered Sunday and considerable enthusiasm was aroused by the human preacher from Cincinnati, Siorey. The meeting will be continued indefinitely.

Sunday night there was an unusual occurrence at the Clanton on the arrival of No. 3. A young man got on the train at Lomax, whom the Conductor charged with not having paid his fare. The young man declared he had paid it, and as he was alighting from the train at Clanton with the conductor, the latter either slipped or was pushed down, and was injured in the fall.

Dr. A. B. Horn, dentist, has moved his office, and can now be found in the old court house building upstairs. His new premises have been repainted and papered, and present a nice neat appearance. He invites one and all to call on him, whether you are in need of the toothache or not.

The camp meeting now in progress at Lomax is one of the old sort. An arbor has been erected for the preaching, and a number of tents for the accommodation of visitors, while a cooking tent is provided for the refreshment of the campers. A large crowd was gathered there Sunday and considerable business was aroused by the man preacher from Cincinnati, Storey. The meeting will be continued indefinitely.

Monday night there was an unusual occurrence at the Clanton train on the arrival of No. 3. A man got on the train at Lo-more, whom the Conductor charged with not having paid his fare.
The young man declared he had paid it, and as he was alighting the train at Clanton with the conductor, the latter either slipped or was pushed down, and was killed in the fall.

Wadsworth.

Crops are fine here, but grassy, you bet two of the Mr. Farmers and Mr. Willie Johnson's crops are clean and they are sure fine. But they are all three hustlers, if they don't say much.

Well, the good Lord has seen fit to remove from our midst our well beloved friend, Mr. Ruff Johnson.
Also the home of Mr. Walter Farmer was visited by the hand of death on the morning of the 17th inst. and taken from that home their sweet little boy of only four summers. To both families we extend our heart felt sympathy and bow in humble submission to the will of the Lord.

Oh, by the way, I have a letter from my old chum, J. L. Johnson, he is still in South Alabama, he reports crops good where he is;
corn, potatoes and cane; early cotton not so good, too much rain.
He says he is in a fine country, he can't get acquainted with the gophers in that country. He is speaking of going to Florida and I can tell you if he grumbles with coming in contact with them where he is, he had better stay out of the Land of Flowers, for I know for a fact that the people down there will take a gopher in making change rather than have your small change. Well, J. L. is away, but his hustling sister, Mrs. Temple, is going ahead with his business, making wine.
gathering grapes and having a good time eating grapes—oh you just ought to see them, they are fine.

Sardis.

Farmers are hustling in this part of the county trying to conquer the grass, for there is plenty of it since the good rains have set in. Crops are very good; corn is fine.

Circuit Clerk E. B. Deason visited his brother, J. D. Deason, Saturday night.

On last Saturday morning a fishing party was composed and all went to Walker's creek, near Mr.
H. J. Groomes on a fishing trip.
Among them were Messrs: J. G.
Minor and family, J. R. Short and family and J. D. Deason and family. We fished and ditched till noon and then a most excellent dinner was served at Mr. Groomes to the entire party, which numbered 31 in all, and in the afternoon we all went back to the creek and such fishing and muddying was never before known on Walker's creek.
The entire party seemed to enjoy the day most pleasantly.

Success to the Banner and its many readers. I bid you all adieu.

FOR WOMAN'S BENEFIT

MIRROR PAINTING

Painting For Every Day Which Women Can Learn and Find Interesting.

Women with leisure time can decorate the mirrors of their homes artistically and beautifully if they are in the least clever with the brush and have even slight knowledge of oil painting.

There are no backgrounds to trouble about and the coloring is laid on in broad tints and without much touching over. The absence of the deeper mysticism of composition and the fact that colored copies suitable to the work can be obtained everywhere, induce many women to apply themselves to this study.

Mirror painting is comparatively easy oil coloring, and the results obtained with flowers are particularly gratifying. For instance, a spray of flowers can be painted easily, since there is no background, and the flowers are treated simply and boldly. The colors should be soft, and such flowers as roses, carnations, passion flowers or jessamine sprays can be branched across the mirror or be hung in drooping sprays from the top of the glass to the bottom.

For an upright subject choose a branch of hollyhocks or a spray of lilacs. Mirrors are much in evidence this season, in all shapes and sizes, and are used for fire screens and wall plaques or as tiles over mantels. They can be had in any shape and are generally framed in oak. Amateurs should remove the glass from the frame and place it on an easel for painting. Even when the wooden frame is to be treated as a part of the picture it is well to paint the mirror first, and then put on the frame and paint it later.

The designs are put upon the surface of the mirror in this way: First a tracing of the design is to be made upon ordinary tracing paper. If a copy is to be made the work is very easy. If the design is original, arrange the selected flowers in a good position, exclude all but the north light, and draw them to size upon drawing paper, and tint them with water colors to indicate their coloring. Where the deepest shadows should fall and where the reflected lights thrown from a transparent leaf or petal to another part of the design appear.

Trace the chief outlines of this sketch, rub the glass quite clean with camellia oil, and lay the tracing paper upon it with a sheet of red carbonized paper between the glass and the paper. With the point of a hard pencil then go over the traced lines steadily, remove the papers, and the outline will be clearly seen on the glass.

Mix a little flake white with medium, mix it to a color that matches one of the flower tints, and secure their outlines by going over them with this color in a fine brush. Match one of the shades of the leaves, and work in leaves and stems with the green mixture, but work in the first painting of the flowers before the outline has dried and before the leaf outline is secured.

The deepest shadows should be worked in first, then the half tints, and lastly the high lights. Mix all these shades on the palette with the medium, apply them with an even hand, and soften and run their edges into each other with a clean and dry brush. Use as little paint as possible; brush it on with few touches and be careful that the outline of each petal is clean, and not ragged-looking.

Then work out the index petals and make the tone lighter than nature. While the paint is drying, outline the leaves and fill in their shadows, medium, reflected and high lights, and leave the work until dry. Then repaint the flowers and leaves, softening the colors, but bringing them up to natural tones, and blending together.

In the final painting add the peculiar markings of the flowers, vein the leaves and lightly apply washes of transparent color where the colors require warming up or toning down.

In painting any flower, the delicacy of touch, perception of color and form and the right perception of light and shade depend upon the painter. Hollyhocks make a good subject, as their coloring, though rich in tone, is never crude. But the individual taste of the worker must be consulted, and there are many flowers so simple in construction that amateur workers can make them successfully.

It is surprising, practised workers say, to note how fast amateurs learn to color correctly.—New York Sun.

Housework For Nerves.

Physical culture is a rather high-sounding term and is suggestive of apparatus, costumes and "professors." It is the fashion in these days of nerves and sleeplessness to take a course at some school or gymnasium. The great number of women, however, who cannot afford the rather exorbitant tuition at these schools may be interested to know that a course in housework is just as productive of good results, if done intelligently—that is, not overdone.

The ordinary work of the house is a sure cure for insomnia and nervousness. Sweeping, dusting and bed-making—where a woman has no serious internal troubles—are very fine exercises, because they bring into play all the vital muscles and organs and develop the body equally. Housework is no one-sided exercise; it is a complete, all-around one.

The body must have regular exercise if good health is to be expected. An occasional drive or a ride in the street cars, or a walk around the corner to see a friend is not exercise. The old adage that disease is death applies peculiarly to the members of the physical body. People who have had long spells of illness have often lost the power to walk and have been obliged to learn over again. It is just so with arms, back, lungs, abdominal muscles, etc. They must be regularly exercised or they will not do their duty in the physical economy.

The simplest remedies, though scorned just because they are so simple and inexpensive, are often the most effective.

Let the women who are out of sorts try a course of the physical-culture housework, and see for themselves what it can do for their capricious appetite and strained nerves.—American Queen.

The American Woman.

How the American woman appeared in the eyes of Max O'Reil, whose recent death was lamented in the United States, England, France and wherever his scintillating wit, his inexhaustible humor and his genial philosophy of men and things found admirers, can be seen in the following excerpts culled from his writings:

"I am perfectly convinced that the American woman has secured for herself the best, the softest berth that it was possible to secure in this world."

"If I could choose my sex and birthplace, I would about to the Almighty at the top of my voice: 'Oh, please, make me an American woman!'"

"The American woman expects a triumphal arch to be erected over each doorway through which she has to pass—and she gets it."

"The Government of the American people is not a Republic. It is not a monarchy; it is a gynarchy, a government by the women for the women, a sort of occult power behind the scenes that rules the country."

"I cannot help thinking that there exists in some American women a little mild contempt for that poor creature that is called a man."

"I have no hesitation in declaring, after six visits to that great and hospitable country, that the American women of good society are probably the most intelligent, bright and brilliant and certainly the best educated and most interesting women in the world."

"Once after a lecture in England I received the card of a young American lady who wished to speak to me. She came and brought in her mother and also a man, who all the time stood in the rear. When we parted she left, followed by her mother. Then I discovered the man, who said to me most meekly: 'I'm the father.' Poor, dear man! he looked so small as he emerged from the background!"

The Tea Frock.

The young English girl of the period is responsible for a rather nice innovation, namely, the tea frock. The tea gown not being considered one of her prerogatives, she has looked around for something in the nature of a graceful indoor frock of simplified structure, and the tea frock is the upshot. Without being a princess robe, it is an all-in-one gown, and, while far from a negligee, it is intended to be worn without corsets. "Vols de sole, crepe de chine and soft silks are developed into tea frocks, and lace is used in profusion, daintiness and elegance being desiderata. The fact that the tea frock dispenses with hooks, eyes, pins and all such weariness is a point in its favor.

Mercerized Four-in-Hands.

Mercerized four-in-hands are worn alike by men and girls. The choice offered is between pink and white, blue and white and pure white cravats.

—Pretty—Things—To Wear

A wide silk elastic belt is ornamented by nail heads of gold.

Nothing is daintier than the horse-hair braid for toques.

Facings of a contrasting color figure on many of the stylish linen rigs.

A black and white checked taffeta bathing suit is exceedingly smart.

Belts of pique and other fabrics are worn to match the shirt waist suit.

Hat, parasol and sash in a strong color are smart accessories for white dresses.

For an all-black dress hat nothing is lovelier than malines in folds or tiny pleatings.

Smart belts are of white calf or patent leather with pearl buckles in harness pattern.

The deep blue and green combination is frequently varied into sky blue with deep green.

Long and narrow buckles to be worn at the back of the belt are steadily increasing in favor.

In the jewelry line there is a fad for hearts and crosses, plain and elaborately ornamented.

Cornflower blue is the first choice for a blue mobair and voile dresses—the deep, rich and yet bright shade.

A quaint little shoulder cape which is in bolero effect at the front has an old-time box pleating about the edge.

A belt of bright red morocco is fastened, without the buckle, by a broad bow of leather from under which come two loops and two pointed ends.

One of the smartest hats noted recently was of white straw, with a green bird perched on either side. These were held down by green velvet ribbons.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Grease Spots.

These may be removed from white linen or cotton goods by using soap or weak lye. If the material is colored, use warm soap suds. If woolen, ammonia and soap suds. If silk, benzine, ether, ammonia, magnesia or chalk.

Washing Handkerchiefs.

This is one way of washing handkerchiefs: Dip them in warm water, soap each one on both sides, fold loosely, and put them in a pile in a basin, without water, to soak for an hour or longer. Rub them on a washboard with a large nailbrush dipped in hot water, boil for a few minutes, rinse in clear water, and dry. Begin the ironing in the center, and not on the border.

Cleaning Steel Blades.

When knives have steel blades they should be cleaned and polished after each using. This is best accomplished if a small basket is kept near at hand which contains a potato, a bathbrush and a polishing cloth. Scrape a little of the brick upon a board, dip the cut end of the potato into it, and use this to rub the blade of the knife free of all stains. Then polish with the cloth and wash the handle in warm but not hot water.

Cleaning Oriental Rugs.

If you have a genuine oriental rug you need not fear to wash it whenever the surface becomes soiled, as the colors are perfectly fast and the rugs have been washed many times before they are brought to this country, says the Chicago News. Fasten it to a smooth, hard floor and wash with strong soap-suds, then rinse thoroughly with clear water to remove every trace of the soap. Squeeze out what water you can by pressing the rug while it lies on the floor and let it dry before removing. In this way it will retain its shape. When dry rub with a soft brush to remove any stiffness there may be. In the summer the rug may be sailed to the side of the barn, and after it is washed can be thoroughly rinsed by turning water on it with a hose.

Stewed Chicken with Dumplings.

One chicken weighing three pounds, one tablespoonful of butter, three of flour, one large onion, three slices of carrot, three of turnip, three plates of boiling water, salt and pepper. Cut the chicken in pieces suitable for serving; wash and put in a deep stewpan, add the water and set on to boil. Put the carrot, turnip and onion cut fine in the saucepan with the butter and cook slowly for half an hour, stirring rapidly; then take up the vegetables in the strainer, place the strainer in the stewpan with the chicken and dip some of the water into it. Mash the vegetables with the back of a spoon and rub as much as possible through the strainer, then skim two spoonfuls of chicken fat from the water and put it in the pan in which the vegetables are to be cooked. When boiling hot add three tablespoonfuls of flour; stir over the fire until a dark brown, then stir in with the chicken and simmer until tender; season well with pepper and salt. The stew should only simmer all the time it is cooking—it should not boil hard. About two hours will be needed to cook a year old chicken. Twelve minutes before serving draw the stewpan forward and let the contents boil up, then put in the dumplings and cook ten minutes. Take them out and let them cook in the heater while the chicken is being dished. Place it in the center of the platter; pour the dumplings around the edge. Stewed chicken is much more economical than roast chicken, and it can also be prepared without the vegetables.—Philadelphia Record.

Recipes.

Soft Gingerbread.—One and one-half cups of molasses, one cup of water, four cups of flour, one-half cup of butter or lard, one teaspoon of soda, one of vinegar. Two spoonfuls of ginger. Bake quickly and do not put it in until the oven is very hot.

Jumbles.—Three eggs, one and one-half cups of sugar, two-thirds of a cup of butter, one-half cup of milk, two spoonfuls of cream tartar and one of soda. Flavor with mace or nutmeg and use flour enough to make a soft dough. Roll out and cut the jumbles and sift a little sugar over them before baking.

Spicelettes.—Two cups of brown sugar, two-thirds cup of molasses, two-thirds cup of drippings, two-thirds cup of buttermilk, two eggs, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, allspice and cloves, one cup of chopped raisins, flour to make drop batter, one level teaspoon of soda dissolved in water. Bake in shallow pan. When cool cut into rings, ice with chocolate and garnish with blanched almonds.

Baltimore Potato Biscuit.—Boil three large potatoes, peel and mash them in a bowl, then beat them light with a half cupful of butter. Salt to taste and add one teaspoonful of white sugar. Stir these well together and beat in a cupful of water. Then stir in a cupful of flour and one well-beaten egg, and finally one cupful of yeast. When it begins to rise stir in flour sufficient to make it a soft dough. It can be mixed at night and in the morning rolled to a half-inch thickness and cut into biscuits. Place these in a baking pan and allow them to rise for an hour or until light and bake in a quick oven.

GOOD ROADS

How to Secure Good Roads.

I have three plans to refer to the conference for your consideration: three plans for the purpose of determining how we shall get good roads. We are not going to discuss the need of these roads or what they will do for us. We are astonished in going into the different communities and into the cities to see the backward condition in street improvement as well as roads. We will not talk about that, but I want to impress upon your minds what to me seem the proper steps to take to secure better roads.

First, if you expect to proceed along the old lines of raising two, three or five mills on the one hundred dollar valuation, it will be another century before you have any considerable road improvement in your community. It will not do. There is something in it, but not enough. There are about 60,000 road officials or supervisors in the United States, and as they will not give their time for nothing, a two or three mill tax is eaten up for expenses. A very large part of this fund is consumed in this way. If it is wise to make a direct assessment, it seems to me you should assess at least seven to ten mills on the one hundred dollar valuation. Instead of having $10,000 to $15,000 in these counties get a fund of $50,000 or $100,000, or more.

If it is not agreeable to you to do that, if it is too much oppression upon the farmer, and we believe it is, then let us advise with you and suggest another plan, which is being adopted mostly in Eastern States. Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, and those States down there have adopted the legislation called the "State aid plan." What is that? The State appropriates perhaps one-half of the money, and the county which gets the road pays one-quarter, and the township in which the road is located the other quarter. Pennsylvania, I believe, has adopted that law within the last two weeks. That brings all interests into it. It brings in the railroads, the corporations, and all great interests; and in these Eastern States a large part of the taxable revenues lie in cities and in corporations.

Massachusetts only has about three-tenths of its wealth in the out-of-the-districts. I believe many States adopt that plan. All should. Mississippi, one, Illinois is another. Iowa is another. These three States are very largely the bread baskets of the United States, and yet, each with nearly 200,000 miles of road, have not yet adopted any system to improve these primary arteries, common roads. It behooves you as men to think that if you do not improve your roads in Missouri, Illinois, and Iowa, the States that have improved roads (and I can show you improvements in the South largely in advance of the North) will go into the market and burn you up and freeze you out. You must build roads to compete in the avenues of social and commercial life.

The third proposition I want to speak of is "Government aid." I have heard it said all over this country that this convention is to be devoted almost entirely to Government aid. That is a mistake. This work will not be carried on entirely with Government aid. Unless you show in these different States and smaller rural communities that you will take hold of these matters and assist with your earnest endeavor, unless you raise local funds and organize the machinery with which to start this work, you cannot expect the Federal Government to come and dump a lot of money into your coffers and have it uselessly expended, as it has been all these years.

There is another very serious question which must be solved, and that is: Can we use the convicts of the several States and Territories in public improvements? If we do not devise some plan to utilize their labor in public improvements, we are toying with the greatest of all social propositions. We are bringing the labor of those men at forty or fifty cents per day into competition with the honest labor of this country. We do not dare to leave them in the penitentiary but a few years longer. We want to throw around them all the uplifting influences at the hands of the State. We want no dark dungeons. God's sunshine and God's pure air will benefit them. We want to do as twelve States of the South are doing to-day: take those men out in squads and put them to work on the roads. They have one guard to twenty men, and they go along building roads for $2000 per mile that in the North with similar conditions, soil, etc., are costing $5000 to $10,000 per mile.—Col. W. H. Moore, President National Good Roads Association.

The President's Plan.

President Roosevelt's plan for good roads is one that will fit every locality in which he makes speeches during this trip, and will find favor with every audience that gathers to hear him. For the last word will probably never be said on this important subject. There's no place on earth where some roads, if not all the roads, leading to it could not be improved and every one who has occasion to travel over them is convinced of the need. Legislatures, corporations and individuals are inclined to do what they can toward bettering highways, though the effort in many cases takes the shape of talk only. And when an eminent person like the President of the United States gets warmed up to talking on the subject he may always feel himself on safe ground.

POPULAR SCIENCE

The late discovery in strawberries of salicylic acid, a specific in acute rheumatism, has seemed to confirm the idea that these berries are a desirable article of food for rheumatics. The effect of the fruit cannot be due to the salicylic acid, however, as less than the hundredth of a grain per pound is found.

Some bacteria, large fungi and rotten wood are known to glow in the dark, but shrubs and flowering plants are not usually credited with the property of phosphorescence. Dr. H. Beckurts, however, has lately discovered an old record of phosphorescence in an Indian grass known to the Brahmins as "diotismatti." The account is of much interest to botanists, but, while the plant has not been identified with certainty, it is concluded that the observer was led into error by phosphorescent bacteria on the grass.

Mount Ararat, on which eight mountaineers recently had a narrow escape from death, attracted the attention of explorers at an early date. Sir John Mandeville estimated that it was seven miles high. Tournefort, the French botanist, attempted the ascent early in the eighteenth century, failed, and described the mountain as "one of the most dismal and disagreeable sights on the face of the earth." A little later a Persian Shah offered a large reward to any one who succeeded in climbing to the summit. Ultimately the first ascent was accomplished by a climber who gave his name to the Parrot Spitz of Monte Rosa. The second ascent was made by one Spassky Afonimof, in 1834, and the third by Herr Abich, in 1843. The first English ascent was made by Mr. Bryce in 1876, and since that date ascents have been tolerably frequent.

Whether the microbes which are constantly present in the intestinal canal of man and animals are essentially necessary to promote digestion, are harmless and unnecessary, or are even injurious, is a question on which various observers have arrived at different results. In the bulletin of the Imperial Naturalists' Society of Moscow, Mile. P. F. Tskilinsky discussed this question. From an examination of the literature of the subject, and from a study of the microbe flora in question, the author is led to believe that, while certain microbes do undoubtedly promote digestion, and, in accordance with M. Metchnikoff's observations, in some cases exercise an antagonistic influence against germs of disease, it is probably possible, by artificial means, such as by variation of diet, to dispense with the bacteria in question, and thus to avoid the danger that they often cause in the living animal.

In computing geologic time, scientists make use of a variety of continuous processes. First may be mentioned river deposits. Throughout the ages the rivers have been depositing layers of sediment at their mouths. In course of time these deposits have been converted into rock, and in calculating the time necessary to produce the various layers geologists have to take account of their volume and thickness. The amount of the deposits equals the amount of material washed away, and by calculating the amount of material carried away by rivers in a given period of time, geologists can estimate the amount of time represented by the different layers of rock. In some such way as this, from the accumulation of sand in beaches, Andrews estimated the age of Lake Michigan. Another system of measuring geologic time is founded on the principle of the evolution of life. Fossils are the records in the case, and account is taken of the amount of change from one full record to the next.

Spiders Sensitive to Color.

A student at the University of Pennsylvania proved the other day that spiders are not color blind. Into a box he put a male and female. The male immediately began to dance before the female with great vigor and abandon, for it is by dancing always that courtship among spiders is conducted.

Now the female was removed and dipped into a little pot of bright blue dye. Then she was returned to the male a strange looking thing in hue, to be sure; only, if spiders are color blind, as many persons claim, she would not have seemed at all strange looking to her mate. He regarded her for a moment closely. Then he turned away. He would not look at her. He was perfectly indifferent.

The female was then removed and cleaned of the dye, and the male on her return became as ardent as before. It was most amusing now to see him dance before her till he fell on his side with fatigue.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Her Plan to Conquer Him.

She was a bride of three weeks, and her eyes were red and swollen as he leaned over the gate of her Staten Island home and talked to her neighbor.

"Yes, my husband had some words with me this morning," she said, "and he got the best of the argument—that's the worst of it."

"Dear girl, that will never do," said the experienced matron. "You can't afford to start in married life that way."

"I know it. I've thought it all over, and when he comes home to-night I'm going to bring him to terms so quick that he'll hardly know what's happened."

"Well, it's only right to show some spirit! What are you going to do?" "I'll bring up the subject again, and then I'll cry!"—New York Press.

MAN-O-WAR HAWKS.
Feathered Highwaymen That So
Threaten the Fish in the Air.
The man-o-war hawk is a somewhat large bird and an expert fisher, but he does most of his feeding in the air.
When the body bird comes from above, he finds the man-o-war hawk "light" for him, and, however possibly he may seek to escape by dashing flight, with much screeching and screaming, he finds that before he can safely set foot on the land he must dispose of a fish or two, which the swift pursuer adroitly catches in the air. It seems, however, to be generally understood as a mode of livelihood between the fisher and the pirate birds that their contentions were only on the wing and that once on land they should dwell peacefully in their separate camping grounds.
The boobies are awkward and unwieldy on land and may be easily captured. They rarely seek to escape when a man approaches, but, accustomed to meet the demands of their familiar enemy, the man-o-war hawk, by disgorging a fish in the air, they frequently resort to the same process and lay at the feet of the intruding stranger what stock of fish they have available. The man-o-war hawks turned this practice to their own advantage by following after any man who might appear among the nesting birds, circling in the air just overhead, ready to pick up the fish which the frightened boobies might give up as a peace offering. The man-o-war hawks were generally engaged for anything and would hover closely, ready to take from the hand of a man whatever he might toss in the air. On one occasion one of these birds swiftly snatched a notebook which lay for a moment on the ground and sailed away, dropping it, however, on finding it to be neither fish nor rat.—Century Magazine.

His Particular Want.
In a certain Sunday school the subject of the lesson was the condition of man in Eden. On a large leaf suspended in the room were named certain gifts with which God had blessed man. Among these was mentioned the giving of a wife. The pastor in some remarks to the children tried to show that man needed company.
"If," said he, "you had a dog at home or a playful kitten or a beautiful song bird, would that be all you would want?"
They agreed that it would not.
"What more would you want?" he asked, expecting that they would answer father, mother, brothers or sisters.
After a pause a little fellow about three years old, with a thin, soft voice, spoke up:
"A wife."
The school broke into laughter, the pastor maintained his gravity with difficulty, and the superintendent disappeared to vent his feelings where he would not be observed.—New York Times.

Cheese as Food.
"People should know and value better cheese as food," said a physician the other day in discussing the diet question. "It is true that freshly made domestic cheese is hard to digest, but nothing is so easily digested as any of the imported cheeses and nothing is more nutritious. Weight for weight Roquefort, Brie, Camembert and Swiss cheeses are more nutritious than the best beef or steak. They are more easily digested, and they give the same sort of nourishment that is derived from fresh meat, so that in the time of a meat famine the well cured and well aged imported cheeses are the best substitute that can be found for beef, and,
as consumed, the best of cheese is cheaper. A twenty-five cent Brie cheese, for instance, will feed more persons and nourish them better than a dollar's worth of beef. Two ounces of these cheeses have the same food value as a pound of the best prime beef."

Two Ducks.
"That duck was fine," said the enthusiastic patron. "I can't imagine anything more acceptable than a nice little canvasback."
"Unless," said the proprietor of the restaurant, "it's a nice big greenback."

Very Remarkable Cure for Diarrhoea
"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death.
My husband spent hundreds of dollars for my physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents cured me." For sale by all druggists,

Try for Health
223 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.
Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption.
It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui.
I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

WINE-GARDUI

KIDNEY CURE.
There is no disease as insidious,
as dangerous, as kidney trouble, which, when it comes, is a heavy disease, and which, if not cured, is a source of great suffering. The first indications appear in the urine, with varied effects. The quantity may be increased or decreased; it is likely to be highly colored and smelly; it may be pale or thin, or thick and milky with a sediment. Later on more possessed symptoms will be present, such as backache, bloating, etc., with marked bladder and urinary disorders.
Persons whose matter is collected by the blood from all parts of the body and carried to the kidneys, where it is separated and cast out through the urine. The kidneys deal with the blood only, deriving nourishment therefrom. Hence, if the blood is bad the kidneys are not only overworked, but undermined. It is, therefore, of the greatest importance to keep the blood pure and healthy. It is plain why the great blood purifier and strengtheners—Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic—has been successfully used in treating kidney disease and in preventing same.
In purifying the blood the kidneys are greatly relieved, while, at the same time, new strength and vitality are given these organs. The following letter tells a very old story:
PINE BLUFF, KY., June 25, 1902.
The Dr. Harter Medicine Co., Dayton, O.
GENTLEMEN: I had a severe case of typical fever six years ago, which left my kidneys in bad order. I have tried a number of remedies and taken treatment from doctors, but Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic has done me more good than everything else. C. CORDELL, Mechanic and Mine Operator.
There are thousands of just such cases as the above that are treated without results because they are wrongly treated. Mr. Cordell's condition resulted from an exhausting fever; the kidneys, as well as the rest of the system, had been wasted by disease. No wonder Dr.
Harter's Iron Tonic promptly cured, because it purified and enriched the blood, and such blood carried new strength and vitality directly to the kidneys and to all the organs.

of trouble to me for years past, and had repeatedly tried first one doctor and then another, but without any results. Dr. J. R. Roach understood my case right away and fitted me up so that I can see better than I long time past and my general health has greatly improved.

I am taking the prismatic treatment of Dr. J. R. Roach, and after past.

Professor William C. Robinson, Clanton, Ala. has consulted several different specialists for his eyes and had been treated by them in the past four years, but none seemed to do him any good. He put himself under the care of Dr. J. R. Roach and by wearing his prismatic lenses has in the course of three weeks time received more benefit than from all the others in four years.
His eyes are now so good that he can read a book without his glasses from him, if he could not replace them.
Professor J. W. Moore, county superintendent of education for Chilton county, had been suffering with his eyes, which his office necessitated him using a great deal, and now after having been fitted with lenses by Dr. Roach, expresses himself as entirely satisfied and has no more trouble.
Mr. J. W. Wyatt, Coosa county, Ala. There are eight members of this one family, and all are loud in their praise of the good resulting therefrom. One son in particular said he "had never got a good look at the world" until he wore the glasses furnished by Dr. Roach.
Deputy U. S. Marshal Frank Goodgame, Clanton, Ala., says he
"had worn glasses bought from here, there and everywhere," and got no satisfaction from them, but that since Dr. Roach has fitted him out he is alright.
Mr. James Curlee, Cooper, Ala.
This gentleman was afflicted with strabismus (cross eye) and suffered for years with headache and had been treated by others without any good resulting. Dr. J. R. Roach is treating him now and has about got the eye straight, the headaches are gone and his general health wonderfully improved. All without the use of any medicine whatever.
Mrs. W. M. McDaniel, Clanton, Ala. This lady says that she had suffered with her eyes for years, but that only under Dr. J. R. Roach's treatment has she experienced any lasting relief.

of his family have been treated by Dr. Roach and all express the utmost satisfaction with the results.
Widow Boyd, of Cooper, Ala.
Dr. Roach has improved her eyesight, as she has been a sufferer for many years.

THE BALKY HORSE.
CURE IT!
Start Him Every Time.
The benefit of those who have claimed a great deal of anxiety by balky horse, but trains as well as others, and sometimes even raised horses, the next time they have the chance to run across a balky horse, how to start him without any trouble of a hundred.
I have tried this once. I have tried it many times, and every time I have tried it people have laughed and bet $5 and bottles of wine that I could not do it. So far I have won every time. This may make you smile, but people are willing to give him a good whipping. The secret of this trick is very simple. I am a firm believer in kindness and proper treatment of a horse can be driven with a "Horse Shooers' Journal."
The Little Finger Nail.
Twenty years ago in certain parts of United States it was the custom to use long nails, I well remember of the swells and puffers who used more attention to their little finger nails than they did to their eyes, and often have I seen the fifth finger with a claw on it an inch and a half long. The nail was carried in a stall, and on occasion was after the manner of a steel or iron pen, so that its wearer could sign his name to a check with it, says a man in the New York Press. The wearing of nails today is an art which gives employment to many pretensions who style themselves nail-trimmers. Nearly every first class, up to the barber shop has its nailbrush, and the man needing a shave cut with an innocent flirtation, dresses garishly and has a strut on that would arouse the envy of a strut fox chasseur.
Where Women Progress.
The Ukraine, Russia, the woman all the courting. When she falls in love with a man, she goes to his home and informs him of the state of feelings. If he reciprocates, all is well, and the formal marriage is duly performed. If, however, he is unwilling to remain there, hoping to coax her to a better mind. The poor fellow must treat her with the least disrespect, for he has the consolation of being able to turn her out, as her presence in such a case would feel bound to leave his home and stay away as long as she is in it. A similar practice in the Ukraine exists among the tribes of Indians. The woman all the courting and also contribution after marriage. To her entire inheritance, is also on her part.
Unique Venice.
Venice is unique and always has long been so. It is the only city in the world on 117 islands connected by between 350 and 400 bridges. There are also, very narrow except in the suburbs of St. Mark's, but the city is the universal means of transportation. When you leave the city, you find the salt waves of the Adriatic and gullies against the marshes and gondolas drawn up along the canals and bays. If you wish to keep all the illusions you can, at the full of the moon—on San Mark's night if the calendar permits—stand before daybreak. Then you can see in your mind a picture of the city of song, story and tradition.
The Corned Him.
A city editor was troubled, not to say "it all," he exclaimed, as he addressed to his department.
"My wife has been asking me questions for the last week, and I don't know how to answer them."
"Under and jumped out of his sleeve and said, 'I feel deeply grateful for the trick she'll make of me,'" said every social, household and other question that comes up, and he is right on hand to take the blame for a long time he remained buried under the ground. Then he resigned.—Brooklyn.

see better than for many years past. His treatment is highly successful.

Mr. Wiley Foshee, Clanton, Ala., I am taking the prismatic treatment of Dr. J. R. Roach, and after the third change find my eyesight much better, while my general health better now than it has been for years past.

Mrs. J. W. Moore, wife of County Superintendent of Clanton, Ala., says I got a correction for my eyesight from Dr. J. R. Roach, and find my eyesight greatly improved. I thank Dr. Roach for the benefit he has done me, and hope others will also be benefited by his treatment.

Miss Rena Rumbert, Clanton, Ala., says I am well pleased with the correction of my eyesight from Dr. J. R. Roach. I have suffered a long time with irritation of eye, and have tried many spectacles, but Dr. Roach has succeeded where all others had failed.

Mr. Wiley Smith, Clanton, Ala., I got a correction for my eyes from Dr. Roach, and am pleased with the treatment.

Mrs. R. T. Grant, sister of Treasurer Alex. G. Dake, has a great sufferer for many years with intense pain in her eyes and her eyes were irritated to such extent she was unable to see
after ten weeks treatment by Dr.
R. Roach, Mr. Dake says his sister is greatly improved in health, and her eyes are free from irritation.

Ala. with
further treated her.

Clanton, Ala., May 9, 1903.
Dear Sir: I wish to state everybody benefit that I had intense pains in my eyes and head and could not distinguish objects at all, and had been in situation for over a year. The prismatic treatment alone (without any medicine) relieved me at once, and now after ten time I see very well, even able to thread a needle with thread. I feel deeply grateful to you and hope that any other who with their eyes will apply to before it is too late.

THE BALKY HORSE.

That's the way it is, said, with him every time.
The benefit of those who have known a great deal of anxiety by balky horse, lost trains as well as money and sometimes even ruined the next time they have the horse to run across a balky horse, the horse had he is, let me tell you how to start him ninety-nine times out of a hundred.

Of course it may fail one time in a hundred. When a horse balks, no matter how badly he balks or how ugly he is, don't use a rope on his legs or even burn straw under his feet. Take a hammer or pick up a stone in the street, and drive it still, take his lines,
and then quietly while you lift up your foot, give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog.
The foot quickly and then chirp to go. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the horse will go right on his business, but the driver keep his lines taut and not pull on him back.

I have tried this once, I have tried
it many times and every time I have tried it people have laughed and said it was a joke and that I was not doing it. So far I have won every time. This may make you smile, but it has more common sense than any other way. People are willing to give him for the secret of this little trick any day. I am a firm believer in kindness and proper treatment. A horse can be driven with a gentle hand and a firm line.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN MARCUS.

On Wednesday morning about six o'clock Mr. John Marcus passed away. He had been sick three weeks with typhoid fever, and everything was done to restore him to health, but to no avail. John was an energetic, good-hearted young man, 20 years of age, and was well thought of by everybody.
He leaves a mother, four brothers and two sisters. The remains were interred at the cemetery, Clanton, on Wednesday evening. The grief-stricken family have our deepest sympathy in their affliction.
May peace be with him.

Sardis.

Everything seems to be moving along smoothly in this part.

There was a barbecue at Mr.
Tom Klinger's on the 11th inst., which was a decided success.
Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, and such a bountiful supply of dinner I have never seen at a barbecue before. The meat was well cooked, and the skill of the good ladies in the art of cooking was well displayed there in the cakes, pies and custards—in fact everything that could be thought of that was good to eat. If I was a young man I would make some of those pretty Sardis girls say yes or no pretty quick. Among the amusements of the day was a wrestle between the champion light weights of the community, Clint Coburn and Walter Roper.
They took three trials and neither one fell, and all the while Coburn had his choice hold, so it seems that Roper still holds the championship. Nearly all the crowd turned out to witness the contest.

We are going to have the Association meet with us in October.
Wonder if the fish-fry folks will help the barbecue folks support it?

White Pond.

On last Sunday morning as the sun came over the eastern horizon shooting his beautiful rays among the green foliage of the forest, according to previous announcement, the people began gathering and by 10 o'clock an immense throng had assembled. At 10 o'clock the house was called to order by Prof. R. D.
Durham, of Jemison, and after a long prayer was offered by Bro. N.
J. Jones of Burwell. J. J. Grant of Verbena was elected chairman, and on assuming the chair made a few appropriate remarks and then appointed Messrs. George Williams Albert Neely and John Barber.
1st lesson, one hour. N. J. Jones of Burwell, 30 minutes. R. D. Dur-

Miss Lena Pyron and others performed at the organ. Recess for dinner one and a half hours. Dinner was spread in the grove and the entire throng were loud in their praises to the ladies of White Pond community for their genial hospitality and fine eatables. The body re-assembled at two o'clock.

2nd lesson, one hour. J. H.
Williams of Tyus 30 minutes, T.
M. Pyron of Verbena 30 minutes.
A recess of 15 minutes was taken after which Prof. Durham was given unlimited time. He made a fine talk on music to a very appreciative audience, at the conclusion of

The Weekly Crop Report.

The Weekly Crop Bulletin says:
"The week, as a whole, was generally dry, cool, and favorable for work; the only rainfall was in light, unevenly distributed showers, and rain is now needed for late corn, gardens and minor crops in some localities in northeastern and northeastern and northern counties; the nights were particularly cool during the first half of the week, though ample warmth was received during the latter half. Cotton is now limbing well and making good growth; grass and weeds have been quite generally cleaned out, and the crop, as a whole, while still late, and fruiting slowly, is more promising than heretofore; much of the crop has been "laid by," there are a few reports of lice and shedding, and a few fields have been abandoned for lack of labor. Corn continues very promising, though needing rain in some few localities; most of this crop, both early and late, has been "laid by," with ears hardening on the early planted. The present outlook is for a good corn crop in this section. Gardens continue to yield well and all minor crops are generally thriving; large hay crops are being made; some early fodder is being pulled in southern counties;
grapes, figs, and pears are ripening,
the former giving a good yield;
late peaches are rotting badly and are making a poor yield."

A Cotton Bale Thirty-one Years Old.

The Brown cotton corner is bringing a great deal of queer cotton to New Orleans. The staple has become so valuable that the owners of cotton gins are scraping the floors, and have made up several bales of waste cotton. Perhaps the most extraordinary bale, however, is one that arrived here from Georgia. It is one of the crop of 1872, and is consequently thirty-one years old. Its owner held out for sixteen cents that year, but when the market broke and cotton went down, he swore he would never sell it for less than sixteen cents. When cotton went up to fourteen cents in New Orleans he shipped it here, to be ready for the sixteen cents he pledged himself to,
with orders to his agent to sell whenever that figure was reached.
The cotton has been stored in one room for thirty-one years and is thoroughly dried out. It lost fifty pounds in the process. Experts declare the staple to be as good as ever.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 38 pounds." It's

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, July 20 1903.

Still speaking of the Missouri delegation in the Congress of the United States, it will not do to ignore the Hon. Maecenas E. Benton, of Neosho, "the little giant of the Southwest." Mr. Benton belongs to the family of Bentons of Missouri, of which Thomas H. Benton was the most distinguished. If he were alive to day he would be proud of the modest little gentleman who bears his name with honor and dignity in the national House of Representatives. Mr. Benton is a very poor windjammer or hot-air merchant. He seldom gets to his feet, but when he does there is some republican who wishes he had kept his seat. He comes about as high knowing what he is talking about as any man in the congress, and is one of the ablest orators in that body. He has had very little opportunity to indulge in pyrotechnic oratory in the House, and indeed he does not care to do so. He knows, as does every one else familiar with the situation, that he is going against the coldest proposition in the world; that he cannot change a vote on the republican side of the chamber and that the democrats who would vote with him any way are either in the clock room telling yarns or else writing letters and will not pay any attention to his remarks. If that is not enough to put a crimp in any man with oratory to unload, what would you call it? Mr. Benton did, however, submit a few remarks toward the close of the first session of the 57th congress that both sides of the House listened to with close attention. He is a member of the Appropriations Committee and he submitted a report of the expenditures of the first session of the republican congress that made some republican eyes become unnaturally visible. His summary or compilation of the extravagance of that first session proved that the republicans were not only responsible for the first billion-dollar congress, but then for the first billion-dollar session of a congress, as the appropriations aggregated over a billion dollars.
Mr. Benton was complimented by having thousands of his reports printed and sent out by the democratic congressional committee as one of its best campaign documents.

Mr. Benton is the first man who ever was discharged from office for "pernicious activity" in politics.
This occurred in 1886 when he was United States Attorney in Western Missouri under the first Cleveland administration. He was soon reinstated and served in that capacity until 1889. There never was a better democrat on earth than this original "offensive partisan," and his constituents compliment their own intelligence by retaining him in congress.

The Littauer glove contract is still agitating the War Department and official Washington. On account of the peculiar relationship existing between President Roosevelt and Congressman Littauer, the question is on the tip of every man's tongue. "What will Roosevelt do about this latest scandal that gets close to him? At a Harvard College dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York on the 23d of February, 1900, Roosevelt declared with pride and emotion that his closest personal friend and political adviser was Mr. Lucius N. Littauer, member of congress from New York. To quote his exact language: "I want to tell you that it is a congressman who is my most intimate personal friend, and who is my closest political adviser."

"Who is he?" came from all sides.
"Lucius Littauer," said Roosevelt.
The laws of the United States forbid a member of congress to take any government contract. The New York Sun, a republican newspaper, friendly to Mr. Roosevelt, of course reveals the fact that Mr. Littauer, during the Spanish-American war, manufactured some five hundred thousand dollars' worth of gloves and other supplies bought by the United States Government. A man named Lyon got the contract from the Government, and Littauer made the gloves for Lyon. In a letter to Lyon, Littauer asks whether (Littauer) shall go and see the responsible War Department official, General Luddington, "in regard to other glove contracts." And Lit-tauer's brother acted as bondsman for Lyon in the procuring of contracts.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain.

PURE SUNLIGHT AND AIR.

There are those who have heard of "sunny Italy" or the "clear light" of Egypt, and they have often said, "I wish I could live there." But, believe me, there is no place on earth so healthy and so pleasant as the sunny slopes of the Sierra Madre or the uninhabitable deserts of the Colorado desert.

Pure sunlight requires for its existence pure air, and the old world has little of it left. When you are in the mountains and stand upon that hill where all good Romanists go at sunset, look out and see how dense the atmosphere between you and St. Petersburg. That same thick air is all over Europe, all around the Mediterranean, even over in Mesopotamia and by the banks of the Ganges. It has been breathed and burned and battle has been fought for 10,000 years.

Ride up and over the high tablelands of Montana—one can still ride there days without seeing a trace of humanity and how clear and scintillant, how absolutely intangible, that sky sunshot atmosphere! You breathe it without feeling it, you see through it a hundred miles, and the picture is not blurred by it. Once you are over the enchanted means of Arizona at sunrise or sunset, with the sagged mountains of Mexico to the south of you and the broken spurs of the great Sierra around about you, and

Report on River Improve- The Fis ments Received Per

in charge the improvement of the War
Week Worker and Timber

The condition of the work on the Black Warrior above Tuscaloosa is that three locks have been completed, one lock eighty per cent completed, and seven locks not yet begun. With available funds it is proposed to complete the work on lock and dam 4, and with future appropriations to carry the work of lock and dam construction on up the river.

On the Warrior below Tuscaloosa, locks 1, 2 and 3, on the lower portion of the stream, were begun under contract in May. Contract work on the work in early. Contract work on lock 4 was continued with about five months' interruption, owing to floods during the winter and spring. On June 30 last the contract work on this lock was about 98 per cent completed. The contract work on locks 5 and 6 was completed and the locks turned over to the United States.

The present condition of the work is that one lock is completed, one lock fifty-five per cent completed, one lock completed except slight work on gates and three locks just begun. With available funds and additional appropriations it is proposed to build locks and dams one, two and three and complete work on lock and dam four.

On the Tombigbee river the work of the last year was largely confined to surveying, but one lock is two-thirds completed.

"In order to open navigation from side water to the Warrior coal field," says the engineer, "and to make available the work already done in the river, provision should be made by the immediate completion of lock and dam No. 1, Tombigbee, and for putting under contract the remaining two locks and dams of this river.

At the time of the completion of the project, will provide continuous slack water navigation from Mobile to a point about thirteen miles above Tuscaloosa. In addition two more locks and dams above Tuscaloosa should be provided for in order to extend navigation twenty-five miles into the coal fields. For reasons of economy contracts should be let for the completion of locks and dams named above."

The balance available on June 30 last for work on the river was $598.

Completing the existing project is indefinite. The amount that can be profitably spent in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, in addition to the balance available July 1, is $210,000.

He fell between the wheels and was badly mangled before the machinery could be stopped.

Raising the Wind.

It seems incredible, but is nevertheless a fact, that as late as the year 1814 an old woman named Bessie Miller of Pomona, in the Orkney Islands, sold favorable winds to seamen at the small price of sixpence a vessel. For many years witches were supposed to sell the wind. The Finlanders and Laplanders made quite a trade by selling winds. The old woman, after being well paid by the credulous sailors, used to knit three magical knots. The buyer was told he would have a good sale when he untied the first knot, the second knot would bring a strong wind and the third a severe tempest.—Irish Times.

A Sand Tree of Prussia.

We are accustomed to regard sand as utterly barren, but the plants native to the coast sands of Prussia have been enumerated by naturalists, whose estimates vary from 171 to 234 varieties. Of these one of the most available is the Arundo arenaria (marram), which thrives only in sand and in the salt air of the beach. This in time serves to prepare the soil for larger plants.

Her Neighbor.

"I can't understand your dislike for Mrs. Nextdoor," said Mr. Goodart. "She seems a nice, quiet, home loving woman."
"Think so?" replied his wife.
"Yes. She certainly appears to be a busy little body."

The Art of Working in Gold.
The Romans copied the Greek and Etruscan goldsmiths' work, though they also often used the ornaments themselves taken from the ancient tombs. Much of the art of the ancients in working gold was lost until early in the nineteenth century, when Signor Castellani found some of the Etruscan methods still being employed by workmen in a village in a remote corner of the Apennines.—London Times.

Weekly Crop Report.

The Weekly Crop Bulletin says: "Very nearly the average warmth was received, though temperatures ranged rather high on some days, and a few of the nights were cool; the sunshine was ample; the rainfall was mostly in widely distributed and insufficient showers, though locally heavy in a few places. In many northern, central and some southern counties rain is much needed; locally damaging wind, rain and hail storms occurring in Bullock, Chilton, Clay, Hale and Talladega counties on the 24th. Cotton is still late and comparatively small, but is now clean and growing well; the greater portion has been 'laid by,' but, while it is fruiting well in some fields, it is generally running more to weed than fruit, though, in some places, half grown bolls are reported; rust, blight and shedding are reported from a few widely scattered localities; the crop, as a whole, continues to make a very slow, but steady improvement. Early corn is practically made, and promises a very good yield; late corn is still generally promising, but needs rain; in fact, in some places it is failing rapidly for want of moisture. Gardens, cane, peanuts, sorghum, sweet potatoes, and field peas are still doing well, but would be benefited by a general rain. Melons continue generally inferior, though good in a few localities; comparatively little fodder has been pulled, as yet; grapes are rotting in some vineyards, but are making a generally good yield; apples are making a good yield; pears fairly good, but late peaches are generally inferior; fine hay crops are being made; the second crop of Irish potatoes is being planted in some places.

A Community Without a Sabbath-School.

Had you ever thought of it? What a sad picture it is to see the dawning of a beautiful Sabbath morning, when all nature is bright and gay, and even the little birds are pouring out melodious notes of praise to their Creator, and a community of people cold, indifferent, without a Sabbath-school for their children to attend.

In that community, instead of working together and laying firmly the foundations of a temple of justice and loyalty to Christ in the hearts of the boys and girls, the people are heedlessly, noisefully and almost unconsciously hammering away on the walls of a temple of carelessness, indifference, recklessness, which is sure to lead to moral degradation and cause many to fall far below the great things God intends for them in this life.

How many such communities have we in Chilton county? I'm glad to say there are but few. A large majority of our people are awake and discharging the sacred duty, which they owe to their children; but the few are yet quietly reposing in the land of carelessness. Parents, are you faithfully working to throw around your children the strong elevating influence of Sabbath-school, or are you letting your sons and daughters drift away into careless, indifferent, useless lives?

Lightning Precaution.

An electrical engineer declares that the center of the room is the safest place from lightning.

"There is a constant tendency on the part of the electricity in the sky to reach the ground," he says. "To do this it must have a conductor. Atmospheric electricity always follows the outside of the conductor or agency that leads it to the ground. That's why the middle of the room is safest during an electrical storm."

"I know of a number of instances where a bolt of lightning followed the walls of a room, burning it on all four sides, while the people in it, being away from the walls, were only slightly shocked. That is the only safe precaution known to science."

A State Dinner in Venice.

In 1552 the patriarch of Aquileia, fed Hancuccio Farnese, the pope's nephew, in the palace on the Giudecca. The rooms were decked with extraordinary sumptuousness, cloth of gold, paintings and illuminations adding to the effect produced by the patriarch's cooks. Among the guests were twelve gentlemen in fancy marine costumes of green satin with red lining, wearing caps of the same colors and each accompanied by a lady dressed in white. This repast lasted four hours, varied by music and the professional entertainers of the day. It ended with the cutting up of certain large pies from which live birds flew out into the room. The guests strove with each other to catch these birds.

Discourteous Courtier.

Once upon a time the prime minister went to the king and complained that a certain courtier, who was very hard of hearing, had been making very uncomplimentary remarks about his sovereign.

"Your majesty should speak to him about it," said the minister, "that it may cease, but you must needs speak loud."

"I will speak so loud," answered the king, "that I guarantee the offense will never be repeated."

He then sent the offending courtier to the guillotine.

RICHARD WILLIAM VAUGHAN

The First English Born Foreigner and the Story of His Fall.

The story of the first English born foreigner, Richard William Vaughan, is little known. Vaughan was the brother of a Stafford lawyer and became clerk to a solicitor in London. He wished to marry his master's daughter and promised to produce the sum of £1,000, which, he said, his mother would present to him, half of it to be settled on his wife. On these terms the father consented to the marriage, and Vaughan obtained a month's leave of absence. He occupied this period in obtaining engraved impressions in imitation of twenty pound Bank of England notes, which was not such a difficult matter then, such things as forged notes being unknown. With fifty of these sham notes he presented himself at the appointed time, and his fiancée accepted her share in perfect good faith, and the marriage preparations were proceeded with.

Unfortunately he wanted ready money and put two of his own forged notes into circulation. They were challenged, when he became alarmed and tried to get back the notes he had given to the young lady, but she refused to yield them up, suspecting nothing of their true nature, and when Vaughan was arrested next day she would hardly believe even then that she had been deceived.

The forger was tried at the Old Bailey on the 7th of April, 1758, spending what was to have been his wedding day in the condemned cell. Four days later he was hanged at Tyburn.—London Standard.

Logical.

"I could have married either Whipper or Snapper if I'd wanted to, and both of those men whom I refused have since got rich, while you are still as poor as a church mouse."

He—Of course. I've been supporting you all those years. They haven't.

Two Signs.

"To snuff a candle out accidentally is a sign of marriage."
"Yes, and to turn down a lamp intentionally is a sign of courtship."

Perhaps the reason a woman doesn't keep a secret is because she's afraid some other woman will tell it first.—Chicago News.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

The diplomatic mix-up of the republican administration as the Russian and Manchurian question is causing a good deal of hilarity here among democrats and some uneasy wonderment among republicans as to the final outcome. It is known here that the remarkable statement lately given out by Assistant Secretary of State Loomis, during the absence of Secretary of State Hay, to the effect that the Kishineff affair and the Manchurian question concerning the open door policy were intertwined interdependent, and must, therefore, be considered together, was inspired by no less a personage than President Roosevelt himself. When Secretary Hay hurried to Oyster Bay and informed the President that he had "played the dickens" in giving Loomis any such instructions, the President quickly "slept stepped" and left poor Loomis with the bag to hold. The veriest tyro in diplomacy would have known that the two questions had no more to do with each other than the Alaskan boundary dispute has to do with the Breckitt county tunds, and Assistant Secretary Loomis probably knew it when he was promulgating the remarkable statement that went out to the country, but he was obeying the instructions of his chief who was simply trying to play some politics and got his "gee" leg over the "haw" traces. Secretary Hay's recent statement to the effect that he had obtained Russia's consent to the open door in several important ports in Manchuria has still further complicated matters. He made the unqualified statement that he had things "fixed." Now, Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador to this country, comes out in a statement and says it isn't so, and that Secretary Hay said nothing to him about the matter, and there you are.

A good many people who cannot be accused of brooding, nevertheless are sticking their hands down in the pockets of the people just at this time. Nearly every man who is high enough up on the pay rolls of the Government seems to be seized with an insane desire to go out on a junketing trip this summer at the expense of the people. The Secretary of the Navy, not long ago, took a big bunch of Congressmen and took a whiz around the West Indies on a government vessel and the people paid the bill. The President's family then took his "private yacht," which is a government vessel, and proceeded to their summer home at Oyster Bay. The vessel is always ready for use for pleasure parties for the Roosevelt children, going to boat races or taking Miss Alice to the city, when she feels that she needs a paper of pins. Not long ago the members of congress who were on the Naval Affairs Committee in the last House, took a Government vessel and started out on a junket with the ostensible purpose of inspecting the different fortifications along the coast of the country, and the naval needs of the country. What right these members have to make the people pay for any such trip is more than any man can tell. There is no official naval committee in existence, so far as the House of Representatives is concerned. How do these men know they will be placed on the Committee on Naval Affairs when the next House is organized? They do not know it, and yet they are squandering the people's money for the ostensible purpose of potting themselves on the needs of the people in the way of naval expenditures. The chances are they will see more "high balls" than they will cannon balls, and more "kings" and "queens" than they will naval necessities. Postmaster General Payne, who has been made "sick," presumably by smelling the stench in his department, is the latest to take a Government vessel, and with his family get out on the deep blue sea where he can smell the perfume of the brine instead of official corruption. And the people pay the bill. Well, why shouldn't they? They are responsible for the millions accumulated in the Treasury. They voted a tariff tax on themselves that would pile up a surplus of cash in the Treasury, and this is the only way to get it back into the channels of trade, unless they take a notion to quit taxing themselves for the benefit or trusts, tariff barons and junketers.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. IRON SHIPMENTS

Annual Statement Issued by Southern Iron Committee.

The annual report of the southern iron committee has been received. The report embraces the shipments of pig iron, cast iron piping, steel billets and steel rails from the several southern districts, including a comparative statement for last year. Notwithstanding the recent decline in the shipments of this class of freight from Birmingham, the increase in the tonnage from that district is really greater than from any of the others.

The report shows that for the year ending June 30, 1903, there were shipped from the southern district 96,374 tons of steel billets and 4,815 tons of steel rails, a total of 101,189 tons of steel.

Cast iron pipe shipments during 1902, amounted to 162,387 tons, and for 1903, amounted to 166,795 tons, an increase of 4,408 tons in the face of the enormous increase of foreign material imported to this country.

Under the caption of pig iron, steel billets and rails, the report indicates that a total shipment during the year was had of 1,837,154 tons, as against 1,690,956 tons for the year 1902. This amount indicates an increase of 156,198 tons for the year just closing.

The most interesting comparative statement in the report is that of pig iron, cast iron pipe, etc., as captioned for the year 1902 and 1903, as follows, for six of the southern districts:

District—	1902	1903
Anniston	364,121	331,337
Birmingham	922,242	1,000,487
Nashville	113,699	120,115
Shelby	229,650	171,350
Chattanooga	46,244	61,159
Chattanooga	247,337	311,901

Totals 1,843,343 2,003,949

By deducting the total steel shipments, which amounted to 101,189 tons, from the total of steel and pig iron shipments, it is seen that the total of pig iron shipments was 1,735,955 tons.

GRAY REFUSED.

Thinks It Out of His Power to Be Fifth Arbitrator.

The selection of Judge Gray as the fifth member of the miners' arbitration board was announced Saturday. A telegram from Judge Gray stated that it would be out of his power to accept the position.

The four members of the commission of arbitrators who are to take part in arbitrating the wage scale and contract between the operators and United Mine Workers in this district have gone to Wilmington, Del., for the purpose of calling on Judge Gray and persuading him if possible to accept the place.

Everything at the mines is in readiness for instant resumption of work as soon as the miners decide to begin, which will be as soon as Judge Gray or who ever is finally chosen for fifth arbitrator consents to act. If Judge Gray accepts, President Flynn, of the miners, will at once telegraph to Secretary J. L. Clemens and the men will be promptly notified. It is hoped that work may be resumed on Wednesday or Thursday at furthest.

Survey Completed.

Colonel J. A. Montgomery, surveyor of the Birmingham, Huntsville and Gulf railroad, has completed his preliminary horseback ride from Birmingham to Huntsville over the proposed route of the road.

The route passes through a rich agricultural mineral and timber section. This district through which the new road will go is naturally the richest part of Alabama.

There is an excellent ford across the Tennessee river at Eddy, and an easy place to gain the summit of Sand Mountain.

The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway has placed an order with its local shops for 250 cars, and the work of building them will begin in the next few days. The shops have just about 700 35-foot box cars.

Two unknown men were cut to pieces near Ft. Payne, Friday night, by a fast passenger train.

Furnaces Banked.

Of the twenty-five operative furnaces in the Birmingham district, eleven of them have for one reason or another, been closed down or banked for some time past. Some of them were banked for lack of coke and others because they ran short of limestone.

It is stated on good authority that seven more furnaces were to be banked, making in all eighteen, or nearly 75 per cent of all in the district.

At Gadsden Henry Morgan was struck by a brick which fractured his skull and penetrated his brain an inch. After the subsequent operation he walked home.

They Watched Him.

After traveling nearly four thousand miles since the 14th of this month, 100 members of the Alabama Press Association returned Sunday. The party has been to Canada. It stopped two days in Chicago on the return trip.

At Chicago the members of the association presented J. A. Rountree, secretary and cutting manager, with a handsome gold watch. The speech of presentation was made by Judge S. L. Fuller, of Cullman.

ASLEEP IN ST. PETER'S

Pope Leo Finally Interred Saturday Night.

The body of Pope Leo was interred in St. Peter's Saturday night. At Sunday the most important and most solemn of all the obsequies took place. The front doors of the basilica were closed and the vast church, except for a row of lights at the shrine of St. Peter, the candles about the bier appeared deserted. About one thousand persons received invitations to attend the ceremonies. Monsignor Capetelli conducted the ceremony.

The bier bearing the body was received by Cardinal Gregalia. It was placed in the center, backed by an altar with a beautiful image of the Madonna, before which were burning four immense candles in silver staffs. Around the two sides of the chapel in the choir seats were thirty-six cardinals.

The body was sprinkled with holy water, absolution was given and the foot of Leo XIII. was kissed for the last time. The major domo then covered the venerable features and hands with a white silk veil, bordered with gold. Over this the prefect of ceremonies spread a large red silk veil, which covered the whole person.

Fire was lighted in a brazier and blown by a bellows, the sparks rising almost to the ceiling, while Monsignor Bartolotti read for twenty minutes the Oratio Brevis, eulogizing the dead pontiff. The notary pontifical, 84 years of age, read out of the burial record a service which he performed upon the occasion of the deaths of Pope Gregory XIV. and Pope Pius IX.

The monsignors of the basilica, aided by the noble guard then laid all that was mortal of Leo XIII. in a cypress coffin, lined with red satin and bearing on the cover an inlaid cross. The entire sacred college and Prince Colonna rising to their feet as a last tribute and sign of respect.

When the body had been carefully put in the coffin it was entirely covered with the red velvet covering, which before had been resting on the bier. The major domo put beside the body two silk purses containing coins of silver and a bronze medal struck during Leo's pontificate. An eulogy, written in magnificent Latin and setting forth the great events of Pope Leo's life and reign, enclosed in a metal tube, was also interred with the body.

When all had been arranged the supreme prayer was said and the last benediction was given, all present joining. Half suppressed sobs were heard on all sides.

The second coffin was of lead and very heavy. On the cover at the head was a cross, just below which was a skull and crossbones, while below these were the arms of the late pope with the triple crown, but without the keys, as they signify living victory.

This coffin was sealed personally with the arms of the camerlingo. The major domo of the chapel of the basilica lighted a brazier which was used in soldering the coffin, producing sounds and sights strange to hear and see in a church. These two coffins were then enclosed in a casket of polished walnut without decorations.

When the last supreme moment came the heavy coffin, weighing in all 1322 pounds, were rolled out of the chapel, preceded by mace bearers and choir singing as they went, and followed by all the cardinals, and was placed in the stone sarcophagus above the door, where it will remain until the pontiff shall erect a suitable tomb in the basilica of St. John Lateran, which was chosen by the pope himself as his final resting place.

Thus was Pope Leo consigned to his long rest.

Revenue Collections.

The annual preliminary report of Commissioner Yerkes on the collection of internal revenue and the condition of the service shows that for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1903, the total collections amounted to $230,740,352. A decrease as compared with the year 1902 of $41,127,607.

That Irish potatoes can be grown above ground has been fully demonstrated by Clark Snow, of Oxford. He had two vines on which good-sized tubers appeared as do tomatoes. From one he gathered ten, from the other fifteen. He has now planted the twenty-five and will watch results with interest.

The corner stone of the negro college building was laid under the auspices of the colored Masons, several visiting lodges being present. About 3,000 of the race were present. Dr. Council, of Normal, and Dr. Lee, of Tuskegee, were the speakers.

Under Way.

Operations were commenced Monday on the new building for the Barrett Manufacturing company, makers of tar roofing, ready roofing and everything in that line. They will employ about seventy-five men at the commencement. The building will be completed in about three months. The cost of the erection alone will be about $12,000. This firm is the only one of its kind in Ensey.

PRATTVILLE MURDER

Two Prominent Business Men Involved.

Maury O. Jones shot and instantly killed James Givhan at the cotton oil mill in Prattville Tuesday morning. He immediately surrendered to Deputy Sheriff W. J. Roseman, and is in custody till he can have a preliminary trial. Jones is well connected in the county and was employed by W. W. Dunham in looking after the shipping of lumber from the various mills. Givhan was manager of a lumber mill near by and Dunham handled a portion of the product of this mill. Last Saturday morning the two men became involved in a personal dispute concerning some lumber to be shipped and Givhan used much abusive language to Jones. This morning dawned town the two men came face to face with each other. Jones asked Givhan to shorten the time required to refine heat, it now being possible to make but ten or twelve heats per week in each open-hearth furnace of 50 tons capacity.

The T. C. I. process is a success, and that it will be so in a technical sense there is practically no question. It will considerably increase the steel output of the plant, though what the cost of production will be remains to be seen.

No New Track.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal in reference to the Illinois Central railroad using the tracks of the Frisco System into Birmingham, says:

It now seems that the Illinois Central is to operate over the old Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham tracks into Birmingham, and the idea of its own rails to that city is abandoned by the Illinois Central management.

It is reported that this idea originated with George Gould, who has been busy of late promoting the scheme of harmony among the railroads in the Mississippi valley. Mr. Gould considers the building of another railroad in the Mississippi valley between Memphis and New Orleans apologize for the abusive language used toward him on last Saturday. No sooner was the request made, so witnesses say, than Givhan drew his 41-caliber Colts and began firing upon Jones. Jones ran in the back door of the cotton oil mill office and came out with a double-barrel shot gun with which he opened fire on Givhan. Givhan was in his buggy when the fatal shot was fired. He fell out and expired instantly.

Making Steel.

The following is copied from the Wall Street Journal: The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company is now installing adjunct Bessemer converters at the Ensley, Ala., steel plant, which it operates under lease from the Alabama Steel and Shipbuilding company. An experiment on a small scale was concluded some time ago, which the management felt warranted applying the process on a large scale.

The purpose of the adjunct converters is to increase the output of the regular open-hearth steel plant by as much as 100 per cent. The process already there, hence his solicitude for friendly trackage arrangements.

The Frisco navigates to deep water in the south and the Illinois Central enters the great iron fields of Alabama and neither road will have to build a mile of track.

Struck Natural Gas.

John Tate, who resides three miles west of Cleander, near the Tennessee river, has struck natural gas while digging a well for water. The gas burned to a height of eight feet when ignited.

Birthday Party at 103.

Sylvia Langdon Dunham, Connecticut's oldest centenarian, celebrated the 103d anniversary of her birth at her home in Southington by entertaining the members of Ruth Hart chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Meriden.

New Coal Company.

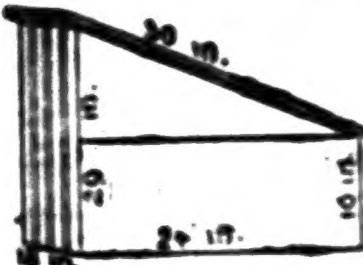

Arrangements have been completed for the formation of the National Coal and Coke company with $5,000,000 capital and $2,500,000 in bonds which will practically take the place of the Frick Coke company in the general coaling business since the latter has practically withdrawn from the market. Almost $2,000,000 of the total bond issue, it is said, has been underwritten, and it is expected the remainder will be closed early this week. Two great tracts of coal, comprising over 10,000 acres, will be developed also and 300 ovens will be built.

The Magnolia, the second largest ship built in the United States, was launched Saturday. She is 615 feet 3 inches in length, can carry 1700 passengers, will draw laden 32 feet of water and will be used in the Philippine-China trade. An extension of the Southern Railway is building from Knoxville to the Georgia line, 200 miles, and a new company is laying a road in North Carolina, to connect with this new branch somewhere in Tennessee.

AGRICULTURAL

A Cheap Chicken Coop.

An inexpensive chicken coop can be made from one thirteen-foot hemlock board, a few feet of shingle lath for frame and two or three wall lath for slats, as I will briefly describe. Cut board into three twenty-four inch lengths for sides, two thirty-inch lengths for roof, and one eighteen-inch length for back. Cut one of the twenty-four inch lengths from top of left to bottom of right to form the sloping sides, as shown in the illustration. Use lath to cover joints in roof. The rest is self explanatory.—E. E. S., in Farm Journal.

Reap and Kindred Diseases.

With the approach of autumn cold rains begin to fall, sudden changes of weather follow each other, and unless we guard the fowls closely they contract colds which develop rapidly into roup, and before we are aware of it the work of the entire year has been wasted and the whole flock is rendered worthless.

At this season of the year many of the hens are only partially through with their moult, and are in no condition to withstand any neglect. Their vitality has been exhausted, and they fall an easy prey to all diseases that have their origin in neglect. They should be housed where it is dry and not be allowed to stay out during rainy days.

Their food should be of the best—not an overabundance of one day and starvation portion the next, but just what they need at all times. If they moult slowly, give them old meal or green cut bone, and force the new coat of feathers before cold weather is upon them.—Home and Farm.

Benefits of the Home Separator.

My experience is that more separators are being used than has been the case. There certainly is a change of farm practice in this respect. Home skimming has several advantages over creamery skimming, among which may be enumerated the following: The work of the dairy is more quickly done. The skimmed milk is warm and good for the feeding of the calves. It is not half water, as is too often the case with the creamery product.

The careful dairyman need not run the risks of disease among calves due to the reckless management of some creamery patron.

He will have no quarrel with neighbor or creamery manager over getting his share of the skimmed milk. A great saving in hauling milk to the creamery is made, for he delivers only the cream ready for ripening, and this is but four or five per cent. at most of the total weight of the milk. Co-operation in hauling the cream to the creamery can be easily arranged. I know of eight neighbors who thus co-operate, all having separators, who take turns in hauling the cream of the other seven. Thus each man takes the cream of eight for a week, when another takes his turn in succession; hence each man is on duty one week in eight, instead of having the daily round of milk delivery, with often the tedious waiting for the skimmed milk before returning. There are other advantages that will suggest themselves to the thoughtful dairyman, among which is that the quicker milk is separated after it is drawn from the cow the finer will be the cream.—Fruit World.

Home Made Cheese.

Home made cheese can be made at any time and it is the very choicest of all cheese. Go to any store and get some ready-prepared rennet tablets. Having these and your milk, you are ready for manufacturing. Bring the milk to a temperature of eighty-five degrees Fahrenheit. Put it in a tub or large churn, which must be very clean and sweet. Stir in the rennet tablets, previously dissolved in water; cover the vessel with a clean cloth, and let it stand one hour. Being now "set" it can be cut into small squares. Wait a few minutes and then place a cloth over it and dip the whey through the cloth. Now reach in and break the curd, which will liberate additional whey. Dip this off and continue the process until the whey supply is completely exhausted. Now wet a cloth in whey, and spread it in an ordinary bucket. Lift the curd into this bucket, place over some vessel so that all the extra whey may pass out. Then heat some of the whey, to about 100 degrees, and pour it slowly over the curd. Work it well with the hands, and then salt it to suit the taste. It is now time to get your cheese hoop, which it is presumed you have previously provided for the occasion. Line it with a clean cloth, first made wet with whey, and place it on a clean plank. Put in the curd and close the corners of the cloth smoothly over it. Place on top a cover just large enough to fit inside the hoop, and weigh it down. In twelve to fifteen hours take the cheese out of the hoop and turn it over, after removing the cloth and putting another clean one in its place. Let it remain thus twenty-four to thirty-six hours, then take it out; keep in a tolerably warm room till properly cured, which will require from four to five weeks. It will then be ready for use, and will be found the best cheese manufactured by human hands. Try it and satisfy yourself.

to the truth of this.—F. E. Richer, in Agricultural Epitomist.

Cultivation to defeat drought. While the general practice is to cultivate merely to kill weeds, the most progressive farmers are making use of frequent cultivation to conserve moisture. There is more or less moisture at all times in the subsoil, and it is here that the plants get enough water to carry on growth through the summer. This water is brought to the surface through what is known as capillary attraction. The capillary tubes, as they are commonly called, conduct the water to the surface, and what is not used by the plants is thus lost by evaporation.

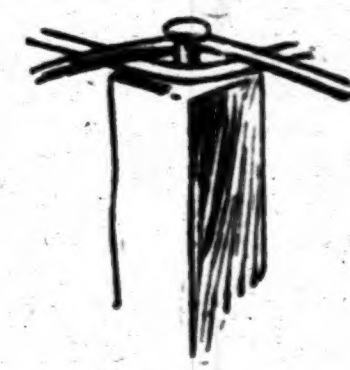

The object in intensive cultivation is to break off, as it were, these capillary tubes near the surface, so that the water will be prevented from evaporating. In a short time, however, new tubes are formed and evaporation continues, but if cultivation is frequent evaporation is kept in check and the plants use most of the water brought from below. Any one who has lifted a board, a stone or a pile of rubbish during a dry period is impressed with the moisture which has accumulated beneath it. The same condition will be found in a field frequently cultivated. The surface soil is made a mulch, which holds the moisture beneath it.

During a very dry season which prevailed a few years ago, Roland Morrell, the well-known peach grower of Michigan, kept cultivators and harrows going through his orchards every day for a period of several weeks. Although the dust flew in clouds he conserved the moisture for the trees, and the result was a crop of fruit which sold for several hundred dollars per acre, whereas his neighbors in adjoining orchards, who did not cultivate obtained practically no crop at all.

Cultivators, harrows or graders should be made to work shallow, not over two inches deep. If hard crops are cultivated two or three times a week, fair returns may be expected even in such a dry season as this. It is essential that cultivation be given immediately after a rain or shower in order to conserve all the moisture possible, and to prevent its evaporation, which takes place very quickly at such a time.—New England Homestead.

Sometimes a single wire is strung along the row of raspberries and the individual bushes are tied to this. A better plan is to use two wires. First it is essential that the row be straight; then as it is to last for a number of years, do not stint in the matter of end posts. We have used driven posts with braces, but find them inadequate as they quickly freeze up or pull out of the ground. We are now using seven-foot half-round cedar fence posts saved in half. These are set two feet deep in the ground and are transverse to the row. No braces are used.

Fastening near the top of the post at one end pass No. 12 or 16 wire down one end of the row. Unless the wire is several hundred feet long the wire may be drawn sufficiently tight by hand. Let it pass once around the end post and down the other side to the starting place. In the row, at intervals of twenty-four to thirty feet, drive stakes to stand eighteen inches above the ground. In the tops of these drive a nail, leaving the head projecting half an inch. Gather up the wires so as to include all the canes and cross them at each stake as shown in illustration. This will hold up most of the canes, but midway between the stakes the wire will spread. This is prevented by connecting the wires once or more times between successive stakes with a wire link as shown in the figure.

To make these links rapidly, take the same sized wire used in the rows and pass it over a sharp angle of iron, as the edge of an anvil, strike with a hammer, cutting it in six-inch lengths. With pliers turn each end toward the other, but not far enough to meet. These are easily applied or removed. The number required will depend upon the tightness of the wires. A row treated in this way bears its fruit up out of the reach of sand and high enough to be of comfortable picking, still its value would be but half show if I should not briefly describe how the vines are treated later.

Immediately after the fruit has been harvested, the old canes are cut at the base by a long-handled pruning or hedge shears. This is done with the wires still in place and leaves the operator perfect freedom to reach the canes and to see what he is doing. Then the wire links are removed and the wires uncrossed from the tops of the stakes, after which the wire on the side where you wish the brush to lie is drawn aside, dragging most of the dead wood with it and the rest may be quickly removed with a fork or millett hand.—J. M. Shull, in American Agriculturist.

THE STORY OF A TENNIS RACKET AND A BARON'S MAIDEN.

She was a demure looking girl, young and slight, and her hair hung to her forehead in babyish little rings. In her hand she held a tennis racket. Three of the strings were "sprung."

She explained to the salesman in the big sporting goods house that the racket was an expensive one, that it had broken at the first trial, that the fact of its having done so had caused her much annoyance, as she had bought it for a birthday present. In conclusion she was here to return it.

The salesman noted the babyish curls, and, adopting the manner of a bored but rather good natured cat to an irresponsible kitten, he promised to share the racket with her.

"But I don't want it re-strung," said the girl. "I want a new one."

"Oh, but I can't give you a new one," said the clerk reprovingly. "This one has been used."

"Yes," said the girl meekly; "it has been used, and therein was my mistake. You see, I fancied I had bought a tennis racket and so described it to the recipient. He foolishly believed me and used it. Had we both known that your firm was charging $7 for paper mache souvenirs fashioned after the form of a racket, why, he would have put it upon his wall as a decoration. Yes," she continued politely; "I admit we erred in using it." And she smiled prettily.

Then she gave her address and walked out. The next day the firm sent a new racket. — New York Times.

The Rainbow.

When a ray of sunlight falls on a raindrop, it is refracted; then part of the light is reflected from the internal surface and again refracted on leaving the drop. The white sunlight is not only refracted when it enters and leaves the drop, but dispersion also takes place. The eye sees bright circles of light for each kind of light, and since sunlight is made up of different kinds of homogeneous light we get a series of circular arcs, showing the spectrum colors, the red being outside and the other colors following in the order of descending wave length. The whole constitutes a primary rainbow. A secondary bow is sometimes seen outside the first. This is formed by the light being twice reflected inside the raindrops. The less refrangible rays are on the inner side. Rainbows due to still more internal reflections are too feeble to be observed. It is possible to get a white rainbow if the sun is clouded or if there is a mixture of raindrops of very different sizes.

Very Remarkable Cure for Diarrhea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for my physicians' prescriptions, a diet treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Boque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents cured me." LOOK OUT FOR MALARIA.

An epidemic of Malaria is sure to follow the wet season and the high waters which have prevailed all over the South. Malaria and kindred fevers will develop to an alarming extent. General health conditions will be bad; every precaution should be taken.

The System Most Especially So Fortified to Resist Malarial Attacks.

A trial of fifty years has demonstrated that for this emergency, Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic has no equal. Iron is the fighting element in the blood, and the kind of iron supplied by Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic is just the kind the system requires to successfully combat malarial conditions. Don't wait until you are attacked. Take it now and fortify yourself; it is an absolute safeguard and, at the same time, it is the best tonic and invigorant for the entire system. On the other hand, quinine disturbs the system and its cumulative poison begets greater physical troubles than those it is employed to remedy.

Where a bad case of chronic Malaria already exists, take DR. HARTER'S FEVER AND AGUE SPECIFIC. It is guaranteed to cure. Price 50 cents. BUT IF YOU WILL

You Won't Have Malaria. Price $1.

PRISMATIC TREATMENT A SPECIALTY

Imperfect Eyes are Often the Cause of Numerous Ailments, as Headache, etc.

CONSULT Dr. ROACH AND BE CURED

Read below a few of the numerous cures Dr. Roach has effected in your immediate neighborhood.

Miss Willie May Parnell, Stanton, Ala. For some time this young lady had suffered intense pain in her eyes and was at the point of giving up her studies, when she consulted Dr. Roach, who treated her eyes and furnished her with a pair of Prismatic glasses, and she has not experienced any trouble since.

Mr. Rome Winson, Cooper, Ala. has a little daughter, about 10 years old, who had been taken from school on account of trouble with her eyes, but after Dr. Roach had examined her eyes and given them prismatic treatment and fitted her with proper glasses, she resumed her studies in a few days and has had no trouble since.

Mr. G. W. Watkins, Billingsley, Ala. This gentleman took the course of prismatic treatment and not only has no more trouble with his eyes, but his hearing, which was very defective, has greatly improved.

Mr. G. W. Watkins suffered from nervous trouble and the sight of his right eye was so poor that he could not distinguish objects. After wearing Dr. Roach's Prisms one week she can see as well with that eye as with the right one. Her general health, appetite, etc., is now better than her years past.

Mr. W. A. Culmer, Clanton, Ala. has suffered a great deal from nervous trouble. He took a course of prismatic treatment from Dr. Roach and now has no return of the trouble.

Professor William C. Robinson, Clanton, Ala. had consulted several eminent specialists for his eyes and had been treated by them in the past four years, but none seemed to do him any good. He put himself under the care of Dr. J. R. Roach and by wearing his prismatic lenses has in the course of three weeks time received more benefit than from all the others in four years, and states no price could get his glasses from him, if he could not replace them.

Professor J. W. Moore, county superintendent of education for Clanton county, had been suffering with his eyes, which his office necessitated him using a great deal, and now after having been fitted with glasses by Dr. Roach, expresses himself as entirely satisfied and has no more trouble.

Mr. J. W. Wyatt, Coosa county, Ala. There are eight members of this one family, and all are loud in their praise of the good resulting therefrom. One son in particular said he "had never got a good look at the world" until he wore the glasses furnished by Dr. Roach.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Frank Goodgame, Clanton, Ala. says he "had worn glasses bought from here, there and every where," and got no satisfaction from them, but that since Dr. Roach has fitted him out he is alright.

Mr. James Curlee, Cooper, Ala. This gentleman was afflicted with strabismus (cross eye) and suffered for years with headache and had been treated by others without any good resulting. Dr. J. R. Roach is treating him now and has about got the eye straight, the headaches are gone and his general health wonderfully improved. "All without the use of any medicine whatever."

Mrs. W. M. McDaniel, Clanton, Ala. This lady says that she had suffered with her eyes for years, but that only under Dr. J. R. Roach's treatment has she experienced any lasting relief.

J. R. Billingsley, Thorsby, Ala. This gentleman and two members of his family have been treated by Dr. Roach and all express the utmost satisfaction with the results.

Widow Boyd, of Coosa county, Ala. This gentleman has been suffering for many years with his eyes, but after Dr.

Giuseppe Sarto, Patriarch of Venice, has been elected Pope, and has assumed the title of Pius X.

THE mass meeting, called by Mr.
W. H. Shaw, was held at the court house yesterday (Wednesday) at 11 a. m., about 300 attending.

Hon. L. H. Reynolds called the meeting to order and nominated Moses Robinson for chairman and he was duly elected.

Hon. L. H. Reynolds nominated Felix Fitts for secretary and he was duly elected, but declined to serve.

Hon. L. H. Reynolds thereupon nominated J. W. Moore, and he was dutifully elected.

Hon. L. B. Pounds made a short talk, in which he said he recognized the Populists had no organization, State or National, but "we are going to do all we can to grasp and hold possession of public affairs next time."

Hon. L. H. Reynolds explained that he had invited Hon. M. W.
Howard, Judge Longshore and Dr.
Crowe to address this meeting, but they all with one consent had made excuse.

Hon. L. H. Reynolds then called upon a number of gentlemen, who made short talks, most of them declaring their readiness to stand together and to vote for any ticket nominated by the people.

Mr. Shaw announced that at the proper time his committee would prepare a plan of campaign, and the meeting adjourned at 1:30 p. m.
In the afternoon W. R. Healey, Socialist organizer, who had come down from Birmingham for the occasion, delivered an address explaining the theory of Socialism, but the lateness of the hour he closed precludes us from going into details.

SOCIALISM AT $1.50 PER DAY.

THE following is taken from the "Appeal to Reason," a Socialist paper, published in Kansas. It tells its own tale and carries a moral with it.

The Appeal has a very interesting letter from L. B. Pounds of Thorsby, Ala., who formerly represented Chilton county in the State legislature as a Populist.
Comrade Pounds says: "I wish to state that I have been reading the Appeal for some time, and when I began I had an idea that Socialism was an iridescent dream, wholly impracticable, etc.
I have long watched the development of capitalism and the exploitation of the producers of wealth, and in the days of the Farmer's Alliance I became an organizer and later an official of the People's Party. I saw the result of my work destroyed by fusion, and the cunning craft of capitalism. So my hopes died out. seeing the general stupidity and servility of the working classes. I said I will lay my mouth in the dust, I will hide away from the conflict and let the dance of death go on. But since getting a true insight into Socialism, the old fire has rekindled, and a burning desire to get into the thick of the fight, to engage in the battle fills my mind. And since the war has begun in Alabama I want to say that I am ready for the fray, and realizing the absolute necessity for reaching the farmers, as they constitute three-fourths of the voters in this State and since seeing the call for speakers at $1.50 per day and expenses, I therefore offer myself as a special missionary among the farming class. I am a farmer myself, and am thoroughly familiar with the temperament and conditions of the Alabama farmers, and believe I can interpret Socialism to them."

FROM CLANTON TO CANADA.

CLANTON TO BIRMINGHAM.

From the Sunny South to what many people imagine is the bleak country to the north of the United States is a fairly long journey and one that is full of interest. We shall traverse six States of Ontario and Quebec in the Dominion of Canada, and while in many respects we shall find the same conditions of life existing all through, yet there are many points of difference that are both interesting and instructive. But we will start at the beginning, so all aboard at Clanton and let us join the Alabama Press Association, on its annual excusion, merely noting as we run through Chilton county that crops are looking fine.

BIRMINGHAM TO CHICAGO.

'Twas a jolly crowd of about 180 persons that left Birmingham at noon on July 14 in a special train of four Pullman coaches and a baggage car over the L. & N., and once clear of the Magic City we speed along at a lively rate through the mountains of North Alabama, where not much cultivated land is to be seen until after passing Cullman we get into the Tennessee valley and crops are looking in fine condition. A few minutes stop at Decatur, then away through Athens and shortly after we pass the State line and are in Tennessee, and after a run of seven hours from Birmingham we reach Nashville and stop for supper.

Night has set in when we leave Nashville and all are making themselves comfortable when, after an hour's run the train comes to a stop and enquiries being made it is found that a wrecked freight train blocks the road and a delay of two hours occurs while a temporary track is laid around the wreck.
Then on we go and the weary crowd turns into bed, and the train passes across Kentucky and into Indiana.

Next morning bright and early (we are all early risers on these trains) as we rush through Indiana and into Illinois we note the splendid condition of all crops in these fertile States and the morn passes away until we reach Chicago at noon, three hours late, and the first stage of our journey is reached. It has been a pleasant run so far, and we are glad to take a stroll through some of the streets of Chicago, but we must not go far as we have only three hours here now, and we will have more time on the return trip.

CHICAGO TO PORT HURON.

Punctually at 3 o'clock we pull out from Dearborn Street station on the Grand Trunk system, the train being in charge of Mr. R.
McC. Smith, the genial Southern Passenger Agent of the road, from Detroit, and Mr. H. R. Charlton, of Montreal, Advertising Agent of the Grand Trunk, and we find these pleasant gentlemen a valuable acquisition to our party all the way through. Soon we are out of Chicago and Illinois, and rushing across the northwestern corner of Indiana, through South Bend, where that Studebaker wagon of yours was made, and the huge works look big enough to make sufficient wagons to supply the world. Next we come to Fish Lake, a large sheet of water owned by the Swift Packing Company, who have here a cold storage plant;
in the winter months solid blocks of ice two feet and more thick are cut out from the lake and stored away for future use. But we have no time to tarry, we are soon in Michigan and early in the morning reach Battle Creek, on the Kalamazoo river, the home of the far-famed Battle Creek Sanitarium, and goodness knows how many flour mills and breakfast food manufactories.

Off again, through smiling fields
of wheat, etc., and fine orchards, through Lansing, the capital of the State, of which we can see but little, and all through the day we race across the State of Michigan, the smooth and well made road bed of the Grand Trunk making the rapid motion of the train soothing and pleasant. At midnight we are approaching the borders of Canada and will soon be out of the United States and on British soil.
With the exception of the three hours stop at Chicago, we have had an almost continuous run of 60 hours from Birmingham, or 62 from Clanton. But it is late, you are tired and want to go to sleep, so I will leave you to make a night run to Toronto, and I will stop off and have a look at Port Huron, where the customs officers inspect the baggage to find out if any smuggling of contraband goods is going on, before we pass into Can- ada.

PORT HURON TO TORONTO—A LITTLE DISGRESSION.

I was told our train would make a stop of fifteen minutes, so walked off out of the depot for a short stroll, but lo, when I returned in less than ten minutes our special was disappearing in the distance and I was left behind. "Hullo, here's a nice fix," said I, and then enquired when the next train to Toronto left and was told one would pull out in a few minutes, so I got aboard and made myself comfortable for the night. On leaving Port Huron the train passes through the famous St. Clair tunnel, under the St. Clair river, which connects Lake Huron and Lake Erie. This tunnel is nearly two miles in length and was built at a cost of $2,700,000. It is a wonderful piece of work, and resembles a huge iron pipe.
Emerging on the eastern side we are now on British soil, at Sarnia, Province of Ontario. I arrived at Toronto at 8 in the morning, one hour later than the Association, and rejoined the party at the hotel.
Before leaving this little digression
I want to express my hearty thanks to the courteous conductor of the regular train, who I found to be "A rare old Irish gentleman, a boy of the olden time."

TORONTO.

The "Queen City" of Canada is well worthy of its proud title. It is a queen among cities in many respects. Fine, broad streets, well paved and kept thoroughly clean, it is a pleasure to walk and admire the handsome and well stocked stores, elegant residences, magnificent public buildings, beautiful parks and numerous churches. A city of a quarter of a million inhabitants, the temperance lover finds it a queen city indeed. Not one saloon is to be found throughout the length and breadth of Toronto.
The licensing laws permit a hotel having not less than ten bedrooms to run a bar room under strict regulations, and an intoxicated individual on the streets is a rarity.

Toronto is the capital of the Province of Ontario, and the Parliament building in Queen's Park is a splendid piece of architecture.
Close by is the University building, of which any city might well be proud, not only for its grand reputation as an educational institution, but also for its architectural beauties. The City Hall is another magnificent structure, said to be the finest municipal building in the world, and one can readily believe it. It was built at a cost of over $2,000,000.

That the people of Toronto are pious Christians is evidenced by the fact that there are 262 churches of all denominations in the city, their lofty spires meeting the eye in all directions. There are two Episcopal cathedrals, St. James' and St. Alban's, both fine specimens of ecclesiastical architecture, while the Roman Catholics have a splendid cathedral dedicated to St.
Michael. The Baptist and Methodist churches are both fine buildings, and in fact every church edifice in the city is a credit to it, all are well-built, substantial buildings of architectural merit.

A new hotel, the King Edward,
has just been opened, and is one of the finest hotels on the American continent, while I must not omit to say that the Arlington, where the Association stopped, is one of the handsomest and most home-like hostelries it has ever been my good fortune to meet with.

Stretched along the shores of Lake Ontario, the breeze from the lake renders the atmosphere in the summer months cool and pleasant, while the nights are of the right temperature to induce healthy slumber, more especially if you have been sight-seeing all day.
The harbor is large and provides a safe refuge for the largest vessels in the lake trade, while in easy distance of the city the islands have been converted into public parks, making delightful summer resorts, where the weary can recuperate inhaling the invigorating breeze.

But I find, in my enthusiasm for the beautiful city of Toronto, I have exhausted my space, forgotten all about the Press Association, and must wait until the next issue of THE BANNER to continue my story.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Aug. 3, 1903

Before this letter is read by the good people of this country the state of limitations will have run, and Mr. Perry S. Heath, Secretary of the Republican National Committee and former First Assistant Postmaster General, and the Lord knows how many more, will be free from danger of indictment on account of anything that may have come or will come out of the precat investigation of Post-Office Department rottenness. It is the general belief here among the people who are "in the know," that Perry Heath was one of the first men spotted by Bristow, and enough crookedness found to bring him to the bar of justice. It also is believed that Hanna then went to see the President and a deal was made whereby Heath's scalp was saved and the party saved the humiliation and degradation of seeing its Secretary of its national committee dragged before the bar of justice for hoodluming. On the last day of July, however, the statute of limitations allows Heath and all others who are not now in the clutches of the law, and who quit the department three years, to breathe freely and give the people the "hoarse boot." Thus do some people go unwhipped of justice and the people never will know who are in order to chastise them at the ballot box should they ever ask for office in future. The President has now demanded of Bristow that he get through with the investigation by the first of September. In other words, the thing must be out of the way before congress convenes, and any man who is not caught by that time will go free. Until there is a change of administration the people will never know how much was stolen by the postal gang.

I wish to call the attention of Secretary Cortelyou and the Department of Commerce, whose business it is to obtain and publish facts against the trusts, to at least one great trust that is doing business openly and in most brazen defiance of the laws. The Iron Age of July 25, page 29, contains details of "The Steel Billet Pool." This trust is a revival of the association which has,
at intervals, been doing business for many years. The members of this new pool are the United States Steel Corporation, Jones & Mc-Laughlin Steel Company, Wheeling Steel and Iron Company, Cambria Steel Company, Pennsylvania Steel Company, Lackawanna Steel Company and Maryland Steel Company.

Meetings are held at New York every day, at which enquiries and sales are regularly reported. The agreement refers exclusively to prices, which have been established for the principal points of consumption, and which are quoted in the Iron Age. This trust, like its prototypes, the Steel-rail Pool, the Sheet-steel Association and dozens of others, with which the United States Steel Corporation is mixed up, are trusts in every sense of the word, not only under the Sherman anti-trust law, but in the eyes of the common law. All the Department has to do is to obtain, in legal manner, the facts as published in regard to all these trusts and the Attorney-General will have no trouble in squelching them. Why are these great law-breakers not now at the bar of justice? Are the trusts above the laws?

There is sullen silence, but gnashing of teeth and angry looks in and around the War Department these days when the name of Leonard Wood is mentioned in the hearing of some of the old veterans. Of those whom love of Roosevelt hath singled out the name of Wood overlooks all the slate of army officers intended for promotion. There is pathos as well as injustice in the fact that scores of gallant and accomplished officers of the civil war are to be retired and denied forever the chance that is marked out for the President's playground pal.
Simply because Wood has been the friend, confidant and playfellow of the playful young man who happens to be President of the United States, Leonard Wood, five years ago an army doctor, with the rank of captain, has been continually and rapidly advanced in rank.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

Not Over-wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For

A Pleasant Party.
On last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sartor were "At Home," complimentary to their lovely guests, Misses Hurst and Gallegher, of Anniston. Hanging from the trees were Japanese lanterns, resembling immense fire-flies, shedding a soft, mellow light over the large yard; and when one tired of "flinch," which was played in the brilliantly lighted parlors, they could walk out into this miniature fairland, where seats and swings were arranged for the comfort of the guests. Delicious ices and cakes were served. The following are indebted to their gracious host and charming hostess for a delightful evening: Miss Essie Charles Stewart and Osmond Middleton;
Miss G. L. Chandler and Ernest Hopkins; Miss Annie Davis and Jim Middleton; Mrs. Gamma
Anderson and N. A. Kicker; Miss

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA, AND THE GREAT SOUTHERN COLLEGE.

It is to be expected, perhaps, that the most energetic and fastest growing city in the South should have the best business college. But the Birmingham Business College is remarkable even for so progressive a city as Birmingham, Alabama. It is one of the largest, the most up-to-date and the most successful of the great Southern institutions for commercial instruction and training.
It is the only business college which pays railroad fare of its students and guarantees satisfactory positions to its graduates. In speaking of the school's success and future prospects, President Willard J. Wheeler said:
"We are pleased and surprised with the phenomenal success of our college and its wonderful growth has stimulated us to greater endeavors. Our graduates are eagerly sought after by prominent business establishments and many concerns have placed their names on our waiting list, offering situations to the first available graduates."
President Wheeler will be glad to send, free, to any applicant, the 15th annual catalog of the institution with complete information regarding course of instruction, terms, boarding, expenses, etc.

Save the Children.
Ninety-nine out of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and
these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it.
It keeps their little stomachs sweet
and encourages their growth and development. Mrs. Henry Carter, 705 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three
years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born.
I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good.
After using one bottle of Kodol he is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach
sweet. Sold by Hopkins Drug co.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.
"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A.
Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor.
I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form, either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For

At Sea on Land.

A clergyman who had neglected his knowledge of natural science was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors.

He was discussing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

A half concealed snicker spread over the room, and the clergyman knew that he had made a mistake.

After the services one of his listeners came to him and said, "Mr. —, have you ever been at sea?"

The minister replied:

"No, unless it was while I was delivering that address."—New York Times.

Lightning's Affinity For Oak. Electricity in the clouds, like its companion lower down, loves to seek the earth, the great reservoir of all electricity, and it finds the most available way to do so, choosing always the best conductor, conspicuous among which are the much maligned lightning rod, the high trees or the elevated steeple. It has its choice of trees as well as other things and will leap over half an acre of trees to find an oak, for which it appears to have a special attraction, and it will pass a high point to find a building that has metal about it.

Oldest Tree In the World. The Rev. W. Tuckwell in "Tongues and Trees and Sermons in Stones" says: "The oldest living tree in the world is said to be the Sema cypress of Lombardy. It was a tree forty years before the birth of Christ." But Alphonse Karr in his "Voyage Autour du Monde" says of the baobab (Adansonia digitata), "It is asserted that some exist in Senegal that are 5,000 years old."—Notes and Queries.

Of Great Value to the Village Library. Books are chosen—constituted and bylaws to start a library.

The village library is growing and more an indispensable adjunct to American village life. It is the reason in the New York Times. It comes into existence and then grows rapidly, almost spontaneously, in the towns. Intelligence and public spirit are the two main factors in its development. It is the result of the smallest community's desire to have a library. It is the result of the smallest community's desire to have a library. It is the result of the smallest community's desire to have a library.

Even a small library must be on a practical working basis. Its written constitution must not merely contain rules for its work and the duties of those concerned in this work, but must be practical and judicial beyond any such letter of the law. The writer hopes to submit the following constitution, which may be used by those who would like to have a village library. It is a very modest footing to begin with, but it is not quite sure of what definite regulations and additions ought to be included in its constitution.

ARTICLE I. THE PURPOSE OF THE VILLAGE LIBRARY. The purpose of this association shall be to acquire, collect, and otherwise beneficial literature within the community of the town in the interests of the library.

ARTICLE II. THE LIBRARY. The library shall be a collection of books, periodicals, and other literature, which shall be open to the use of all the residents of the town. The library shall be open to the use of all the residents of the town. The library shall be open to the use of all the residents of the town.

ARTICLE III. THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE. The library committee shall be composed of five persons, who shall be chosen by the residents of the town. The library committee shall be composed of five persons, who shall be chosen by the residents of the town. The library committee shall be composed of five persons, who shall be chosen by the residents of the town.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Rights We Saw, and Some We Saw Not.

Isn't it high time something was being done to secure a principal for the Clanton Academy? So far as I know nothing has been suggested or even thought of and it will only be a few more weeks to school time. Generally, the school business is largely in the thoughts of our citizens, but this time there appears a lack of interest that is truly surprising. For several years past, under the management of Professors McMorris and Collier the Clanton Academy has held a high position in the thoughts of our citizens, but this time there appears a lack of interest that is truly surprising.

A suggestion has been made that would be well for our Clanton merchants to form a Commercial Club, whose work would be to advance and push the interests of the town. A commercial club gives prestige to a town, and when strangers at a distance are making inquiries of a place it gives them greater confidence to get their information from such a representative body of citizens. If some of our leading merchants will take hold of this proposition it will undoubtedly materially assist in the future upbuilding of Clanton.

Few men were better known in this section than James M. Stanfield, who departed this life last Thursday morning at the age of 72. He had been a good and useful citizen for a long time, and the esteem in which he was held was shown by the large attendance at the funeral. The Masons, of which order he had been a leading member, turned out in great strength and made an imposing procession. There is a peculiar solemnity about the funeral rites of the Masonic fraternity, and this was enhanced by the deliberate manner in which G. Higgins, W. M., performed his part in the ceremony. Mr. Stanfield was laid to rest under the spreading branches of a majestic oak, there to await after life's fitful fever, the sound of Gabriel's horn.

The dead in Christ shall first arise at the last trumpet sounding; they shall be raised up in the sky, and caught up to meet Him in the air, with joy their Lord surrounding.

All our merchants are busy these days getting in Fall stock. I believe more freight has been received at Clanton lately than ever before at this season of the year.

Howard, one of our most lovely young ladies. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Partridge at the Baptist church. The church was handsomely decorated with beautiful flowers and evergreens. As the couple went up the aisle to be married Miss Mattie Moody played a lovely wedding march. We wish them a long life of peace and happiness.

FATAL STABBING AT ENERGY.

On Wednesday morning a fatal stabbing occurred at the home of Mr. Albert Seymore, two miles from Energy, on the Cooper and Dixie road. Mr. Seymore was the Road Overseer and it appears had some words the day before with Wiley Friday about the working of the road.

Wednesday morning Friday was passing Seymore's house and it is supposed the argument was renewed, there being no witnesses present, and Friday drew his knife and stabbed Seymore to the heart, and he fell dead at his feet.

Friday has a big bruise and a cut on the back of his head, which he claims was made with a rock in the hands of Seymore, and that he drew his knife in self defense. He states that when Seymore saw him coming along the road, Seymore picked up something and came to meet him, then abused him and knocked him down, then he drew his knife. Sheriff went out to arrest Friday, but he came into town and surrendered himself. Bond was made in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the preliminary trial to be held next Wednesday, 19th inst.

Seymore, who had been thrice married, leaves a widow and baby, four young children by his second wife, and a son in Perry county by his first wife.

Not Over-wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Clanton, Aug. 12, 1903. Editor Banner—On Thursday, July 30, some unknown person or persons sent to the M. E. parsonage one barrel of "Lily" flour, and on the end of the barrel was this inscription: "Rev. D. B. H. Jeffcoat, an individual present." I take this method of expressing my sincere thanks for such an expression of love and friendship. I pray God's richest blessings upon the giver or givers. Gratefully, D. B. H. JEFFCOAT.

In Memoriam.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. John Mims Aug. 7th, and took the spirit of a loving companion and mother from earth to glory. Mrs. Mims has been a member of the church for a number of years. The funeral took place at Walnut Creek church, and her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery Aug. 8th. While her departure is our loss it is heaven's gain. We should not mourn, as those having no hope in the resurrection of the spirit; we should be prepared always to meet our friends and relatives, who have gone before, in the city of the New Jerusalem. JULIA PARRISH.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy. It's the best Salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when Burns, Sores, Ulcers and Piles threaten. Only 25c, at Clanton Drug Co. and Hopkins Drug Co.

CLANTON, ALA.

For high-grade work requiring great precision and excellence there is to be found in nearly every leading machine shop in Germany a group of American tools—a silent tribute to the remarkable position held in the world today by the American machine tool's work.

According to the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, because he has seven children a respectable rent-paying tenant of a large apartment house in the metropolis, has been served with a dispossession notice by a landlord who has no children but who maintains a dog. "My children are well-mannered and orderly," says the victim, "and we always pay our rent. I was ill with walking and worrying, until Saturday night I found a landlord who would take us. I trembled when he asked me about my family, but when he did not glare at me and turn away at the others had I could have kept for joy. So we are going to have a home after all. We have none too many children, but if we are further blessed I don't know what we will do unless the president of the United States comes to the relief of big families with an order to landlords forbidding refusals on that ground."

The passing of the sapirary is at hand. He goes to join the gold-beaters and shoemakers, asserts the American Inventor. Holland is the home of the diamond cutter. It used to be done by hand, and this was without any relation to the laws of optics and refraction. No matter how expert the cutter might be, he could not make each facet exactly the same as the others. Now an American has invented a machine that will do this with mathematical exactness and in proportion to the laws of refraction. Brilliance is thus obtained at a sacrifice of some material, but the results are so satisfactory that the American style of cutting is the only kind that is in demand now. Machines have been sent to Holland and set up there, and the old hand experts are no longer of any consequence in the trade.

This matter of choosing an occupation is the most serious crisis in the life of the young man. When circumstances do not take the case absolutely out of his own hands he is confronted with the great question of individual responsibility. So much depends upon what he wants to do with his talents, whether to make money or fame, to do good or to set a shining example, or to work out some pet doctrine or theory. Aptitude plus chances of pecuniary profit constitute the dominating factors in a great majority of cases. But not always aptitude. Personal liking for a line of work does not necessarily constitute special qualification. The sands are strewn with human wrecks that have foundered on the rock of unfitness, even though propelled by an abundance of the power of interest and enthusiasm. On the other hand many are the failures due to an aptitude minus application, a talent for doing a special thing without the power to keep hard at work. Success comes to some men too easily for their good.

How many parents do you think add a word of advice on the spending of the money that they so freely give? Well, of these 632, says a writer in Harper's Magazine, 290 testified that they parents did not think it worth while to direct them. Oddly enough, it was the Germans, the Swedes, the Italians and the Spanish fathers and mothers that came out strong on the question of advice. The American parents were left behind, although seventy-four of them did try to help their children. But how did the children take the advice? A ten-year-old boy frankly said: "My father advises me to save it (ten cents a day), but I say what is the use? I have all I need." "My mamma advises me to save, but my papa does not, so I spend it all on candy," cheerfully admits a little girl, and it does not take much insight to picture the kind, easy-going father whose lack of advice quite offsets the more methodical mother's care. "I generally get money when I ask for it, which is about every day or so. I spend it as I desire. I usually spend it for candy and other things, which in a way are foolish. If I want to do as my parents advise me I would save my pennies," confesses an eleven-year-old boy. "My parents advise me what to buy, except when I buy for them; then it is my secret," wrote one little girl.

NEWSPAPERS

May Hereafter be Handled by Baggage Men on Trains.

Postmaster General Payne has decided to make the experiment of employing baggage men on trains which are not provided with mail clerks to take charge of and deliver open newspaper mail. This decision has been reached after much consideration and in response to a petition filed by many of the leading newspaper publishers of the country, who asked the postoffice department to provide facilities for distributing open bundles of papers along the lines from trains which carry only closed pouches.

There are a large number of such trains and as the department is not represented by an employee on them the postmaster general declined to assume responsibility for papers not included in the pouches. Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger then suggested the expedient of employing the baggage men to take charge of this mail in such cases and the suggestion was adopted. The plan contemplates that the baggage masters shall be sworn in as postoffice employees and that they shall deliver the papers to those to whom they are addressed at points along the line from the car doors, this saving much time.

STARTS AT ONCE

And Will Pay All of Its Creditors in Full.

A settlement has been effected in the suit involving the affairs of the Southern Car and Foundry company, as results of which all the different plants belonging to the company which have been idle since the original receivership suit was filed in New Jersey, will be started up at once.

In the federal court all the creditors of the company submitted an agreement giving Judge Clark jurisdiction over the plants, some of which are in Tennessee and others in Alabama, and authorizing him to name receivers. Clark appointed T. G. Bush, of Birmingham, Ala., and Thomas A. Gillespie, of New Jersey, joint receivers for the company, and authorized them to start all the plants in operation and pay off the creditors.

It is stated that the company, under this settlement, will be able to pay all creditors in full.

The Monster is Waiting.

The new furnace of the Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron company at Gadsden will be started very soon. It all depends on just how quickly coal and coke can be gathered together to warrant the starting up of the furnace.

The new furnace at Gadsden is supposed to be the largest in the state, having a larger bosh diameter than any other. Its daily capacity should be between 200 and 300 tons of iron, and it is believed that it will be a fine quality of iron.

Rountree Committee.

President Yerby, of the Alabama Press Association, has appointed, and they have accepted the appointment, the following to investigate the charges against Secretary Rountree, of the Alabama Press Association: H. S. Doster, chairman, Prattville; M. W. Camper, Florence; John C. Lawrence, Union Springs.

The committee is urged to at once fix the time and place of holding sessions.

Interstate Shoot.

The Hermitage Gun Club has invited the Huntsville Gun Club to go to Nashville on September 7 and hold a match shoot. The invitation will probably be accepted. The Hermitage Club has already taken two matches away from the Huntsville club.

Veteran's Reunion.

The members of Camp Pelham, United Confederate Veterans, will hold their annual picnic at Oxford Lake on the 13th instant. The old veterans are looking forward to the occasion with a great deal of interest.

The Blakeslee company at Arvadale will double its plant.

Given Seven Years.

Asbury Gowens was tried in the circuit court of Cherokee county last week on the charge of killing Pink Davis over a trivial matter. The jury gave Gowens seven years in the pen. The murder is said to have been an unprovoked one. It is said that Davis will appeal to the supreme court, but in the mean time will go to the mines and commence to work out his sentence.

The board of arbitration, which is to adjust the questions at issue between the United Mine Workers and coal operators of Alabama, is now at work.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the world's committee of the Young Men's Christian Association will be celebrated this week in Geneva, Switzerland. Clarence J. Hicks and John R. Mott, associate secretaries, with Richard Fox, of the Young Men's Christian Association's secretariat, represent the American Association.

Printers are in forty-ninth annual session in Washington.

Tuscaloosa Boiler Explosion Thoroughly Investigated

After a very careful investigation the inspectors state that the explosion which destroyed the Tuscaloosa electric light plant was caused by the lightning which so many people saw flash just before the explosion. He stated that when he first read the newspaper account that it was his belief that the disaster was caused by the explosion of the boiler only, but after investigation he traced marks of the lightning on the smoke stack. He says he was prompted to examine the stack because lightning is always attracted by a heated conductor. He also found the armature in the dynamo turned out, which was protected against short circuit. After these evidences he decided that after the lightning struck the stack it descended into the boiler and entering the flue of the boiler it blew out the fire box. This weakened the boiler with the 120 pounds of steam and caused the explosion.

PROCLAMATION

Putting the State Uniform Text Book Law Into Effect—Special Emphasis Upon Prices to be Charged Pupils.

Governor Jelks Thursday issued a proclamation proclaiming the books adopted by the state uniform text book commission as the books to be used in this state. His proclamation reads:

"Whereas, a commission created by an act of the legislature, entitled An act to create a text book commission, and to procure for use in the public free schools in this state a uniform series of text books; to define the duties of said commission and other officers; to make an appropriation for the carrying into effect this act, and to provide punishment and penalties for the violation of the same, approved March 4, 1903, has entered into contracts effective September 1, 1903, for the furnishing or supplying of books for use in the public schools, in such of the counties of this state as were not already under contract, with the following prices for the books and at the prices named; provided that in those counties having previous contracts with publishers, such books as are uniform with those adopted by the state commission shall be furnished at the same prices, to-wit:

"List of text books adopted by the Alabama text book commission, with the names of the publishers and the prices at which the books must be furnished to pupils."

The proclamation then recites the names of the publishers, the books adopted and the prices.

The governor underscores the following words in his proclamation: "Prices at which the books must be furnished to pupils."

SELMA'S CITY HALL.

Work Will Be Resumed Upon It at an Early Date.

W. C. Hayes, representative of R. P. Manly, contractor of Selma's new city hall, at a meeting of the committee on public buildings and grounds of the city council, sought to lay the blame for the cessation of work on the building upon the city authorities. The committee and the mayor and president of the council clearly showed that no demand had been made by the contractor for the first installment of bonds. Mayor Atkins served legal notice that unless work was resumed on the building within ten days the city would, as per stipulations in the contract, step in and take possession of the work and treat the present contractor as a trespasser. "The meeting finally resulted in all hands agreeing that work would soon be resumed and pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

A report from Gadsden says: There is a sensation brewing in military circles in Gadsden which will doubtless end in the disbandment of the Etoah Rifles for the want of efficient organization and a proper membership. A Disgrace to Alabama.

The jury in the case of Jesse Durham, charged with murder in the first degree, returned a verdict of acquittal at Huntsville. Durham has been in jail nearly a year for killing Frank Blackwell and John Scott. He was acquitted of the murder of both in separate trials.

Judge Alston censured the jury for their verdict and said the number of homicides that are allowed to go unpunished in Madison county is a disgrace to Alabama.

Crushed to Death.

While at work on the timbers in the ore mines at Redders Friday afternoon Miles C. Whitley, timber boss, was instantly killed by falling timber, and C. C. Gilbert was so badly crushed that it has since been found necessary to amputate his leg. Mr. Whitley, who was from Dadeville, Ala., was highly respected by his employers and associates alike. He is survived by a wife and several young children, whom he leaves well provided for.

GEN. NELSON A. MILES

Retires from the Command of the U. S. Army.

Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the army, retired from active service Saturday, having reached the age limit of sixty-four years. The following order was issued: Washington, D. C., August 7, 1902. The retirement from active service of Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., by operation of law under provision of act of congress approved June 30, 1882, is announced. Lieutenant General Miles will proceed to his home. The travel enjoined is necessary for the public service.

By order of Secretary of War, H. C. CORBIN, Adjutant General.

Major General U. S. A. Several other orders resulting from the retirement of General Miles have been issued, one assigning Lieutenant General Young to the command of the army until August 15th, when he will assume the duties of chief of staff, and assigning Major General Corbin as president of the Soldiers' Home board, another Brigadier General Gillespie as president of the board of ordnance and fortification and still another assigning Lieutenant General Young as a member of the Sherman statue commission.

General Miles issued an address to the army, thanking officers and men for fidelity and counseling them to patriotism.

He had served his country for over forty years, and although he lacked a West Point training he worked his way up from the ranks to the supreme command of the army. He made a fine reputation as an Indian fighter and has been a prominent figure in army circles for several years.

The day was a happy one for the war department ring. General Miles has been a thorn in the side of the president and secretary of war. Ever since the Spanish war there has been bad feeling between the lieutenant general and the president. For over a year General Miles has declined to speak to either Secretary Root or General Corbin and instead of calling upon the secretary personally to say farewell, General Miles sent his aide.

The retirement of Miles afforded the president an opportunity to give him a parting shot by omission. Instead of issuing a complimentary order of retirement the perfunctory form was used in marked contrast with the actions of former presidents.

General Miles' distinguished services were deserving of at least the usual words of praise, but only the bare order of a second lieutenant form becomes of record.

ADMIRAL MELVILLE RETIRES.

Relinquishes His Duties as Chief of the Bureau of Engineering.

Rear Admiral George Melville, who was retired for age last January, relinquished his duties as chief of the bureau of steam engineering Saturday and was succeeded by Rear Admiral Charles W. Rae. Because of conspicuous service as engineer in chief, Secretary Moody requested Rear Admiral Melville to serve out his term of duty as chief of the bureau.

It so happened that the last paper which Rear Admiral Melville signed as engineer in chief was a tentative plan for the arrangement of the turbine engines in the proposed scout ships. Admiral Melville has been at work on the turbine project for several years.

The jury in the case of Curry Turner, charged with the murder of Squire A. J. Warren, returned a verdict of not guilty. The case was on trial three days and great interest was felt in the result.

Not Going to the Orient.

It is stated that the cruise of the squadron will probably be confined to the Mediterranean until December next, when the entire squadron will sail for the West Indies to take part in the maneuvers.

At about $100,000,000 Silas Thompson, editor of the Railway News, estimates the increase of the pay rolls of the railroads of the United States during the last year. "Some of this, probably $50,000,000," he said, "is due to the natural increase of the business of the country, but the rest is due to the concerted demands of the employees."

The contract for five years was awarded to the Ed C. Fowler Book and Stationery company of Montgomery as state depository for text books for 35 south Alabama counties. There was strong competition for the contract. The depository for north Alabama counties has not been selected.

What is claimed by the officials of the mine workers to have been a dastardly outrage was practiced on them at Virginia City. A whole car load of provisions, valued at upward of $250, was destroyed by being saturated with kerosene.

Cecil's Story.

Frank Cecil, the Bell county convict, gave strong testimony against Cecil Powers. He held close to his story, and direct examination and said the convict he surrendered was that he grew tired of dodging about over the country, and under an assumed name.

The defense had Cecil identify a letter written by him in April, 1902, which he said that the members of the militia army went to Fayetteville to petition the legislature to repeal the Goebel law and drop the contest. Cecil's handwriting brought out the letter was written at the residence of J. B. Matthews, a Powers' friend, and that the witness had seen Cecil writing it to swear to the letter, as testified by Matthews.

A few years ago these announcements of half holidays aroused curiosity and wonder, and the believers in all work and no play prepared that no good would come of them, and that a mischief-making satan was waiting around the corner for all these idle hands. But good has come of it, and the signs that used to be seen only on Saturdays are now to be found on Thursdays in markets and groceries announcing to the public that there are midweek holidays when a grocer may forget he is a grocer and a market may be a vegetarian.

The bill is introduced by Mr. Stovall.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Barrow Sage Discusses Sentiments of Poetical Gems.

QUOTES NOTED WRITERS

What a Mother's Love Can Accomplish—Library is Named in Memory of a Cherished Daughter.

Appeal for Winnie Davis Memorial Hall.

"The saddest and the sweetest things ever written were concerning death and love. Montgomery, Scott, Longfellow, Lindley and Bourdillon and many others found their tenderest sentiments on these subjects."

Lindley wrote his sweetest gems on the death of a young lady. Just such another would have been written had he lived until our loved one died.

"Thou art gone from our gaze like a beautiful dream. Thy grace and thy beauty no more will be seen. The lost to sight, to memory dear, Thou ever wilt remain. The only hope our hearts can cheer—The hope to meet again."

Longfellow says: "The air is full of farewells to the dying and mournings for the dead. There is no flock, however watched and tended, But one dead lamb is there. There is no firebrand, however defended, But has one vacant chair."

Montgomery says: "Friend after friend departs, Who has not lost a friend? There is no union here of hearts That finds not here an end."

And Longfellow says, by way of consolation: "There is no death. What seems so a transition; This life of mortal breath Is but a suburb of the life elysian, Whose portal we call death."

All this is very solemn and very sad, but it has its counterpart when they wrote of love. Scott says: "In peace love tunes the shepherd's reed, In war he mounts the warrior's steed, In courts is seen in gay attire, In hamlets dances on the green. Love rules the camp, the court, the grove, And men below and saints above, For love is heaven and heaven is love."

Solomon says: "Love is as strong as death" and "God from necessity is love" and "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

And Wordsworth says, "A mother's love is the holiest thing alive." A mother's love! I was watching the eagerness with which our neighbor, Mrs. Munford, was cherishing the memory of her lost daughter, the sweet girl who had charge of the library books committee and whose memory now seems like a beautiful dream—a dream to us, but not to the mother who never will forget. When the Cherokee Club prepared to make a memorial for Mary she pleaded for the privilege of placing it where Mary was wont to sit and have sweet companionship with those she loved. Her beautiful home was nothing and money was nothing. She said the library is in debt five or six hundred dollars. Please let me pay it off, for Mary felt it. It was her debt. Let me have the floor varnished and have chairs bought instead of benches, and I want some nice tables for Mary's sake. Please let me have a memorial for Mary here and give it her name.—The Mary Munford Memorial Library." And so it was done, who could refuse a mother's tears for the memory of her loving daughter, and so it was done, and the sign over the door will be the Mary Munford Memorial Library. She is going to buy the books that Mary would have bought and make a donation each and every year.

Now good people all who tarry or pass through Charlottesville stop a little while and see what love has done—a mother's love. I wish that committee appointed on Mr. Stovall's bill would come and see this model library and go back and plead for that $5,000 wherewith to build the Winnie Davis Memorial hall. COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

The court met in regular session Monday and passed several accounts. A new road was granted from Fletcher to Billingsley, and court adjourned same evening to meet again Monday, August 24th, for the purpose of hearing complaints of the Back Tax Commissioner, who has cited a number of taxpayers to show cause, if any they have, why their assessments should not be raised.

Mr. Lyman, of Montevallo, representing the Southern Railroad Company and the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, applied to the Court for a remission of the amount of the special bridge tax levied last year, which they had paid under protest, on the ground that the tax was illegally levied. The hearing was continued until the November term.

Death of Rev. J. M. Stanfield.

Last Thursday, the 6th inst., another of the old land marks passed away. Mr. Stanfield had been in bad health for quite a number of years. Previous to his death he had been confined to his bed for five or six weeks. He realized for several days that there was no chance for his recovery, but facing the inevitable he said
"It is all right, I am ready to go."
He was conscious up almost to his death.

Mr. Stanfield came to Clanton from Macon county in 1872, just after the railroad was built through this country. He engaged in the saw mill business, one of his first connections in that business being with Mr. W. W. Wadsworth. He was a man of business, but in his business he was fair. It was remarked by one who had been closely connected with him, "He is honest." As to his character he said "I have seen him when it would try men's souls."

But he not only had regard for the comforts of this life, but he tried to lay up for himself "Treasures in heaven where neither moths nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." For thirty years he had been a preacher of the gospel, and when he found a weak church he was ready to help them. He rarely accepted any compensation for his services in this way.

He was born in Muscogee county, Ga., September 16, 1832. At the breaking out of the Civil war he joined the Confederate ranks and served his country faithfully.

Mr. Stanfield was a member of the M. P. church. He was a member of the Masonic order, in which he took a great deal of interest.
He had been married about forty-five years. To the marriage there were born nine children, of whom five are now living.

In his death we mourn. But we mourn not as those who have no hope. By his faithful life and triumphant death our faith is strengthened, and we are led to look beyond to a time when we shall all meet again. J. S.

FROM CLANTON TO CANADA.

AROUND YONKOS.

The reception committee of the city council and representatives of the Toronto press gave the Alabamians a hearty welcome at the Arlington hotel, and introductions being over, a number of tally-ho's and carriages drove up and the entire party proceeded for a drive around the city. There was much tooting of horns as the procession started off, and the Torontonians looked with pleasure on the gay cavalcade. The first stop was made at the City Hall, where Alderman Ramsden, the acting Mayor, genially welcomed the party in the council chamber. He jocularly remarked "There was no ice on the streets and no snow about just now." Among the Alabamians were heard many expressions of wonder at the magnificence of the building.

Again entering the carriages, with a flourish of horns, we started off and drove through all the principal streets of the city, the lovely homes in the residential district bringing forth cries of admiration from the ladies of the party. For elegant, comfortable looking homes, snugly embowered among shady trees, and surrounded by velvety lawn, Toronto is hard to beat.
Our route led us through Queen's Park, which looked beautiful in the morning sun, past the Parliament building and the University, and after a three hour's glorious drive we returned to the Arlington for lunch.

In the afternoon we boarded the street cars and went down to the wharf, where the steamer "Han-lan" awaited us and a sail on the lake was taken. At Island Park a landing was made, and at the Pavillion refreshments were served and much merry speech-making indulged in. The island is a favorite resort of the people of Toronto, there being a succession of steam ferry boats to and from the city all day. The return to the city was made as the sun was setting across the lake, and the remainder of the evening was spent in strolling about the streets, watching the habits and customs of the natives.
At 11 p.m. again on the train for a run of a hundred miles further north to the Highlands of Ontario.

THE MUSKOKA LAKE DISTRICT.

Brightly shone the morning sun when the crowd turned out to the train on to the wharf at Muskoka, where laid the pretty steamer "Medora" gaily decorated with flags, steam up, and ready to start. There was a brisk freshness in the air, which soon gave a keen edge to the appetite, and the cooks and stewards of the "Medora" had a hard job on hand before them. They were fully equal to the occasion, however, and after a time a capital breakfast was had. As the steamer moves, the voices of the Alabama Press Association rise harmoniously on the morning air. They are singing "God Save the King," and sing it well, too, the air being the same as "America." Many a time and oft have I heard "God Save the Queen," but this was the first occasion I had heard "God Save the King," and it occurred to me as a happy omen of the good feeling existing between the two nations that it should be sung by American voices on British territory.

Away from the wharf, the little town can be seen nestling under the hills, and across the water large saw mills are in evidence, while rafts of timber cover a large service of the bay. The good boat glides smoothly along and soon we are out of the bay and on the bosom of Muskoka lake amidst a scene of loveliness passing description. Burns sang of
"Ye banks and braes of bonnie Doone," but had he ever witnessed the glories of Muskoka he would have tuned his lyre to a pitch of ecstasy.
At one moment we are gliding between some of the numberless islands that dot the lake, and again we are out on an open expanse, the densely wooded hills in the distance lending enchantment to the view.
There are islands of all sorts and sizes, some being only a rocky excrescence jutting out of the water, and others of good size covered with timber, in many instances containing the handsome residence, glimting through the foliage, of some lover of nature who is fortunate enough to be able to spend a portion of his time amid these picturesque surroundings. Anon we pass into the Indian river, threading our way through its tortuous passage, a new scene of beauty meeting the eye at every turn. At Port Carling we enter a lock, and with a short delay pass into Lake Rousseau. The lock is necessitated by the action of Lake Rousseau being some five feet higher than those of Muskoka, and there is also a noticeable difference in the color of the water, the one being perfectly clear and the other of a darker constituent.

Lake Rousseau presents another perfect picture. As each new panorama opens up one feels inclined to say that is the best of all, but almost before the thought enters the mind another vista dis-closes a bit of loveliness which seems to eclipse all that has gone before. The sail is a succession of surprises, a never ceasing panorama of nature in luxurious mood.

At Royal Muskoka we land.
Perched on the hill top is the hotel, and we wind our way up through the virgin forest. It is an ideal location for a summer hotel.

"Far from the madding crowds ignoble strife"

and one cannot help but wish to rest a while and absorb the splendor of our surroundings.
But it is out of the question to "Keep the noiseless tenor of our way" when the Association is to be photographed on the steps of the hotel, Mr. Galbraith, the leading photographer of Toronto, having come up with us for the express purpose. With a good deal of laughing and merriment the crowd is eventually grouped and the picture taken, and an excellent one it proved to be when we saw the proof.

Soon we are aboard the "Medora" again and the return trip is commenced. We imagined we had seen all the beauties of the lakes coming up, but new ones continue to loom up in all directions on the return, and it is with a deep sigh of regret we again find ourselves at Muskoka wharf, after a day of such perfect enjoyment as will ever remain a bright spot in the memory.
On to the train and back to Toronto, which city we reach about seven o'clock, and leave again at 11 p.m. for Kingston and Montreal.

THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.

Between five and six o'clock next morning we arrive at Kingston, on the northeast shore of Lake Ontario, and the cry is get on board the steamer "Toronto" without delay, so there is nothing to be seen of this city, which is the port of transshipment for the greater part of the grain from the northwest, whence it is carried down the St. Lawrence in barges to Montreal to the ocean vessels. There was a strong fresh wind blowing as we steamed out of the harbor, and I had the upper deck all to myself, getting a good view of Kingston.

Soon we are in the St. Lawrence, among the world-famed Thousand Islands. On the left is the Canadian shore and on the right the State of New York. The name Thousand Islands was probably originally given on account of the profusion of them in this stretch of the river, a distance of forty miles below Kingston, but in reality they number 1692. Some of them belong to Canada and some to the State of New York.
The largest is Wolf Island, 21 miles long by 7 wide. Many of them are now private property and some elegant mansions are seen as we steam past them, while on others we catch glimpses of camping out parties. It is a beautiful scene, at one time a group of islands is passed through, then a stretch of river with other islands in the distance, and the good boat steams steadily on while we vain would stay and go ashore.

At Prescott, 60 miles below Kingston, we change boats, taking a smaller craft, as the rapids are near and we look for some excitement.

"Row, brothers, row, the stream runs fast,
The rapids are near and the daylight's
past."

On the opposite side of the river from Prescott is Ogdensburg, N.
Y., and this is the last town of any importance we see in the United States, 50 miles below Prescott is Cornwall on the Canadian side, and from this point onward we are out of the States and on both sides of the river is the Province of Quebec. At this point the river widens out, varying in width from two to five miles, and is known as Lake St. Francis. As the river narrows again we shoot the rapids in various places, then the stream broadens out into Lake St. Louis, and as the afternoon wears on we enter the celebrated Lachine rapids, where the rocks look frowning, and the water dashes in fury against them, hissing and bubbling, foaming and churning, and the boat heaves and tosses like a ship at sea. 'Tis a grand sight and a novel experience, and as we enter the placid waters below and look back at the turbulent rapids we have just passed through,

we think what exciting times it must have been with the old pioneers, steering their canoes through these then unknown waters, with possibly hostile Indians on either bank.

Steaming steadily on we soon pass under the Victoria Jubilee bridge of the Grand Trunk Railway. This magnificent triumph of engineering skill is, with the approaches, nearly two miles in length, and was completed in 1887, the year of Queen Victoria's jubilee.
It replaced the old tubular bridge, the old bridge being some 26 feet wide, while the new one is over 60 feet in width. The stone piers of the old bridge were widened and strengthened and the work carried on without interruption to traffic, the only delay being a stoppage of eight hours. The bridge is double tracked, and on each side is a driveway and sidewalk, but they do not appear to be used at present.

As we steam up the harbor a fine view of the city of Montreal is obtained and in the background Mount Royal stands up, 700 feet high, like a watchful sentinel. It has been a delightful river trip and a glorious day, and we disembark and make our way to the St. Lawrence Hall, our headquarters during our stay here.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, August 10th, 1903
Many Republican leaders who,
in the recent erstwhile, were going about wearing a worn, haggard and hunted expression are now walking the streets of the nation's capital wearing a broad and expansive smile that somewhat resembles a crack in a frozen liver. Wherefore?
Simply because on the 21st of July last the statute of limitation ran and they are forever barred from prosecution for the misdeeds and peculiation they indulged in while holding positions of honor and trust under the national government three years ago. There are many men who ought to have been indicted and would have been had not President Roosevelt told Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Bristow not to investigate any of the cases where the statute of limitation would run this year. It was known here also that Perry S. Heath, the secretary of the Republican National Committee, would have been one of the first to be indicted, along with Machen.
If the Republican leaders had not stepped in and put a veto on the thing, Mr. Heath knows too much of the inside workings of the cogwheels and oiling that the different parts of the machine received in the last two national campaigns. He might, as Rathbone threatened to do, "Pull down the pillars of the temple," and that would be dangerous to many in high places and leave the Republican skeleton exposed in all its hideousness. The man who invented the statute of limitations should have a monument erected to his memory by the Republican leaders, for they know how much tribulation he saved them.

The next convention of that party should pass the hat around, and no one should be more liberal in his donation than President Roosevelt, for it has saved him a world of annoyance and publicity, that might have jeopardized his political future.
An excellent slogan for the Republicans next year would be: Vive la Statute of Limitations!

When President Roosevelt appointed "Ret" Clarkson Surveyor of the Port of New York there was a general gasp of astonishment by civil service reformers, and a good deal of surprise was manifested by the less truly good politicians.
That Clarkson paid but little attention to the duties of his office, but was making secret trips to the southern states, with a strong inclination to confine the society he sought to "black-and-tans" and "lily-whites," who were known to be important factors in selecting delegates to national republican conventions, occasioned no amazement amongst politicians. They regarded him as the personal representative of the President, and on what may be called a secret service mission for him. Clarkson regards public office as a private snap, and although President Roosevelt is supposed to have other and opposite views on the duties of public officers, he evidently does not disapprove of the Clarkson "graft" of drawing a good salary without much, if any, return

How can I find institutions for us when we fall, but you do nothing for us except to put us from being thrown into the pit of temptation." And no one but a good woman, acting with Miss Hunt as a beneficent worker in the gay city of New York understood the dying energy which she uttered. By and by another woman won her into the kitchen, and, just before she died said to the Christian woman, who represented herself as a Christian, and her last words were something like yours. The Wasp's Sense of Location

There is no doubt among naturalists that many insects have a sense of location which is not shared by man.

The sense of location shown by the wasp, for example, is remarkable.

The wasp species builds its nest in a sandbank that is only a part of several acres of such soil, and when it leaves in search of food it covers up the nest so carefully that no ordinary eyes could distinguish its location.

That is to say, it is just like all the surrounding surface. And yet the wasp flies back to it without hesitation, and finds it without making a mistake.

There is another wasp that unerringly locates the eggs of the mason-bee under a thick layer of sun-baked clay, and deposits her own eggs in the same cells that her young may have food when they are hatched.

Forty-five per cent of the children of Japan are now in school.

NERVES CURED AT SEA

Work That Helps Along on a Small Cruiser.

For nervous people or people who suffer from nervous dyspepsia or indigestion, there is no other kind of life which compares with that aboard the small cruiser, where the sufferer must do some of the work about deck.

There must be real work, not just leading a hand on a line here and there.

Many things are to be borne in mind by the amateur sailor when he decides to live for a time aboard a vessel as "owner and master."

First of all, he must be philosophical. He must not take the birdlike life too seriously. Accidents and maritime dangers, such as storms and collisions, must be looked out for, but not made into a nightmare to worry him.

He must carry away gear and perhaps a stick or two now and then, without getting on his nerves. There is little danger in bad weather, if he uses ordinary judgment in shortening sail, and he must remember that only lunatics or worse carry much sail in heavy squalls.

His craft, with a moderate amount of outside ballast, will be quite uncapable under the conditions she was designed to undergo. If he wishes to have a craft that will carry sail in a black squall, or a topsail in a gale, he should get ashore and join the racing yacht fleet. There he may indulge in problems of metacenter height to his heart's content without danger to himself or companions.

Neither should he be too particular in regard to his personal habits. He should board the craft with the spirit he had when he went on his first picnic, and be ready to live in plain style. This warning will be appreciated after an expensive steward brings him in his first meal or two.

Canned goods need not be served aboard yachts cruising in the waters along the coast. He is a poor steward who cannot furnish fresh beef, chops and steaks, to say nothing of all kinds of fish, at a moderate expense. Then with rice, macaroni, hominy and some of the numerous prepared foods, he will have a necessary variety without opening his tin.

They should be reserved for necessity when the market has failed. With proper stowing a vast amount of good food may be taken aboard and kept out of sight, yet always easy of access.—Boston Journal.

The Terra-Cotta Age in London.

The arrival of the motor bus is only one sign of the new era that is dawning for London. Our homes, our streets, our shops are all being revolutionized. In buildings we are coming to the terra-cotta age and every sign points to the fact that a century hence the descendants will describe the beginning of the twentieth century as the terra-cotta period of London architecture.

The fashion was set a quarter of a century ago when the great Natural History Museum was erected. It has been largely checked by the excessively decorated specimens nearly the city. Architects seemed to fancy that with terra-cotta they must have numerous carvings and elaborate portraits on the walls.

Nevertheless the new stone age has come to stay. Terra-cotta is fairly cheap, it is durable, and above all it can be cleaned. Manufacturers will soon go back to the earlier methods of their predecessors who attempted to imitate the quiet and stable appearance of the best stone. With terra-cotta exteriors, still further-reaching reforms are coming over our homes. We are but at the beginning of the flat era. London has as yet no building like the "Ansonia" in New York, establishments that are cities in themselves, containing all that they require. An overhead railway from west to east is being discussed, new bridges must soon be thrown across the Thames, an embankment on the south side from Lambeth to London Bridge must come; and still greater changes are ahead. A new London is springing into existence as we watch.—St. James' Gazette.

London is supposed to have 170,000 inhabitants to the square mile, but on the east side, New York, there are 645,000 people to the square mile.

Before he can sleep a soothing voice must read to him to calm his nerves. This duty usually falls to the lot of his foster-brother, Ismet Bey—a little, ugly man, bearing such a resemblance to his sovereign that he is supposed often to impersonate him on state occasions.

Lulled at last to sleep by the music of the band, the tramping of the guards' feet and the crooning voice of the reader, the Sultan passes a few moments of unconsciousness, only to wake with a start from a terrifying dream, and hastily to summon some trusty councillor who will banish the vague terrors that haunt his uneasy mind, or to call his soubasayer to his bedside to give the interpretation of his dream.

Thus, with fitful slumber, broken by horrible dreams, from which he starts shrieking in terror, the Sultan passes the night watches until daylight comes again.—Pearson Magazine.

Big Coal Land Deal.

Deeds have been filed recording the transfer of 60,000 acres of coal land in Cumberland county, Tennessee, by Eugene Hawkins and others, and the Central and Coal Company and the Cumberland Coal and Coke Company in favor of the North American Coal Company. The consideration is $1,000,000.

Witnesses were introduced in the Jett and White trial to prove that on the morning of the killing Jett was holding his hand in such manner to his front side as to indicate that his hand was crippled. One of the claims of the defense is that Jett's hand was so crippled by being mangled by a log a few weeks before the killing of Marcum that it was a physical impossibility for him to use a pistol.

The postmasters' convention at Boston adjourned Friday. One of the features of the resolutions was the unqualified indorsement of the Hubbard stamp certificate as a means of remitting small amounts of money by mail.

"Tricky" Tom Tharpe, who was a witness for the defense in the Curtis Jett trial, went to his home and set fire to the house and stood guard over the blazing building, shooting at all who attempted to extinguish the flames. His aged father received a slight flesh wound.

THE PLAY WAS STOPPED.

But it was not by the doctors of the French playhouse.

M. Sardou, the French playwright, once produced by a job that General Lemaire, who was at the time governor of Paris, played on M. Thiers. Sardou had written "Rabagas," and the play had been given its dress rehearsal in "La Presse." It was displeasing to Thiers, and he undertook to stop its public performance.

As General Lemaire was dressing for dinner, about 6 in the evening, an officer entered his dressing room and tendered a dispatch, which, he said, had come direct from Versailles.

The officer went out, and the general, continuing his toilet, said to himself that he was certain that that dispatch was the interdiction of "Rabagas," and, having a friendly feeling for the author, the general left the room unopened when he left the room.

The next morning came a messenger posthaste from Versailles, "Rabagas" was performed last night.

"Without doubt," negligently replied the general.

"But the dispatch?"

"What dispatch?"

"From M. Thiers, interdicting the performance."

"Goodness me!" replied the general, "I left it unopened on the table. See, there it is, the seal unbroken. Still, that makes little difference. Everything passed off well. They nearly hissed the play off the stage, and it will be the same at every performance. Tell M. Thiers that he has no cause for alarm."

"Rabagas" was withdrawn, but not by the orders of M. Thiers.

Morse and the Telegraph Operator.

Immediately after the successful completion of the first transatlantic cable and the consequent celebrations, in which of course Cyrus W. Field bore a prominent part, Professor Morse had occasion to send a telegram from a small town in Ohio to his home in New York. He wrote out his message, presented it to the operator, who rapidly checked it off with his pencil and curtly demanded a dollar.

"But," said the venerable inventor, "I never pay for messages," and, seeing an inquiring look in the operator's eyes, added, "I am, in fact, the father of the telegraph."

"Then," said the operator, firmly convinced that he was being imposed upon, "why don't you sign your own name, Cyrus W. Field?"

Professor Morse when telling the story used to say that he was too humiliated to answer.

At Sea on Land.

A clergyman who had neglected all knowledge of nautical affairs was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors.

He was discoursing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

A half concealed snicker spread over the room, and the clergyman knew that he had made a mistake.

"After the services one of his listeners came to him and said, 'Mr. —, have you ever been at sea?'"

The minister replied:

"No, unless it was while I was delivering that address."—New York Times.

When Jackson Dined!

While the dinner hour still clings to the noontime among country people it has advanced in the cities until now it occurs at any time between noon and midnight. And that reminds us, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, of one of the many stories about Colonel Davy Crockett. While he was a member of congress and was at his home in Tennessee some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at 12, the next above them at 1, the merchants at 2, the representatives at 3, the senators at 4, members of the cabinet at 5 and the vice president at 6. "But when does the president dine?" "What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness. "Well, he don't eat till next day."

Mapleville

The locomotive of the T. T. mill company flew the track and severely wounded Joe Goodwin, one of our best colored citizens.

Mr. Fisher's family have moved back to Perry county.

Cato Glover of Fort Payne made a flying business visit here lately.

Mr. Gore's family have lately visited their kinsman here, Mr. Merck Smithman.

Mr. Ralph Calloway treated the young folks to an entertainment, and Miss Sallie Bowline took the prize of an elegant box of candy as the most popular young lady.

Our growing town was lately entertained in our academy by a musical show and panorama, where a prize was awarded to Miss Virginia Grace as the most popular and beautiful young lady, and a cake of soap to the laziest man, which was awarded to O. Smithman, which was carried him, as he was too lazy to walk for it.

Our very popular stenographer, Miss Watkins, of Birmingham, is enjoying a vacation at home, and her place is taken by Miss Vaughn.

We regret that Miss Johnnie Wilkinson has taken a position at Riderville. She made many friends by her charming manners.

We are glad to state that Mr. John Blalock has recovered from a serious attack of sickness, and is now visiting his uncle, Robert Heaton, of Thorsby.

Hugh Foshee of Clanton has lately visited relations here.

We do not like doctors and drug stores, but sometimes find them a disagreeable necessity. This sight is often forced on us by Dr. Clough-ton's well filled drug store which he has lately treated to a new coat of paint.

Mr. Buck Bowline's family have spent a most delightful day with Mr. Glover.

The school children had a most enjoyable picnic.

Mr. T. U. Crumpton and family and her mother, Mrs. Mary Du-Bose, have returned home with Mrs. Berry at Orrville. The latter is mother of Mrs. Berry.

Master Henry Damsky is with friends in Clanton.

The Misses Ricketts and little Isabel Saportas, escorted by Messrs. Walter Shepard, William Walker and B. O. Glover, spent a most pleasant day with the Misses Abney.

Mrs. Sullivan of Dayton is now visiting her sister, Mrs. Glover.

A good colored man, James Mosley, of Selma, was fatally injured by being struck by a band of machinery on the head. His remains were sent to his family in Selma.

DR. J. P. HALEY HONORED.

At a recent meeting of the State Dental Convention in Troy Dr. J. P. Haley, of Marion, was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the Indiana Institute to succeed Mr. B. M. Lide who has removed to St. Louis.

Dr. Haley moved to Marion from Selma for the purpose of practicing his profession (dentistry) about three years ago, and during his residence here has won the confidence and esteem of all this people. He is a Christian gentleman, attentive to church duties, and has manifested no little interest in our school work.

The convention could hardly have made a better selection of one that will give more general satisfaction to all concerned—Marion Standard.

Dr. Haley is an old Chiltonian, and his friends here will be glad to hear this good account of him.—En Potent Pill Pleasure.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are Dr. Witt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel blue-mass or any other pills I ever took. At the same time it affected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by Hopkins Drug Co.

THE PLAY WAS STOPPED.

But it was not by the action of the French President.

M. Sardou, the French playwright, once produced a joke that General Ladmiraal, who was at the time governor of Paris, played on M. Thiers. Sardou had written "Rabagas" and the play had been given its dress rehearsal "in camera." It was displeasing to Thiers, and he undertook to stop its public performance.

As General Ladmiraal was dressing for dinner, about 6 in the evening, an officer entered his dressing room and tendered a dispatch, which, he said, had come direct from Versailles.

The officer went out, and the general, continuing his toilet, said to himself that he was certain that that dispatch was the interdiction of "Rabagas," and, having a friendly feeling for the author, the general left the dispatch unopened when he left the room.

The next morning came a messenger posthaste from Versailles, "Rabagas" was performed last night.

"Without doubt," negligently replied the general.

"But the dispatch?"

"What dispatch?"

"From M. Thiers, interdicting the performance."

"Goodness me!" replied the general, "I left it unopened on the table. See, there it is, the seal unbroken. Still, that makes little difference. Every thing passed off well. They never hissed the play off the stage, and it will be the same at every performance. Tell M. Thiers that he has no cause for alarm."

"Rabagas" was withdrawn, but not by the orders of M. Thiers.

Morse and the Telegraph Operator.

Immediately after the successful completion of the first transatlantic cable and the consequent celebrations, in which of course Cyrus W. Field bore a prominent part, Professor Morse had occasion to send a telegram from a small town in Ohio to his home in New York. He wrote out his message, presented it to the operator, who rapidly checked it off with his pencil and curtly demanded a dollar.

"But," said the venerable inventor, "I never pay for messages," and, seeing an inquiring look in the operator's eyes, added, "I am, in fact, the father of the telegraph."

"Then," said the operator, firmly convinced that he was being imposed upon, "why don't you sign your own name, Cyrus W. Field?"

Professor Morse when telling the story used to say that he was too humiliated to answer.

At Sea on Land.

A clergyman who had neglected all knowledge of nautical affairs was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors.

He was discoursing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

A half concealed snicker spread over the room, and the clergyman knew that he had made a mistake.

After the services one of his listeners came to him and said, "Mr. —, have you ever been at sea?"

The minister replied:

"No, unless it was while I was delivering that address."—New York Times.

When Jackson Died!

While the dinner hour still clings to the noontime among country people it has advanced in the cities until now it occurs at any time between noon and midnight. And that reminds us, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, of one of the many stories about Colonel Davy Crockett. While he was a member of congress and was at his home in Tennessee some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at 12, the next above them at 1, the merchants at 2, the representatives at 3, the senators at 4, members of the cabinet at 5 and the vice president at 6. "But when does the president dine?" "What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness. "Well, he don't eat till next day!"

THEY GOT FREE SEATS.

When Nat Goodwin was playing in Chicago two men approached the manager, who was standing in the wings of the theater, and introduced themselves as a couple of actors. Their names were entirely unknown to him, and they had nothing to show that they were what they claimed to be. They were persistent. One of them in particular was offensive. He shook his fist under the manager's nose and demanded that he be allowed to see the play.

"I don't care," he declared, "if you are a little whippersnapper who can't refuse me seats. You don't know who we are, eh? Well, who are we? Let's see your card. I'll see Mr. Goodwin about it."

The manager, who feared a scene, and over one of his cards and told them that he was responsible and quite sure to take the consequences of refusing to give them seats.

A few minutes later the two men came back to the theater. One of them, written "Nat Goodwin" on the man's card. He presented the card at the box office, and it was promptly cashed. Then they went in.

Half an hour later, the manager's attention was called to what had been done. He was at first inclined to make some severe action, but later saw the joke on himself.

"Let them alone," he said. "If they've served enough to do that, they are entitled to seats. You had better send them down and ask them if they don't like a box."—Chicago Tribune.

That Was Promptly Reminded at the Box Office. When Nat Goodwin was playing Chicago two men approached the manager, who was standing in the lobby of the theater, and introduced themselves as a couple of actors. Their names were entirely unknown to him, and they had nothing to show that they were what they claimed to be. They were refused to give them seats, but they were persistent. One of the men in particular was offensive. He shook his fist under the manager's nose and demanded who it was that dared refuse him passes. The manager, who feared a scene, took over one of his cards and told them he was responsible and quite willing to take the consequences of refusing to give them seats.

A few minutes later the two men came back to the theater. One of them carried a "Pass two" on the manager's card. He presented the card at the box office, and it was promptly given. Then they went in.

Half an hour later, the manager's attention was called to what was done. He was at first inclined to take some severe action, but later he saw the joke on himself.

Sam Jones to Reporters.

A prominent Baltimore physician in the Baltimore Sun the following week wrote about Sam Jones, the evangelist:

"Some several years ago Mr. Jones at Emory Grove camp, the news reports of his sermons caused me to complain:

"The last service he looked down at the reporters, who sat at a table in front of the pulpit, and said:

"I want to tell you fellows that you a lot in spite of your manifestos. You boys don't treat me, though. You take my sermons and put a piece here, a piece there, a piece somewhere else. Then you string the pieces together, and, finally, they read funny."

"I suppose I reported the Bible wrong? A man asks me what the Bible tells him to do. I read in one place that Jesus went out and hanged himself. I turn over and read, 'Go and do likewise.' And in another place, 'And do it quickly.' And you see, boys, that sort of thing won't do. It ain't fair."

How a Great Surgeon Died.

Dr. Bichat, the famous surgeon, dying of typhoid fever he turned to his colleague who was sitting beside him and said to him:

"My friend, I am lost, but it is some consolation to know that my case is not unique. During the last few days I have noticed some odd symptoms, and I am studying them carefully."

"You may recover yet," said the doctor.

"That is impossible," replied Bichat, "if it were not for one thing I would be quite willing to die."

"What is that?" asked the friend.

"That I shall not have an opportunity to perform an autopsy on myself after my death, for I know that I shall make some wonderful scientific discovery."

Some time later he was dead.

Hares That Swim.

Have many times seen hares, swimming at a time, cross a stream to the other side, and then, on the summer evenings and coolly, in the same way back to the other side. A writer in London News says that hares have been quite voluntary, but I have noticed—they invariably swim up to see if they had time to get before any surprise came. For the movements of a person swimming along a footpath in the darkness would be watched with some anxiety before the plunge was made. I have also seen snakes swim across a stream in the same way, apparently on the sunny side.

Experienced.

"I am," she said, "what preacher you think I ought to have marry me? I feel as though Mr. Goodwin is so young, and, not being married himself, he could hardly—"

"I know," said Dr. Easleigh, "I have him for four of mine, and he has given thorough satisfaction."—Chicago Record Herald.

What She Could Do. "I got a good square meal last night, the first in several weeks, and I want to thank you for it."

"Me to thank? Well, that's my duty."

"Yes, I know. I telephoned to you yesterday morning that you were coming out to dinner with me."

DEATH OF Mrs. W. A. COLLIER.

The news of the death of this estimable lady came as a shock last Sunday morning. Col. and Mrs. Collier had been spending the summer at Hygiea Springs, Tenn., when Mrs. Collier was taken sick and removed to an infirmary at Nashville, where she died last Saturday night, in the presence of her husband, daughter and granddaughter. Her death is attributed to heart trouble. The remains were brought to Clanton Sunday evening, and the funeral took place Monday afternoon from the Baptist church, Dr. Curry conducting the services. All the stores in town were closed and everybody attended the funeral. Mrs. Collier was greatly beloved by all who knew her and she will be greatly missed in church and social circles.

AN ENJOYABLE PARTY.

Last Tuesday evening Miss Daisy Davis entertained in honor of her charming guest, Miss Dowling of Birmingham. The color scheme was beautifully carried out, it being pink and green. Flinch was played out on the large gallery which was beautifully illuminated with Japanese lanterns. In the spacious hall some danced, others listened to the delightful music of the piano. Delicious refreshments were served. The following are indebted to the lovely hostess: Miss Callie Watts and Mr. J. C. Dennis, Miss Alea Stewart and Mr. Joe Johnson, Mrs. Gamma Anderson and Mr. N. A. Kicker, Miss E. C. Stewart and P. D. Wilson, Miss Marion Matthews and Mr. T. C. Jones, Miss G. L. Chandler and Mr. H. Jones, Miss Essie McDaniel and Mr. J. H. Middleton, Miss Jennie Goldthorp and Mr. J. O. Middleton, Miss Annie Davis and Mr. C. J. Davis, Messrs Hardyman and Harper, and Drs. Horn and Hopkins.

Not Over-wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Stanton.

These are bright days for Stanton. Prospects were never more encouraging. All our industries are running on full time and hands are being paid well and promptly. Crops throughout the surrounding country are as good as could be desired. Health almost perfect. Altogether we have much to be grateful for and are happy in it all.

Mr. W. C. Dyer and family have just returned from Shelby Springs where they have been resting for a few weeks. They are much improved and speak in praise of Shelby Springs.

Pastor Windsor arrived in Stanton Saturday and began a revival meeting at the Baptist church Sunday morning. Rev. A. J. Prestor, of Prattville, Ala., came Monday and is doing the preaching, and doing it well. Prospect of a good meeting.

Master Ira Dunsmore, who has been visiting in Perry County for a week, has returned home to the delight of his papa, mama and numerous friends.

Rev. W. J. Ruddick is holding a meeting at Burnsville this week. Mrs. John Parnell and children of Thorsby are spending a week in Stanton with the families of Messrs. T. D. Wiley and William Parnell.

Prof. W. B. Speer, formerly of Thorsby, but now a Stantonite, landed in our city Tuesday of last week and was joined in an educational campaign Thursday by Prof. Robert Jones.

An educational rally was held in the Baptist church Saturday night. After rousing speeches by Rev. I. Windsor, Profs. Jones and Speer, a board of trustees was elected as follows: Rev. J. W. Ruddick, Hon. W. O. Perry, Capt. J. F. Gregory, J. M. Huff and W. C. Dyer. Perhaps no school in this section, or any other section, can boast of a stronger or more business like set of trustees. Rev. Mr. Ruddick is an earnest exponent of higher education, having been trained in the schools of Ireland and Scotland. Hon. Mr. Perry served the honored county that bears his name several terms in the State Legislature and while a member of that body, did efficient work on the educational committee. Mr. Huff is a successful farmer, a man of affairs and influence. Capt. Gregory is foreman at the great mills operated by Gregory-Coe Lumber Company and is deservedly popular with all the officials and employees. It need not be said that Mr. "Lum" Dyer is one of the most successful business men in the State, when the fact is made known that in a few years he has amassed a large fortune. This new and enthusiastic board of trustees have taken hold of the work with a vim and money has been raised to enlarge the school building, furnish new desks, etc. Contract was awarded Mr. M. E. Dausmore to do the building and work was started Tuesday. Three weeks will see Stanton enjoying a pretty school building. Mr. Perry has very generously donated to the school a complete chart that cost nearly $50.

Alexander McDowell McCook, whose death occurred recently, was the most distinguished member of the remarkable Ohio family known during the Civil War as "the fighting McCooks." observes the Rochester Post-Express. This family furnished one Major-General in the regular army, one brevet Major-general of volunteers, one brigadier-general of volunteers, two brevet brigadier-generals, two colonels, one brevet colonel, one major, two first lieutenants, one private, and one naval officer. Some of them were killed and many all were wounded in battle.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell says too much importance is attached to college athletics. In a letter to the senior class of Pennsylvania he says: "You have lost out of college life that which it were better to have kept. We played hard in my college days, but we talked of our sports less than you do. You, I fear, care too little for your intellectual athletics. Athletic sports are meant, as I see them, to insure that the body shall be made and kept sound."

The microbes of lockjaw or of other diseases, the venom of snakes, the virus of smallpox or the vegetable poisons may be successfully conveyed upon bullets from muskets or revolvers. Neither the heat nor the friction in firing destroys them, whether they are on the ball, in the powder, in the wad or smeared within the gun barrel. In the powder they are carried on unburnt grains, which make up forty per cent. in every charge of powder exploded.

Athletic exercises can serve a woman's vanity as well as her health. The right kind of exercises, says Elizabeth Dryden, in Outing, can add greatly to a woman's beauty, grace and style. Miss Dryden describes what actually has been achieved in individual cases, and the practical ways by which the same results may be obtained. It is not muscle that woman wants, she maintains, but grace and style. "The dress reformer or physical culturist," says Miss Dryden, "attired in her eccentric garbs, has lived to see her dreams realized; strangely enough her taboos theories have been gradually adopted, but vanity and not common sense won the day."

Anthropologists will be disappointed when they hear that further search for human remains in Potter Cave, Shasta County, Cal., has been abandoned. The discovery of bones of extinct animals there last year excited faint hopes that testimony concerning the antiquity of prehistoric man in America might be derived from that source. Parts of human skeletons have been found in other caves in Calaveras and Tuolumne counties, but difficulty has been experienced in determining how old they are.

EXAMINER CLOSES BANK

The Navesink National, at Red Bank, N. J., in Difficulties.

Report to Controller Andrew A. Disenchantment of $10,000, the Publication of a Report, and False Entries.

Washington, D. C. — The Navesink National Bank, of Red Bank, N. J., was closed by the direction of the Acting Controller of the Currency after a conference by telephone with National Bank Examiner W. A. Mason, who has been engaged in making a special examination of the bank.

The bank was examined in regular order July 27 and the examination disclosed a discrepancy between the individual and general ledgers of $10,000, a falsification of the last report of condition to the Controller of the Currency and numerous false entries and erasures on the books.

A re-examination was ordered and Examiner Mason discovered increased shortages and irregularities to such an extent as to render the bank insolvent.

A new president, cashier and board of directors were elected, and an effort made by them to put sufficient cash into the bank to restore its capital and solvency, with the assistance of a correspondent bank. It was thought that this effort would be successful.

Bank Examiner W. A. Mason has been appointed receiver.

The last report of the condition of the bank, under date June 9, 1903, which report, it is charged, was falsified, shows the condition on that date to have been as follows:

RESOURCES.
Loans and discounts.....	$342,576
Overdrafts.....	380
United States bonds.....	13,125
Real estate.....	35,600
Stock, securities, etc.....	36,726
Due from banks and bankers.....	31,899
Cash and cash items.....	28,625
Total.....	$480,914

LIABILITIES.
Capital stock.....	$50,000
Surplus and undivided profits.....	27,133
Circulation.....	12,500
Due to banks and bankers.....	17,308
Deposits.....	316,913
Notes and bills, rediscounted.....	66,000
Total.....	$480,914

Red Bank, N. J.—The news that the Navesink National Bank was closed came like a thunderbolt, and depositors thronged the entrance of the bank. It is said that the bank has done a large business, considering the amount of its capital stock and deposits, and that most of the time it needed a sum of money larger than it had on hand to meet borrowers' demands.

Bank Examiner Mason said: "I might say that for months past the condition of the Navesink National Bank has been unsatisfactory to the Controller of the Currency. Its business has been too much extended and its cash reserve has been much below the required amount fixed by the statute."

When asked whether the depositors would receive their money, the examiner said that he was not prepared to answer.

The Navesink Bank was organized twelve years ago. Early this year a savings department was added.

MINNESOTA BANK CLOSED.

Montgomery, Minn.—The Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of this place has been closed for business, and the whereabouts of the cashier, B. A. Krainer, is unknown. The deposits run from $50,000 to $60,000, and the liabilities are estimated at $150,000.

Curtis Jett and Thomas White Will Spend Life in Jail For Killing Marcus.

Cynthiana, Ky.—The jury in the case of Curtis Jett and Thomas White, charged with the assassination of James B. Marcus in Jackson, Ky., returned a verdict of guilty, fixing the punishment of each at life imprisonment.

The verdict occasioned little surprise. The only question that caused the delay, it is said, was whether to make the punishment death or life imprisonment. The case has been on trial almost three weeks. At the first trial in Jackson the jury disagreed, and it is believed the verdict was a compromise with a juror opposed to capital punishment.

Premier Explains the Charge Against Kaiser's Warship.

Ottawa, Ont.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in reply to Dr. Sproule, M. P., said he was informed the German man-of-war now at Montreal was not recruiting Canadians there for the German army. The Highest Price in Minneapolis Since the Letter Corner in 1898.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"Dollar wheat" was at last seen on "Change" for the first time since the Letter corner in 1898. It was cash wheat, and there were sales at that figure. Later $1.02 was asked and $1.01 bid, with no sales. The September option touched $1.03, the highest point in fourteen years.

FOUR KILLED

And Nine Wounded in the Riot at Red Bank.

News has reached here that four men were killed and nine wounded in Red Bank county the latter part of last week by a desperate negro named Sledge. The sheriff and posse are now in hot pursuit, but have not yet been able to capture the murderer.

The trouble started over a difficulty in a watermelon patch. A party of white men were working the public road at Beaver Creek, near Lamar. Sledge has a watermelon patch near the road and when the men finished work they asked permission to eat a few melons. Sledge told them to help themselves, but requested that they take care not to destroy the vines. As soon as the men got into the patch they began to cut and slash melons in every direction, while Sledge looked on. The negro warned them to stop and then went after his gun. Returning he emptied the weapon into the crowd, wounding nine out of eleven immediately after the shooting. Sledge fled. A posse headed by the sheriff overtook the negro five miles from Wedowee. He was ordered to surrender but replied by firing his shotgun, instantly killing Thomas Ebbett and Robert Ford.

That afternoon Sledge was accosted on the road by James Moore and Bud Wilson. Without warning the negro raised his gun and fired, instantly killing Moore and mortally wounding Wilson.

At last accounts the posse is still in pursuit.

TWENTY-TWO DAYS

Will the Legislature Be in Session. Meets September 1.

The legislature meets on the first day of September, and will remain in session for twenty-two working days. There is much important legislation to be enacted, chief among which is provisions for local legislation on the many subjects which have been prohibited to the legislature by the new constitution. It has not yet been decided how it is to be done, but it is pointed out that it is inconceivable better that the boards of revenue or commissioners' establish stock districts, school districts and the like rather than for a new board at additional expense.

What to do about the courts is yet to be decided by the legislature. It is thought by many that the establishment of more and similar circuits, with the courts open all the year, will relieve to a great extent the present conditions, guarantee speedy trials and check in a large degree the tendency to lynch law so noticeable in the past few years. It has been shown that the idea to abolish the chancery courts was unpopular, and it is more than likely that the equity and civil courts will remain separate, but more circuits may be the solution.

Southern Goes to Ensley.

Information has been received that the Southern Railway is about to build a passenger station in Ensley, and that it will probably be in working order in not less than sixty days.

For several years this company has had a track laid from Birmingham to Ensley for the purpose of carrying freight only. This line is now being continued to Bessemer, which will give a direct line from Birmingham to Mobile. Hitherto, this company has used the Alabama Great Southern service from Birmingham to Bessemer, and then used their own line forward to Mobile, but with this new connection from Ensley to Bessemer will supply them with a direct route of their own. The Louisville and Nashville are making similar preparations.

John D. Rockefeller has, it is said, concluded negotiations whereby the Colorado Fuel and Iron company and the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company will become members of the United States Steel corporation within a year.

The Huntsville Daily News has reduced its subscription price to one cent a day.

Sheriff Killed.

A report comes from Piedmont telling of the murder of Deputy Sheriff Jim Price, of Cherokee county, one mile south of Palestine in the camp of a grading gang on the Seaboard Air Line. The killing was done late Sunday afternoon. Price had gone to the camp looking for a negro and while seated in one of the tents was surrounded and killed by other negroes.

The report that Russia and China will ask the United States to arbitrate the Russian occupancy of Manchuria is declared to be without foundation. Plus X has given $20,000 to the poor of Rome.

At Calera on September 14, the investigating committee demanded by Secretary Rountree of the Alabama Press Association will meet for action.

Opelika has a building boom; many new residences are going up and a number of improvements are under way.

Tuskegee's new depot is nearly completed and trains will be running over the new track in a few weeks.

FURNACE BLASTS

News from Iron Producing Points—The Market.

There is a large amount of iron in the yards of the furnaces in the Birmingham district, an estimate being made that something like 110,000 tons could be gotten together on a search. The production in Alabama is being kept up steadily. No intimation whatsoever is made of a reduction in this line. The month of July showed a falling off of production because of the blowing out of two furnaces and the banking of three or four others. The Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company has only five of its seven furnaces in operation, while the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company has four or five of its furnaces out of commission. The Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron company has one of its furnaces down.

Since the first of the present month the Central Iron and Coal company put into blast their new furnaces at Holton.

The Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company are repairing two furnaces. It is reported that the Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron company will shortly blow in its Gadsden furnace, an entirely new plant. This furnace should manufacture something like 300 tons of iron daily. The Alabama Steel and Wire company are rushing the work on their first furnace at Gadsden. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company have one furnace at Oxmoor, one at Bessemer and one at Ensley already ready for operation. It is not believed that any of these furnaces are to be started until there is some improvement in the iron market conditions and some of the iron on the yards has been worked off. Alabama is in a position to furnish almost any quantity of iron right now and for some months to come. The new furnace at Holton, in Tuscaloosa county, will furnish a relative company with iron needs.

During the past fortnight there have been many rumors concerning the Southern Furnace association. The withdrawal of the Chattanooga Furnace company was talked of, and it became common talk that the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company had withdrawn. However, this was strenuously denied and telegrams in a brisk tone were sent out announcing that prices were being maintained by that concern. A representative of the company asserted that the Sloss-Sheffield company was maintaining the prices fixed at Chicago strictly and that the statement that agents of the Sloss-Sheffield company had received instructions from the head office in Birmingham to advise purchasers to hold off, as it would be to their advantage to do so, is also denied. Rumors of the crumbling of the southern association were heard in the east, while western buyers made inquiry.

Non-association furnaces have not been able to do much lately in the market, not manufacturing any great amount of iron. The Woodward Iron company, the Tutwiler Coal, Coke and Iron company, and others without the association are not manufacturing any iron right now, and have but little, if any, on hand. It is admitted that consumers are waiting for further reductions in prices. Three reductions have been made so far, but nothing has happened since the Chicago meeting. Intimation is given that the consuming element is waiting for No. 2 foundry at $12 per ton, now selling at $13.50 per ton.

It is reported that when the Altoona extension of the Louisville and Nashville is complete the road will put on a through train from Birmingham to Atlanta via Gadsden.

In 1902 the south's total exports were $472,894,869, while for 1903 the figures were $508,237,264.

The Minchener & Henderson company have begun the erection of about fifteen cottages in West Huntsville to be occupied by the operatives of their spoke factory.

A passenger on the Campana sent the first money order by mailgram last week. It was for ten pounds. Time in sending and collecting, one hour.

Iron Market.

There has been more business placed during the past week than during the previous week, and inquiries are more numerous. The majority of the orders that have been placed for southern iron have been on the basis of $12 to $12.50 Birmingham for No. 2 foundry.

The buying of large tonnage of malleable iron in the Chicago territory has induced other malleable concerns to make inquiries as to prices for delivery during the balance of the year. We believe that there is more disposition to take hold and make purchases for future delivery than has been observed for several months.

JOURNALISTIC SCHOOL

Pulitzer Gives $2,000,000 Towards Establishment.

Joseph Pulitzer has provided the sum of $2,000,000 to establish a school of journalism at Columbia university. A new building for the school will be erected on Morningside Heights at a cost of $500,000 for the school. An important feature of the organization of this school will be the advisory board, to be nominated by the donor. This board will devise a plan and course of instruction that will meet every requirement on the scholastic as well as upon more strictly practical lines.

The following announcement is made concerning the school:

"Students purposing to enter upon the career of journalism will find accessible here courses of study that will for this profession be equivalent to what other professional schools supply for other professions, while young men already engaged upon newspapers and desiring to advance themselves more rapidly by the cultivation of their aptitude, may find in these courses a valuable assistance."

"It is believed that this will be an advantage to them immediately and ultimately to the press of the whole country."

At the time of the last census there were in the United States 114,034 lawyers and 30,098 persons classed as journalists. The legal profession was provided with trained recruits by one hundred law schools with 1106 professors and instructors. There was not one, and not a single one, of the 30,098 newspaper men and women in the country who enjoyed what a lawyer would call a systematic professional training.

The building for the school will be probably completed by the autumn of 1904, and it is hoped that the school may be opened soon after. The course of study will take two years. Candidates will be admitted upon an examination as to good character and intelligence, but previous collegiate courses will not be required.

RUSSIA SENDS WARSHIPS

To Turkey to Satisfy Her for the Murder of an Officer.

A squadron of the Russian Black Sea fleet has been ordered to sail for Turkish waters. Notification of this move has been telegraphed from Sebastopol to the Russian ambassador at Constantinople.

The dispatch of the squadron is intended to emphasize Russia's intention of exacting complete compliance with her demands to satisfy her for the murder of a Turkish gendarme of her consul at Monastir.

CARDINAL GIBBONS

Has Left Rome for Switzerland. He Speaks of the Papal Election.

Cardinal Gibbons left Rome Saturday for Switzerland, where he will remain some time with a friend to recover from the heat and his labors in Rome.

Cardinal Gibbons said the conclave and the election of the pope will remain the most precious remembrance of his life. He repeated that he felt the greatest satisfaction at the election of Pius X, adding that he was proud and happy to have been able to have the American pilgrimage received the day after the election of the new pope. Their reception, he said, being the first of all, was an event that neither Pius X nor the Americans will certainly never regret.

Congressman Henry R. Gibson of Tennessee, has become heir to between $50,000 and $100,000 by the will of Mrs. Martha Graves, whose son was a classmate of Mr. Gibson's. Congressman Gibson has accepted the bequest and he is said to be planning an endowment to help worthy young men through college, as Mrs. Graves is said to have assisted him.

Archbishop Consecrated.

Consecration of the Rev. J. J. Harty, of St. Louis, as archbishop of Manila took place Saturday in the Franciscan church of St. Anthony. Added interest to the ceremony was given by the fact that first archbishop to be consecrated under Pius X was an American.

The fact that the first American archbishop of Manila was consecrated in the church which is the seat of the general head of the Franciscan monks, one of the four orders objected to in the Philippines, was much commented on.

A priest named Milone willed his whole fortune of $30,000 to the reigning pontiff when Leo XIII was at the point of death. The priest has since died and his family now set up the claim that the will is invalid. Cardinal Rampolla, as papal secretary of state, has directed a local attorney to represent him, claiming that the priest collected the money in virtue of his office and that it should go to the church, and that Leo XIII being the sovereign pontiff at the time could be represented by his secretary of state.

It is reported that the crops are likely to be better than has been expected, and that the railroads will all they can do to handle the offered them during the balance of year. Owing to tight money conditions in New York the railroads probably not contracted for as many cars this year as was anticipated which will likely give us another shortage in the fall and winter.

Alabama planters predict that tember cotton will be worth between 10 and 12 cents. The prevailing price in this state is 79, with conditions improving. The "first bird" already beginning to arrive and a subject of much comment in the newspapers.

Work on Captain W. P. Lark's across Big Will's creek, near Alabama is progressing nicely. Mr. Lark is erecting several cottages for employes. He will have machinery for hauling Atlanta, Alabama City and electric motor power by Lark.

The cotton situation is becoming live issue in Alabama. Warehousemen and brokers are getting ready for business and the farmers are waiting on the price that will be paid for the cotton. Some planters estimate the cents per pound will be paid for staple.

The work of laying the truck line new electric street railway between Tusculuma, Sheffield and Florence will begin within the next ten days, and teams are busy preparing the bed.

The purchase of the Alabama branch of the Southern Car and Dry company by the citizens of Alabama is suggested. It is said that the plant could be purchased for $100,000.

Bessemer had a second election day. The ballot box containing votes in the second contest was stolen by a man who pretended to be a voter. The votes had been counted and Hucy declared the man a burglar. Mr. Sullivan pursued the vote with a Winchester, but later was defeated. Bessemer is to have another election.

THE SALESWOMAN

Compelled to Be on Her Feet the Larger Part of the Day Finds a Tonic in Peruna.

Miss Nellie Curtin, of St. Paul, Gives Her Experience.

MISS NELLIE CURTIN.

MISS NELLIE CURTIN, 644 Pearl street, St. Paul, Minn., head saleswoman in a department store, writes: "I have charge of a department in a dry goods store, and after standing the larger part of the day, I would go home with a dull ache, generally through my entire body. I used Peruna and feel so much better that I walk to and from the store now. I know Peruna to be the best medicine on the market for the diseases peculiar to women."—Miss Nellie Curtin.

Nothing is so weakening to the human system as the constant loss of mucus. Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane produces an excessive formation of mucus. Whether the mucous membrane be located in the head or pelvic organs, the discharge of mucus is sure to occur. This discharge of mucus constitutes a weakening drain, the system cannot long withstand the loss of mucus, hence it is that women afflicted with catarrhal affections of the pelvic organs feel tired and languid, with weak back and throbbing brain. A course of Peruna is sure to restore health by cutting off the weakening drain of the daily loss of mucus.

An Admirable Tonic.

Congressman Mark H. Dunnell, National Hotel, Washington, D. C., writes: "Your Peruna being used by myself and many of my friends and acquaintances, not only as a cure for catarrh but also as an admirable tonic for physical recuperation. I gladly recommend it to all persons requiring such remedies."—Mark H. Dunnell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 22.

Subject: David and Jonathan, 1 Sam. 23: 1-52—Golden Text, Prov. 23: 10—Memory Verse, 16-17—Study Verse, 1-2—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

II. The covenant renewed (vs. 12-23). "Jonathan said," The Revised Version gives the name of Jonathan as a witness that he would stand by letting him know exactly what Saul's purpose was concerning him. "Saul's father," that is, then he had given up the idea of "If there be any good in me," the private dialogue which is here detailed at full length presents a most beautiful exhibition of the two amiable and noble-minded friends. Jonathan was led, in the circumstances, to be the chief speaker. The strength of his attachment, his pure disinterestedness, his warm piety—his invocation to God consisting of a prayer and a solemn oath combined—the calm and full expression he gave to his conviction that his own family were by the divine will to be disinherited and David elevated to the possession of the throne, the covenant entered into with David on behalf of his descendants, and the imprecation (v. 16) denounced on any of them who should violate his part of the conditions, the reiteration of his promise on both sides (v. 17) to make it indissoluble; all this indicates such a power of mutual affection, such magnetic attractiveness in the character of David, such unselfishness and devotion to the feeling in the heart of Jonathan, that this interview for dramatic interest and moral beauty is unrivaled in the records of human friendship.

13. "The Lord be with thee," etc. These words show that Jonathan expected David to occupy the throne of Israel. No doubt Saul had now fully made up his mind that David was his rival for the throne, that he was the man after God's own heart of whom Saul had told him; and perhaps the fact that Samuel had anointed him was now generally known. Jonathan had all these facts before him and yet he had no jealousy, but loved his rival as his own soul.

14. "That I die not," etc. Convinced that David would succeed to the kingdom, Jonathan exerts a promise from him to show kindness to his posterity after his death as well as to himself during his lifetime. His words, like Saul's in chapter 24:21, are prompted by a fear lest even David should be jealous of the beautiful Oriental custom by which the first king of a new dynasty often tried to secure himself on the throne by murdering his predecessor's family. David fulfilled his promise by showing kindness to Mephibosheth. See 2 Sam. 9:1-13; 21:7.

15. "Made a covenant." Namely, by obtaining from David a promise to show kindness to himself and to his family forever. "That I die not," etc. There is much difference of opinion as to the meaning of the second part of this verse. It is generally understood to be a continuation of the historical words, and that this is the statement of the fact that the Lord would require the fulfillment of the covenant even at the hand of David's enemies. Benson explains it as follows: "If either Jonathan or any of his house shall prove enemies to David or to his house, let the Lord, the witness of the covenant, severely punish the violators of it." "To swear again." By this is meant that he again entered into a solemn covenant. "Because he loved him." His great love to David made him anxious to maintain friendly relations between their posterity.

16. "Seat empty." It seems that there was a seat made for Saul, Jonathan, and Abner; Saul having the chief seat, that next to the wall. "Stayed three days." Either with your family in Bethlehem, or wherever you find it convenient to go down your own way. "A quiet movement would be necessary in order to avoid being detected." "The business," etc. Literally, "On the day of the business," referring either to the incident recorded in chapter 16:7, or to some unknown matter. "Ezel." The name of a stone near Gibeah, well known to Jonathan and David, but unknown to Saul.

17. "And I will shoot," etc. Jonathan thus provides for informing David of Saul's designs without making a personal interview between them necessary, as it might be hazardous to attempt to meet him to warn him of his danger. "Because he loved him." His great love to David made him anxious to maintain friendly relations between their posterity.

NEVER MIND.

Are you little, little boy, are you angry and sore? With the way things have happened today? Have you never all you can, till you can stand no more? Are you fretted and hurt to your very heart's core? And earnestly rubbed of your play? Never mind, never mind, the day will soon end. And with it your trials so sore. For troubles a happy tomorrow you'll spend. And kindness and love shall your broken heart mend. And troubles remember no more.

Are you a little maid, do you think you're abused? By playmates or teacher or friend, A victim of falsehood, unjustly accused, Your heart's dearest wishes sadly refused? Till you almost wish life at an end? Today may be rainy and everything drear And nature seemed in gloom. In sunshine tomorrow, the day will be clear, Each sorrow has rain, but a diamond appears. The flowers in the fields all bloom.

—FRANK BOARD, in Ram's Horn.

HUMOROUS.

Blotter—I tell you automobileing is a fine sport. Slobba—Yes, if you have the money to pay 'em.

Tommy—Pop, what is an optimist? Tommy's Pop—An optimist, my son, is a man who is married and glad of it.

The Querist—What do you think of the doctrine of the survival of the fittest? The Ecotist—It is all right, so far. I am still alive.

Householder—There's something wrong with this bill. It's too big! Grocer's Clerk—That's why the boss sent me to collect it.

She—You must see, papa, dear, about our marriage. But don't be anxious about the outcome. He—What I'm anxious about is the income.

Husband—I wish I knew where I could find a buried treasure. Wife—Never mind, dear, I'm your treasure. Husband—Yes, but you are not buried.

Mrs. Knicker—They say a fool and his money are soon parted. Mrs. Bocker—It isn't so. George is a perfect idiot, and I can't get a cent out of him.

Higgins—Would you look at old Smith out in that dreaching rain? He looks to be up against it. Wiggins—Yes; he is even too poor to raise an umbrella.

Miss Screecher—Papa is thinking of giving my voice a trial. Mr. Blunt—Well, I hope for your sake he'll not select a jury from among your neighbors.

Pete—Did you hear about Paul, de bunks man? Why, he "done" de freaks in de side show out of their wages. Jim—H'm! I suppose yer'd say he was "doing" wonders.

Firrst Citizen—What do you think of this idea of an army of the unemployed marching to Washington? Second Citizen—That's nothing new. It happens every four years.

"But we—we shall not begin our married life with a secret, shall we, dearest?" "No, dearest," he murmured; "there's p e o t n y f a i n t a i n m u r e d; "there's plenty of time."

Hamlet—People speak in high terms of Dr. Wise. Towne—Yes; but he isn't always consistent. For instance, he told me that I must avoid excitement, and the very next day he sent me his bill.

"Tommy," said the surprised mother as she caught him in the act of taking the fifth slice of cake, "aren't you forgetting yourself?" "No, ma," chuckled Tommy. "I am remembering myself pretty well."

Proud Father—Rick, my boy, if you live up to your oration you'll be an honor to the family. Valdeletorian—I expect to do better than that, father. I am going to try to live up to the bacchanalian sermon.

She—There is just one little bit of millinery that I desire most. He (crossly)—You needn't say any more, I won't buy it for you. She—Don't be afraid. You'll never get the bill for it. It's a widow's bonnet.

A CALIFORNIAN'S DESCRIPTION OF COTHAM'S VULGAR RICH.

The Striving for Display Has Assumed the Look of Madness—Folly of "Keeping Up the Pace"—A Bankruptcy and Embarrassment Perpetrated the Result.

The following remarkable description of "New York's vulgar rich" appears as an editorial review in the San Francisco Bulletin: Western people that have visited New York within the last three or four years have been astonished and impressed by the ostentatious opulence of that city.

The smart drives are filled with long files of private equipages. The women dress richly and splendidly. It is nothing to see a quarter of a million dollars' worth of jewels decking the person of the wife of some man who is not known to the public. There are so many millionaires in New York that they are as common as members of the lower house in Washington, or as Chinamen in San Francisco. Long streets are taken up by the great houses of obscure millionaires.

Great fortunes are easily made in New York, where money abounds, but the indigenous rich are not the whole of the millionaire population of that city, for hundreds of western families, having made their pile in Michigan lumber, or Pennsylvania coal, or Ohio coal, or California mines, or Texas cattle, or other Western enterprises and industries, move to New York, set up establishments there, and help to support Sherry's, the Waldorf-Astoria, Tiffany's and other such places.

The splendor and luxury of New York are barbaric. The striving for display has assumed the look of madness. Immense sums are spent in folly. There seems to be a competition in extravagance. People advertise their wealth by extraordinary entertainments and by throwing their money about as if they were glad to get rid of it. Prices at the places of public resort frequented by the rich are consequently very high.

There is a millionaire public in New York large enough to support such establishments, and prices are ranged according to the millionaire purse. These establishments are rated in New York as of the first class. As there is not a large millionaire population in any other city, prices at the first-class hotels and restaurants elsewhere are based on a lower estimate of the average wealth of the patrons. People in moderate circumstances can afford to live and dine at the Palace Hotel in this city or at any first class hotel or restaurant in any other city except New York. But in New York a family having an income of only a few thousands a year lives beyond its means if it dines frequently at Sherry's or at the Waldorf-Astoria.

But—and herein is the evil of these luxurious resorts—the usual well-to-do American family, in New York as elsewhere, is afraid to patronize any but a first-class hotel or restaurant, or to cross the ocean on any but the fastest steamers. Consequently many hundreds of families, dependent on the salary of the husband and father, attempt to keep up with the pace set by the millionaires. A salary of ten thousand a year will barely support a husband and wife who make any pretension of mingling among the patrons of the high-priced resorts. The result is that thousands of families in New York are living beyond their means. A few years of this unreasonable mode of life drives the man of the family into bankruptcy, of course, and ruins the family, but in their headlong downward flight the extravagant New Yorkers do not care about the future. They live luxuriously from day to day and stare off the crash as long as they can. When it comes they sink out of sight—go West or become part of the submerged classes.

There are many families in New York that live very meanly and parsimoniously that they may have cash enough to make a figure at Sherry's or the Waldorf-Astoria on Sunday night. Many of the best jewelry stores make a practice of lending sets of jewelry for a night. For this accommodation they receive large pay. The wife of some comparatively poor man will appear in public wearing from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars' worth of diamonds, for the use of which she has given a sum equal to a month's income of her husband. The husband, poor man, is very likely as vain and foolish as his wife. He enjoys having people that do not know him take him for a millionaire. For this he gives up all the real comforts and enjoyments of life. On his income, amply sufficient if he would spend it reasonably, he is nothing but a tawdry pauper.

Not only ultimate bankruptcy, but frequently embarrassment is the consequence of this extravagant way of living. Salaries that would seem very large in San Francisco become mere pittance in New York. Here he can dine at a restaurant with the "best," that is, the richest people in town, all about him. In New York he must herd with the poor, and can behold the rich only from a distance. Of course, if a man is clever, he can become profoundly envious and find the vulgar rich very amusing—all from a distance—and can work himself into an exceedingly superior state of mind. He can become even more than satisfied if he will contrast the display of vast wealth with the misery and pauperism that prevail so close to it.

If the satirist is from San Francisco he may sneer at the fact that this city is yet fairly free from the madness for making and the passion for spending money. He may get some consolation

Washington, dated August 12, has received at the state department the treaty by the Colombian senate, which was the subject of the Panama canal treaty has been unanimously rejected by the Colombian senate.

Thrift is generally acknowledged to be one of the leading characteristics of the natives of the United States, and it was more forcibly exemplified in the case of the Panama canal treaty than in any other. But how to apply halfheartedness? (Which is the weight of a pound) a useful purpose was the object of the length the manufacturing of the thread seemed the most practical. Mr. Halton had one mouse in the amazing distance of 18 miles, but he proved that an ordinary mouse could run 10 1/2 miles on an average. A half penny's worth of cotton was sufficient for its support for 18 miles during which it ran 736 half miles. He had actually two mice competing in the making of sewing thread for more than a year. The thread mill was so constructed that the common house mouse was enabled to make a thread of cotton by twisting, twisting and turning from 100 to 120 times a Sunday not excepted.

To perform this task the thread mill had to run 10 1/2 miles in this journey it performed with every day. A half penny's worth of cotton served one of these little mill culprits for the long period of weeks. In that time it made threads of 25 inches, and as a mouse was paid to women for every thread made in the ordinary way the mouse at that rate, earned 3 pence every week, just 1 farthing a day, or 1 shilling and 6 pence a year. Mr. Halton firmly intended to use for the loan of the empty cable in Dunfermline, which would be held, he calculated, 10,000 miles of sufficient room being left for the cable and some hundred of spare miles. The cable, however, overtook the mouse before this marvelous project could be carried out.

Furniture While You Wait. A man who was told by his wife that he should work at a desk and stand for three or four hours a day, stood of sitting all the time while a shop in Centre street (to be a shop and hand desk suitable for the purpose.

"Not one in just now," said the man, "but if you are in no hurry or down. There's sure to be one here in 10 minutes."

The man was skeptical but he was sure enough, in less than 10 minutes a wagon drove to the door with a load of second hand office furniture and right on top of the heap was such a desk as he was looking for. The dealer explained that in four or five days where he bought the furniture of an office from some man going out of business there was a desk for men who work at a desk in the outfit. He knew that the desk was on the way, and he took chances on asking his customer to wait.

"Some of those old-fashioned wooden desks are wonderful," said the man. "They don't make furniture like that nowadays, and the present generation of clerks should be thankful for it."—New York Times.

Servian Superstitions. Vouk, in his "Dictionary of Servian Folklore," gives many curious details regarding the lingering superstitions of the Servians, who have retained many of the beliefs of their forefathers of the dark ages. Among the most firmly rooted of these superstitions are peculiarities of living about the sun and seeking people's blood. And he believes that certain old superstitions have a secret way of finding out whether children are born vampires. He says it is to see that the child shall not live.

These superstitions are the result of a usual share with the primitive, who is not himself a vampire, but a well-cleaned blood's head, and he is in his garden to keep of the and within.

of Chilton county was better communication between the west-

it was unanimously decided a dummy road from Clanton Mapleville would be of inesti-convenience to all citizens living between the two points named,

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Monday, just after dinner, and were feeling good, on the porch of the Smith boarding house, all the commissioners being present, Mr. James Martin and the conversation started on improvement, and the remark made that one of the greatest of Chilton county was better communication between the west-part of the county and Clanton, it was unanimously decided a dummy road from Clanton to Maplesville would be of inestimable benefit to the county, a great benefit to all citizens living between the two points named, and largely increase the trade of the towns, could be built and Loring, La., Aug. 15, 1903.

Editor Banner—Please publish the following to your many readers. I will begin by saying it looks like all the people of Chilton county are trying to get married.

I am living in north west Louisiana about ten miles from the Texas line, where the largest mosquitoes grow in the Union, and the people are fighting them all the time. This is a fine country for a young man to live in. Anyone can earn $2. per day, which is the average for common labor at almost any kind of public work. Farm hands get from $20 to $25 per month, with board and lodging free.

This soil produces from one to one and a half bales of cotton to the acre without any commercial fertilizer. This country was partly settled by Mexicans and Greeks, of which about 2000 Mexicans were born and raised here. Nearly everyone owns their own land and are doing well. If one gets mad with you then you had better keep your eyes open, because all the rest are mad and you will have your hands full. These Mexicans cultivate this soil to about the same average as in Alabama.

A few days ago I was out near the oil fields and happened to pass a stock ranch when a noise attracted my attention. I found a small calf about two years old dying from the stings of mosquitoes. They had got into its nostrils so that it could not breathe at all, and its mouth was also filled with the pests. The calf had to be killed. Dr. Bennett, of Kansas, says that where mosquitoes are so thick it causes malarial fever.

Yours respectfully, Z. C. N.

Last Friday saw the closing of one of the best singing schools we have had in quite a while. Prof. N. J. Jones has been teaching a large and enthusiastic class for boys and girls for the past ten days.

By 8 o'clock students began gathering and by 9 o'clock a large crowd of students, parents and friends had gathered. Singing and review work was the order of the day. The class was ably assisted by Prof. T. L. Robinson, and the school organist was also assisted by Misses Martha Pyron and Eudora Pattillo and Mr. Lee Robinson.

Prof. Jones had some of his students to conduct the class at intervals, which they did with efficiency. Among those who led were: Messrs. Tommie Pyron, Harvey Curlee and Sammy Yates.

At 10:30 a recess of 20 minutes was given and handshaking and general hospitality was everywhere to be seen.

At 12 o'clock a recess of one hour was given for dinner, which was bountifully spread under the giant oaks which surrounds the church. The visitors were loud in their praise to Prof. Jones in the proficiency of his class. We feel sure that the young men he turned out as leaders will be quite an acquisition to the society of our community in arousing musical enthusiasm. We need more enthusiasm among our younger people and a few more zealous workers like Prof. Jones, and surely radical changes in our Christian societies would follow.

At the conclusion of the exercises Prof. Jones gave a farewell address, which was very touching, and after prayer by Mr. J. M. Curlee the benediction was said and the singing school was no more. G. L. A.

THE FIRST COTTON BOLL.
The first cotton boll this season was brought into the Banner office last Friday afternoon by Mr. C. J. Jones. It was raised on his place at Jumbo, and was taken from a stalk 6 feet high, with 123 bolls on. He reckons he will average from a bale and a half to two bales to the acre.

Calera

All quiet in and around the lovely little town of Calera. There are some complaints of tight times, but all hands are looking forward when, in the near future, they can come home to a new pall. Good crops is now the slogan that is heralded to us from every quarter. Good news indeed to the people.

Watermelons, watermelons, galore. The streets and storehouses of Calera are kept full of them. The wee little preacher of Chilton county is in about every other day with a big load of as fine melons as grows. The call him little and so he is, but try him on a matter of business and you will not find him so very small.

Mr. D. H. Mullins of Chilton comes every few days to see the Calera people. He seems to like them well, and I am fully convinced that he likes the quarters and dimes fully as well as he does the people.

West Calera is booming. The White Star Lime Company has got a move on everything around there. The men who work for them will not have to do much patching on the bottom of their pants.

It is reported that the Sultan of Turkey says he is pursuing a very wrong course in regard to his government affairs and that he will continue to do so. Now, the question is, would he not make a good politician for Alabama. I. C.

Fatal Accident at Ocampo.

Jumbo

The farmers are sitting back smiling over the prospective crops. Mr. A. C. Barnes was in our midst Wednesday.

Miss Lucy House, who has been visiting her brother at Ensley, has returned, and is visiting friends in Shelby county this week, but we are glad to learn she will return home 25th inst.

There will be an all-day singing at Corinth, two miles north of Jumbo, the fifth Sunday in this month, conducted by Prof. Abb Glass of Jemison. Our Clanton friends are especially invited.

Success to the Banner and its many readers.

ONE OF THE GIRLS.

Thursday night of last week a party of twelve young people enjoyed a delightful hay ride, leaving the home of Mr. H. C. Young and journeying five miles to the Davis saw mill. The following comprised the party: Misses Bettie Young, Ola Jones, Minnie Mullins, Eliza Young, Callie Young, Messrs. C. J. Jones, O. B. Young, Brooks Young, Fred Mullins, Clark Barnes, Luther Mullins, Haulsey Mullins. A few songs were sung and plenty of fruit eaten and all thoroughly enjoyed the ride.

Canan.

Rev. Culpeper closed his meeting here with only three accessions. While the accessions were few, the interest manifested was great, and we anticipate a great harvest from the seeds sown. The church has just completed a well which adds much to the convenience of the church, school and public. We have water now, free to all.

Farmers are beginning to harvest fodder and cotton is beginning to open. Soon we will hear the bright faced farmer boy as he plods cheerily along to and from the snow white cotton fields thinking of the recompense for his earnest but hard labor.

We are glad to note that the pest bug has ceased his work, and that the farmer has nothing to blight his hopes of a good harvest as a result of his labors.

The Iron Market.
Reports say there is a great deal more interest in the pig iron market than has been shown for some time past. Sales during the past week have embraced quite a tonnage of malleable, and foundry irons of all kinds and grades. Buyers are very much interested in the future of pig iron and are making inquiries every day as to placing their orders for consumption during the balance of this year and part of next. According to official reports the production last month was on the basis of about two million tons less per year than shown in the two preceding months. The railroads are now having considerable trouble in furnishing enough cars to haul coke, and some of the furnaces have been obliged to shut down temporarily on account of not receiving shipments promptly. It is believed that now is a good time to get a little pig iron and coke ahead to be prepared in case of inability of railroads to make prompt delivery later in the year.

NOT A SCRATCH.

Did He Receive, Although Dragged Forty Feet and His Horse Injured.

Z. V. Bell, the electrician of the car line of the Alabama Steel & Iron Co., at Gadsden, had a very narrow escape from death and he is still wondering how he is alive. Mr. Bell was riding a horse which he was trying with a view of purchasing. The horse became unmanageable as soon as he saw a train and made a break in its direction. Mr. Bell lost control of the animal and they were struck by the train. Horse and rider were dragged for forty feet or more, the pilot finally throwing both of them to the side of the track. Mr. Bell got up, and when he found no bones broken and no scratches he was amazed. The horse had one leg broken.

IMMIGRATION LEAGUE

Concerted Action For Industrial Expansion.

Seventy-two local bodies in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas have formed a central organization, known as the Four States Immigration League. This state is represented in the general league by nine organized bodies: Anniston Commercial club, Birmingham Commercial club, Citronelle Business Men's association, Florence, Florence Business and Industrial League, Gadsden Commercial and Industrial association, Huntsville Chamber of Commerce, Mobile Commercial club, Montgomery Commercial and Industrial association, New Decatur Commercial club.

On the back of the letter-heads are printed the names of the seventy-two organizations which make up the league, and thus the full strength of the entire organization is carried to every correspondent in every piece of business. Letters and circulars by the thousands are scattered among the farmers of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and elsewhere and the railroads are issuing folders that contain rosters of the seventy-two combined bodies.

The four combined states are prosperous, presenting as leading products cotton, iron, timber, coal, rice, oil and sugar. Each of the four have ports that are yearly rising in importance, and each is supplied with water ways. A convention for the seventy-two bodies is to be held in New Orleans next fall when further steps will be taken to promote the work of the league. The general officers of the league are: A. F. Thomassen, president, Hattiesburg, Miss.; B. F. Bonner, first vice-president, Houston, Tex.; Charles Schuler, second vice-president, Shreveport, La.; W. J. Milner, third vice-president, Birmingham, Ala.; Tom Richardson, secretary and treasurer, New Orleans, La.

LORD SALISBURY DEAD.

England's Ex-Premier: Passed Away at 9:05 Saturday Night.

Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoyne Cecil, Marquis of Salisbury, was born at Hatfield, England, February 10, 1830. He sat in the house of commons from August, 1853, until accession to the marquisate April 12, 1868; became secretary of state for India in July, 1866, but resigned March 2, 1867, in consequence of unwillingness to support the reform bill; accepted the same post February, 1874; succeeded Lord Derby as minister of foreign affairs in May, 1875; was one of the British plenipotentiaries at the congress of Berlin, from June to November, 1878, he was prime minister; again from 1886 to 1892, and again from 1895 until about a year and a half ago when he retired from public life.

The death of Lord Salisbury occurred on the fiftieth anniversary of his entry into public life as a member of the house of commons for Stamford.

All his children except Lord Edwin Cecil, the soldier son in Egypt, were present. Viscount Cranborne now becomes Marquis of Salisbury.

The elevation of Lord Cranborne to the house of lords creates a vacancy in the Rochester district and probably will entail the selection of a new under secretary of foreign affairs. The ex-premier, though retired from political life, was an important figure in many public ways. He was a warden of the cinque ports, high steward of Westminster and chancellor of Oxford university. His death places an order of Knight of the Garter at the disposal of King Edward.

The Humberts have been found guilty of fraud and sentenced to pay a fine of 100 francs and to five years imprisonment. The D'Aurignacs were sentenced to two years.

For the first time in eighteen years the cotton worm has made its appearance in Tuscaloosa county. The pest seems to be spreading rapidly and is especially numerous on the plantations along the Warrior river.

George M. Gould, the piano manufacturer is dead.

An appeal will be taken by the Humberts.

The G. A. R.

The Grand Army of the Republic selected Boston as the place in which the encampment of 1904 will be held and elected the following officers:

Commander-in-chief, General John C. Black, of Illinois; senior vice-commander, Col. C. Mason Keene, of California; junior vice-commander, Col. Harry Kessler, of Montana, surgeon-in-chief, George A. Harman, of Ohio, chaplain-in-chief, Winfield Scott, of Arizona.

Creston, Ia., reports a case of swallowed green peas sprouting in a child's stomach and causing death.

Texas. Five alarms were turned in Friday.

Sallie Prather and May Cook, two girls, ages respectively 15 and 7, ran away from the Summerfield orphanage, nine miles from Selma, Friday night.

The management of the orphanage is of the belief that outside help was given the girls to get away. The Prather girl has not been on a train since she was ten years old, yet she bought tickets, changed cars twice and went safely to Lafayette. If she had more than a dollar, the girl got it from outside sources.

ABOUT $15,000

Will Be the Cost of the Alabama Board of Arbitration.

It is rumored that the cost of the coal strike arbitration at Birmingham will be about $15,000. According to agreement, the two sides interested will bear all these expenses.

It is learned that the amount of Judge Gray's compensation was $4,000 and expenses. The latter included transportation from and to Wilmington, hotel bills and incidental expenses. Judge Gray for his two weeks' services received from the Alabama operators and miners a fee equal to that paid him for his five months' service on the Anthracite Arbitration Board.

It is reported that each of the other members of the board received $2,000 each. Professor Neill, the recorder, is said to have received $1,250. The bills of the stenographers amounted to more than $1,300.

PEONAGE IN COFFEE COUNTY.

Similar Practice to That in Coosa. White Men Held.

United States deputy marshals have arrested Marion Priestwood, of Roanoke, Coffee county, on a charge of peonage.

It is claimed that Priestwood commenced a prosecution against an old white man named English and his son, who were working for him at the time, by having his (Priestwood's) son, who was a justice of the peace, issue warrants for their arrest and having them arrested by one Godson, who was acting constable, and an employee of Priestwood's; that on being threatened with imprisonment the two Englishes entered into a contract with Priestwood to work out about $50 with him. It is claimed by the Englishes that they had no trial and that there was no charge against them on Justice Priestwood's docket. The contract, however, is said to stand approved by Priestwood as justice of the peace.

Stuffed Payrolls.

Robert E. Dixon, secretary of the Means & Fulton Iron works at North Birmingham, was arrested on a charge of the embezzlement of $500 belonging to the company.

The arrest of Dixon has created something of a sensation among those who know him. He has been with the Means & Fulton Foundry company for a number of years, and was a trusted employee, having in charge the paying of all of the employees of the concern. It is alleged that Dixon "padded" the pay rolls and had done it systematically for some time.

A Montgomery correspondent writes: The business season has opened and cotton will soon begin to come in. Merchants and warehousemen are getting ready for the fall trade and all is bustle and stir again. The cotton crop is good and it is expected that the receipts at this market will be largely increased over those of any previous year and the volume of business much larger than ever before. The future outlook in a business way is very bright.

WE ARE GROWING

More Rapidly Than any Other Nation in the World.

The census bureau has published a bulletin a discussion of the increase of population in the United States as shown by the census of 1900.

The increase in the population of continental United States that is the United States exclusive of Alaska and the recent insular possessions, was 13, 646,861, or 20.7 per cent. Only one country, Argentina, has shown by the most recent figures a more rapid growth. The present rate of growth in continental United States is estimated as double the average of the rate of Europe. It is nearly double that of Canada and exceeds by one-sixth that of Mexico and by one-tenth that of Australia. In the decade 1890 to 1900 for the first time in our national history, the southern states increased faster than the northern. East of the Mississippi the northern states as a group have grown in the last ten years somewhat more rapidly than the southern but west of the Mississippi river the southern states have increased almost two and one-half times as rapidly as the northern and it is this fact which makes the growth of the north as a whole exceed that of the south. In the north Atlantic division the rate of increase has risen steadily since the civil war, a notable contrast to the trend in the country as a whole.

Pennsylvania Launched.

The United States armored cruiser Pennsylvania was launched Saturday. Miss Quay, daughter of United States Senator Quay, broke a bottle of American champagne on the cruiser's bow and said: "I christen thee Pennsylvania."

The new cruiser will have an unusually powerful battery, made up of a great number of eight and six-inch guns. She was designed with the idea of producing a ship of great speed, equipped with a battery of a kind that did execution at Manila and at Santiago—that is, of guns of medium size calibre.

The Pennsylvania started on its career under the name of the Nebraska, the appellation Pennsylvania having been first bestowed on a battleship, now under construction at Seattle, Wash. The department was persuaded to swap the names of the two vessels, the Washington people desiring the name of some western state for the ship building at Seattle, while the Pennsylvanians wanted their own state honored by having the Cramps' vessel christened the Pennsylvania.

Catacombs in New York.

An architect has completed plans for a mortuary chapel in Calvary cemetery on Long Island, with an underground cavern for the burial of priests, resembling the catacombs of Rome.

The idea is one which Archbishop Farley conceived while traveling through Rome about two years ago. It occurred to him at that time that the archdiocese of New York, with its large number of priests, should have some such place for their burial.

Ordinarily there will be little to indicate the size of the catacombs, it being intended, however, shall occupy a space of about two acres, fifty feet below the surface. The walls will be of hewn granite.

The new telephone system for Florence, which has just been completed at a cost of $9,000, has been inspected by the chief inspector for the Bell company, and declared by him to be satisfactory.

A new city hall is proposed for Florence. The city council has the matter under consideration.

New uniforms and magazine rifles are now ready for distribution to the Alabama troops.

Panama has issued a decree temporarily establishing a tax of 100 pesos, Colombian silver, on every steam and sailing vessel of more than a thousand tons burden arriving at the ports of Panama or Colon, this money to be kept as a separate fund to be expended for sanitary purposes and quarantine costs.

It is reported from San Juan, P. R., that the medical man in charge of the leper colony at the mouth of the harbor has been suspended by the governor for allowing chickens, etc., raised by the lepers to be sold in the city, and to have permitted the exchange of paper money by lepers and uninfected residents. The city was on the eve of a reign of terror. It had been believed that the leper settlement was a model establishment.

Major Eli D. Hoyle, a West Point graduate from Alabama and a member of the United States artillery corps, has been ordered to command the field artillery battalion at Fort Meyer, Va.

The municipality of Carpieto, Pope Leo's native town, has started a subscription for the erection of a colossal statue of the late pontiff. It is to be forty meters high, and is to stand on the neighboring Mt. Capreo, where, in his younger days, Leo went hunting. Catholics throughout the world have been invited to contribute to the fund for the erection of this memorial. Ernest Blouet has been selected as the sculptor.

AWARD CONCESSIONS

Miners Gain by Decisions of Board of Arbitration.

The arbitration commission in the controversy between the operators and miners in the Birmingham district, over the wage-scale and contract for the current year, has handed down its award, after two weeks of hard work. The finding of the arbitrators were unanimous, and the decision tells a wonderful story when it is remembered that two of the arbitrators were taken from one side of the controversy and two from the other side.

The chief matters decided by the board were in regard to the wage scale, which the award advanced 2 1/2 cents on both the maximum and minimum, making it 47 1/2 to 57 1/2 cents as against 45 and 55 cents last year.

A semi-monthly pay day is established with non-transferable pay checks.

The scale for narrow work based on the Pratt seam is reduced 13 cents per yard.

Thomas G. Bush and Edward Flynn are appointed a committee to adjust the differential between pick and machine mining.

A minimum of twenty days is fixed as a month's work.

Differentials at Jefferson and Kimberly mines are reduced 3 1/2 cents per ton.

Boys under 14 years must not be employed in the mines after September 1.

When differentials for their coal are paid they shall not apply to yard prices. While both sides hoped for an award which would be more pronouncedly in their favor, no criticism was heard from representative men on either side, after the decision was made known. Both seemed inclined to accept gracefully.

Furnace News.

The Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron company's new furnace at Gadsden was lighted Saturday. This is the largest furnace in blast in the south with one exception. Its stack is 85 feet high and the bosh measure 19 feet. The capacity of the furnace is about 250 tons a day.

The Republic's No. 2 furnace at Thomas, which has been undergoing repairs for several weeks, went in blast Saturday.

The Eacey-Buck Iron company's furnace at Measritt is being rebuilt and enlarged and will be ready for the torch soon.

Work on the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company's new furnace at Ensley is being pushed and will be completed early next year. It has a mammoth stack.

Other Alabama furnaces now in course of construction are the Lookout Iron company's at Batelle, the Woodward Iron company's at Woodward, and the Schuler's at Gadsden.

During the past week more progress has been made at the Gadsden steel plant than for any week since the commencement of work nearly a year ago. For the length of a half mile construction is going on with a rush, while the entire site is covered with material of all kinds for the various buildings. Two of the three blowing engines are ready for business. The connections are being made and as soon as the incline is up the stack will be ready for the torch. The steel framing for the gas-producing house is up and the framing for another is being rushed. Many new houses are springing up around the site of the plant.

A new ice plant conducted by the American Coal and Ice company will shortly be built in Mobile.

Alabama's wharves are valued at $460,300.

Col. J. A. Montgomery, surveyor of the Birmingham, Huntsville and Gulf railroad, has completed the preliminary survey of another route for the road. Huntsville business men are still enthusiastic over the prospects of building the new railroad and they believe it will be started within a few months.

The first battery of thirty-eight coke ovens has been completed at Battelle and a second battery will be ready to fire in about twenty days. Two more batteries will be added at once and it is believed that the entire system will be ready for operation at the expiration of sixty days. Work on the big furnace is being pushed rapidly. Nearly all the foundations are complete and the columns for the furnace proper have been erected.

The large dam of the Elba Power company on Pea river will be completed and will develop 2,000 horse power.

$245,495 worth of printing presses are in use in the state.

Mrs. Parker, wife of George Parker, a machinist who lives near Athens, attempted to commit suicide by swallowing a grain and a half of morphine. Medical attention was called and she was brought around all right, but declared that the doctors had only prevented now what would have been later.

Mike Sherman, white, aged 23 years, was drowned Saturday afternoon while bathing with a number of companions in the Tennessee river near Sheffield.

STAKED HIM FOR MARRIAGE

And Now Want Their Property For Usury.

A clique of usurers and money brokers has been demanding from Count Franz Joseph von Habsburg-Monach since his marriage to Miss Marie Satterlee of New York, at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1900, which sum the count has refused to pay. The public prosecutor brought proceedings against the usurers for attempted extortion before the count's marriage. They asserted they supplied him with the money to go to New York and marry the daughter of the late Count Satterlee, and that the count should pay for $50,000, payable in installments, be married Miss Satterlee, the daughter of the late Count Satterlee, and that the count should properly supply with the money his address to Miss Satterlee, not accepted. Later the count went to America, presumably to pay the expense, eventually married the girl, and the group of usurers, who had financed the marriage, demanded $50,000, not on the count's marriage, but another which the usurers, Latsch Monach signed and refused to pay.

THE death of Lord Salisbury removes another shining light of the nineteenth century. He was a great statesman of whom the English people were justly proud.

NEXT Tuesday the Legislature convenes and for twenty-two days will grapple with various important questions. The Banner has arranged for a special letter each week on the work of the solons.

"BILL ARP" is no more and the South loses one of its most popular writers. His real name was Charles H. Smith, but he will long be affectionately remembered by his nom de plume "Bill Arp."

IN the sixth congressional district Congressman Bankhead is promised a lively time for re-election. Richmond P. Hobson has long been talked of as a candidate, and now W. B. Oliver, a popular man in the district, is also spoken of. Between the two, Bankhead will have a hard time in pulling through.

"THE Alabama Farmer" is the title of a new monthly journal for farmers, stockraisers, fruit-growers and poultrymen to be published at Birmingham. The first number will be issued in September. The

THE board of arbitration to settle the differences between the miners and the operators in the Birmingham district has rendered its decision, which appears to be favorable to the miners. In all cases of arbitration a decision entirely satisfactory to both parties is almost out of the question, and in this case the operators may possibly feel a little aggrieved. However, a strike entails loss and hardships to both sides, and when it is over neither party is satisfied. Arbitration is by far the most sensible way to settle these disputes.

A SUGGESTION comes from the Montevallo Sentinel that it would be a good idea for the teachers of the three counties of Shelby, Bibb and Chilton to hold a tri-county Institute at Montevallo. "The Sentinel believes the good people of our town would open their homes to entertain teachers who might be with us for two or three days, and we think all the visitors would be well taken care of." It suggests that a two days Institute be held some time in October.

We think a very interesting and profitable Institute could be held by the teachers of the three counties, and heartily endorse the Sentinel's suggestion. Supt. J. W. Moore, we hope will approve of it and do his part in arranging the Tri-County Institute.

FROM CLANTON TO CANADA.

III.

MONTREAL.

The largest city of Canada, having a population approaching 400,- 000; one of the oldest cities on the American continent, full of life and bustle to-day, with an old world aspect about it, forming a marked contrast with most of the cities of the New World. Half French and half English, narrow streets, many of them not over-well paved, reminding one of the streets in French towns, and we only need to rumble in on a diligence to imagine ourselves in la belle France. Often the names of firms and the signs in the store windows are all French, the only difference being in the prices marked here in Dollars and Cents instead of Francs and Centimes. It is Saturday night and the streets are crowded, and on all sides we overhear as much or more conversation in the French language than in English. It is quaint and piquant and pleasing withal, and gives a zest to our wanderings through the streets.

Montreal is a city with a history.
It was first visited by Jacques Cartier, a Frenchman, in 1535, but it was not until 1642 that it was colonized by the French and a fort built. For many years it was harassed by the Indians and the English, and in 1762 it capitulated to the English and has been in their possession ever since.

Sunday was a wet day—the only rainy day during the entire trip, and was mostly spent in visiting the different places of worship, of which Montreal boasts a large number. Notre Dame, Roman Catholic, one of the largest churches in America, with a seating capacity for over 10,000 people, is a splendid edifice. St. James' Cathedral, Roman Catholic, is modeled, on a smaller scale, after St. Peter's at Rome, and is another magnificent building. Christ Church, Episcopal, is a fine specimen of Gothic architecture.

Next morning, boarding the
"Seeing Montreal Cars" at the St.
Lawrence Hall, we started for a tour of the city, while a gentleman with a stentorian voice and a megaphone gave a description of the various places of interest passed on the way. After traversing the city the cars went speeding around Mount Royal, affording many fine views as we ascended higher ground. Round the mountain and we came to the foot of the inclined railway and stepping aboard the cars are soon landed on top, and a short walk brings us to the pavilion on the crest of the Mount from which a magnificent view of the city, river and harbor is obtained, while in the distance the Green mountains of Vermont and the Adirondacks of New York are to be seen.

At the pavilion lunch was served and several speeches were made, one French speaker provoking much merriment by making a speech in broken English. The city of Montreal graciously presented the Alabama visitors with an elegant souvenir button, bearing the arms of the city, and an elegantly bound book descriptive of Montreal.

Descending by the inclined railway we again board our street cars and are carried back through the city down to the harbor, and a tour of the harbor and river is made on a steamboat. Away out in the centre of the river one realizes what a magnificent stream the St.
Lawrence is, while stretched along its northern bank the city shows up to the best advantage.

After a delightful afternoon on the water we return to the city and after supper the evening is spent at Sohmer Park, a popular place of entertainment, until 10:30 when the cars are taken for the depot and we leave Montreal at midnight for Quebec. We have had a royal time at this most hospitable city of Canada and leave with a strong feeling of gratitude for the innumerable kindnesses we have received at the hands of its generous, open-hearted citizens. From the moment of our arrival at the St.
Lawrence Hall (by the way this is an admirable hotel where your every want is anticipated and everything done to make you feel at home) to the instant of our departure, every attention has been paid us, and we have been compelled to realize that we were not among strangers but with kin-folks and friends. May Montreal continue to flourish and prosper.

In the early gray of the morning we arrive at Port Lewis on the southern bank of the river, and leaving the cars board the ferry boat to cross to Quebec. It is bleak and cold and the wind blows keen, while in front of us the citi-del looks frowningly down on this invasion. A short run and we dis-embark in the city of Quebec, and climbing up the steep streets are soon at our hotel, the Chateau Frontenac, where we at once dispatch a hearty breakfast, preparatory to a day's sight-seeing.

QUEBEC.

This is probably the most unique city on the American continent.
Picturesque to a degree and full of interest at every turn, it is sometimes called the Gibraltar of America. Perched on top of a rocky eminence some 300 feet above the river is the citadel, while at a somewhat lower elevation the old walls and fortifications embrace what is known as the Upper Town; outside the walls and at the foot of the hill is the Lower Town. In the Upper Town is to be found the more modern and aristocratic part of the city, the streets are wider and the stores more up-to-date. Around the walls innumerable guns point in every direction, although they are not very dangerous these days, but are kept for ornament and as relics of by-gone days when Quebec was a war-worn city. There are three gates to the city—the Kent Gate, St. Louis and St. John's, very handsome and massive. Winding down the steep street we reach the Lower Town, with its old-fashioned narrow streets, and here is located the principal wholesale houses, banks and offices. But there is an absence of life and bustle in the streets, and everyone seems to be taking life easy.

The population of Quebec is about 75,000, and of this number 67,000 are French and only 8,000
English. French predominates everywhere, and if you ask a question, it's ten to one you will be answered in French.

"Never go to France unless you know the lingo.
For if you do, like me, you will repent,
by jingo.

Their pipas they call "peres," their daughters they call "filles." Their mamas they call "mères," O, they are such stupid sillies."

Down in the Lower Town was seen small carts drawn by a pair of dogs, something I have never seen anywhere else except in Antwerp, Belgium, where all the market produce is hauled in from the country in this manner. The shipping offices and all marine matters are conducted in the Lower Town, and except that it differs from all American towns there is not much of interest in this part of Quebec.

In the afternoon, starting from the Chateau Frontenac we leave on a special train of trolley cars for the depot in the Lower Town, then transfer to another train bound for St. Anne de Beaupre, a twenty miles ride past the celebrated Falls of Montmorency. Arrived at St.
Anne's we proceed to the church,
(Roman Catholic) where a Priest gives us interesting information concerning this celebrated shrine for pilgrims. The church is dedicated to St. Anne, the mother of the Virgin Mary, and was founded by some shipwrecked sailors, who vowed that wherever they should be cast ashore to erect a church in honor of St. Anne. This was done, and shortly afterward it was discovered that those afflicted with any disease who went to pray at this church were cured of their affections. The fame of the holy spot spread far and wide, and last year there were 260,000 pilgrims visited the shrine from all parts of the world, many being cured of their ailments. The church contains a beautiful shrine to the Virgin Mary, which is made wonderfully effective by electricity, the electric light plant having been donated to the church at a cost of $10,000, by a Boston lady who went there and was cured of her complaint.

Close by the church is a chapel where the pilgrims go to pray on a sacred staircase of about twenty steps. The penitent kneels on the first step, mutters a prayer, stoops and kisses the step, then mounts a step higher on his knees, repeats the prayer and kiss and so on to the top. None but penitents are allowed on the staircase. As you emerge from the church, on each side of the door is a huge pile of crutches, etc., which have been cast away by the crippled pilgrims who have been cured and made whole through their repentance

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, August 24, 1903

I have just returned from a week's visit to the State of New Jersey. I visited many points in the state and talked with a number of the leading democrats. I talked with men who were true to the ticket in the years of 1896 and 1900 and with democrats of the old Cleveland regime.
In this way I came very near getting a correct consensus of opinion and a clear estimate of political conditions in that State. I found out some things not generally known to the public, and some things that the democrats of the country ought to know. In the first place I ascertained beyond all cavil, beyond the peradventure of a doubt, that there is a Grover Cleveland propaganda actively at work all over the East.
I learned it from the lips of a man high up in the councils of that propaganda, a man who declares that Cleveland is the only man who can carry the East, that he is a candidate and that this game is being played for the purpose of again placing the name of Cleveland at the head of the democratic ticket. This man, my informant, formerly was in the United States Senate. He does not prefer Cleveland personally.
He does not like him. He prefers another man. But he says that Cleveland is the only man who can carry the states of the East that we must have in order to win. He says that Cleveland has built up a certain class of voters in the East, an independent class, the "commuter" class who live in the small towns of Jersey and all of whom have money and are the pharisees, the better-than-thou of politics, and who will not vote for any man who is identified with any political organization, and that these are the men who are clamoring for the renomination of Mr. Cleveland, and that will see the entire East on fire for Mr. Cleveland before the next convention meets. All this may be so and it may not. I found very little of this sentiment among some of the other so-called "reorganizers" to whom I talked during my trip in the State of Jersey. These men were divided among several whom names have been mentioned as the most available man for the democratic leader in the campaign of 1904, all of them acceptable to the element which left the party in those years when the party needed them so badly, but hardly a man acceptable to the men who remained staunch and true to the party, the great bulk of the democratic voters in those states. I did find, however, when I visited the city of New York, that the statement made to me by the distinguished gentleman concerning the Cleveland propaganda and its activity was absolutely correct. I found that William C. Whitney was one of the men actively engaged in fostering the thing, that the Civic Federation, with Mark Hanna at its head and Ralph Easley as Secretary, was another of the forces that was pushing this "good thing" along. They are now at work employing men to boom and boost the Cleveland game. One of those men is my personal friend and I saw and talked to him, and he admitted the whole thing. Now then, whether this is "on the level" and that they are really in earnest concerning Cleveland and so blinded by the glamour of money that they cannot see the utter futility of again trying to place his name on a democratic ticket, or whether, as I suggested some time ago, this is simply an attempt to conjure with the name of Cleveland until the rank and file of the party, the true democrats of the country, in disgust and desperation cry out to the gilded leaders of the East, "Give us anybody but Cleveland," and they present to them the real choice of this element, cannot definitely be decided at this time. My own opinion, from all I have seen, inclines strongly to belief in the latter proposition, for I cannot understand how sane democrats or men calling themselves democrats can believe that the name of Grover Cleveland can again swaw a democratic national convention.

Save the Children.

Ninety-nine out of every one hundred diseases that children have are
due to disorders of the stomach, and
these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure
is just as good for children as it is
for adults. Children thrive on it.
It keeps their little stomachs sweet
and encourages their growth and development. Mrs. Henry Carter, 705 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three
years old and has been suffering from
indigestion ever since he was born.
I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good.
After using one bottle of Kodol he
is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what
you eat and makes the stomach
sweet. Sold by Hopkins Drug Co.

Arabic scholars are devoting attention to the Haussa language and literature. This language is spoken by 15,000,000 Africans in the vast regions between the Niger and Lake Chad.

With the exception of Egypt and Abyssinia, no other African nation save the Haussa has reduced its tongue to writing and created a literature.

Adopting a modified form of the Arabic alphabet, the Haussas have produced national poems and songs, historical annals and legal documents.

Recently a committee was formed in London to make a scientific study of the Haussa language, and a lecturer in Haussa was appointed at Cambridge University. So far as they have gone, the researches indicate that the language is Semitic in its origin.

When King Edward travels in England, says the London Tatler, beyond the fact that his Majesty usually has the use of a special train, no particular pomp or circumstance attends the journey of the sovereign. The Kaiser's railway journeys in his own country are invested with much more ceremony, and the railroads are always well patrolled by guards.

When the Kaiser makes a railway journey in Russia the whole length of railroad over which he will travel is patrolled for days before the journey by armed guards, who have orders to challenge any stranger in the vicinity, and if he cannot satisfactorily account for his presence to shoot him on the spot.

When King Edward travels in England, says the London Tatler, beyond the fact that his Majesty usually has the use of a special train, no particular pomp or circumstance attends the journey of the sovereign.

The Kaiser's railway journeys in his own country are invested with much more ceremony, and the railroads are always well patrolled by guards.

When the Kaiser makes a railway journey in Russia the whole length of railroad over which he will travel is patrolled for days before the journey by armed guards, who have orders to challenge any stranger in the vicinity, and if he cannot satisfactorily account for his presence to shoot him on the spot.

CATARH DESTROYS THE KIDNEYS

Was Miserable—Could Not Stand Up or Walk—Pe-ru-na Cured.

Many Persons Have Catarrh and Don't Know It.

Mr. James M. Powell, 625 Troost street, Kansas City, Mo., Vice Grand of I. O. O. F., of Cherryville, Kan., writes:

"About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and in eleven weeks I was completely cured and felt like a new man."—James M. Powell.

Hundreds of Dollars Spent in Vain.

Mr. Cyrus Hershman, Sheridan, Ind., writes: "Two years ago I was a sick man. Catarrh had settled in the pelvic organs, making life a burden and giving me little hope of recovery. I spent hundreds of dollars in medicine which did me no good. I was persuaded by a friend to try Peruna. I took it two weeks without much improvement, but I kept on with it and soon began to get well and strong very fast. Within two months I was cured, and have been well ever since. I am a strong advocate of Peruna."—C. Hershman.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys, liver and other pelvic organs, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. No other systemic catarrh remedy has as yet been devised. Insist upon having Peruna. There are no medicines that can be substituted.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

These are not peculiar instances. It is simply the longing of a normal mind. It is not cowardice to dread death on the gallows.

Men who have reputations for marked bravery in personal encounters will become absolutely terror-stricken at the thought of such an end. Those who flaunt their indifference to it will change when the shadow gets closer. God evidently intended that execution at the law's hands should be a terror, and such I believe it will ever be. California Native Elephants.

An investigation under the auspices of the University of California, is now going on to determine the antiquity of man in that State. Among the places that have been explored is a remarkable cave in Shasta County, in which were found the remains of a great many birds. No relics of man were discovered in the cave. The region in which the cave is situated is now mountainous which is not consistent with the life of mastodons, elephants and tapers, and it is thought that the land conformation has undergone a change since the period when these animals lived there.

If the wheat growers cannot get more men they will have to look to machinery for relief. It has been their mainstay for many years, but they will have to make a more extensive use of it. IMPORTANCE OF THE HUMAN TEETH

To human beings the teeth are of the greatest importance, not only in the mastication of food, in the modulation of the voice and in giving a clear and distinct enunciation of language, but also in imparting symmetry and beauty to the face, thus happily uniting the utile dulci, their beauty being not less prominent than their usefulness.

The teeth are the finest ornaments of the human countenance. The regularity and whiteness constitutes its chief attraction. If the mouth exceeds its ordinary size, fine teeth serve to disguise this defect of conformation, and the illusion that results from the perfection of their arrangement is often such that we imagine that it would not have appeared so well even had it been smaller.

Observe the lady smile whose mouth discloses the perfection of their arrangement. You never think of noticing the extent of the diameter of the mouth. All your attention is fixed upon the beauty of her teeth and the gracious smiles that so generally expose them.

These ornaments are equally attractive in both sexes. They distinguish the elegant from the slovenly gentleman, and by softening the features diffuse amicability over the whole countenance.

Fine teeth are more especially necessary to woman, for it is her destiny first to gratify our eyes before she touches our souls and captivates our hearts. The influence that the teeth exercise in the production of beauty justifies the pre-eminence that have assigned them over all the other attractions of the face. Let a woman have fine eyes, a pretty mouth, a hand some nose, a well turned forehead, elegant hair, and a charming complexion, but only let her teeth be bad, blackened by caries, or covered with thick tartar, or viscid concretions; let her, in a word, exhale a contaminated breath, and the moment she opens her mouth she will cease to be thought beautiful. If she, on the contrary, has small eyes, or a large nose, and is positively ugly, yet if her teeth are regularly planted, white, and above all, entire (or at least the one of them that are visible) she, however frightful she may be, will appear agreeable the moment a smile comes to her aid, and will hear those words whispered around her that are so consoling to her vanity, "Ah what beautiful teeth she possesses." But notwithstanding the great utility of the teeth, and their striking and impressive beauty when properly attended to, we meet with those who, unmindful of the physiological and intellectual advantages, which an all-wise Creator has vouchsafed to them, suffer these valuable organs to become thickly coated with tartar (one of the most fruitful sources of which is the use of tobacco, snuff, etc.) which it suffered to remain, is productive of ruinous consequences to the gums, teeth, alveolar processes and to the general health, causing the gums to inflame, swell, suppurate and recede from the teeth, the alveoli to waste, the teeth to loosen, and not infrequently to fall out. The secretions of the mouth also become vitiated and rendered unfit to be taken into the stomach, producing indigestion and general derangement of all the assimilative functions. Nor is there any chance to restore to the system its healthy functions so long as tartar (salivary calculus) is allowed to remain, though partial and temporary relief may be afforded. Hence the necessity under such circumstances of applying immediately to a skillful D. D. S. But in most cases by a little timely attention to the teeth all this catalogue of evils might easily be avoided. If these organs were thoroughly cleaned twice a day (before breakfast and after supper) tartarous concretions could not possibly form on them.

Consequently the evils which have been enumerated would at once be prevented. This may be done quite conveniently by using a fine soft tooth brush, (the brushes that are generally used are entirely too rough) some tepid water and a little fine soap, or some good tooth paste. If the teeth are naturally defective in form and tarnished in color great care should be taken in order to make amends for these imperfections. Most persons regard it as being very important to keep the face clean, therefore they wash it thoroughly once, twice or even thrice a day; but many of them seem to forget, or really not to know, that it is equally, and in fact a great deal more important to keep the mouth clean.

It is said that some of the natives of Hindoostan, having a high regard for the purity and beauty of the mouth, rub their teeth every morning for upwards of an hour with a twig of a racemiferous fig tree, during which time they address their prayers to the sun, and invoke the blessings of heaven on themselves and their families. This practice it seems is inculcated as a religious duty. Regular, well formed and white teeth were, by the ancients, considered as characteristic of beauty, as may be seen from the following extracts:

Jacob, in blessing Judah, says, "His teeth shall be white like milk." Solomon, in describing the church of God, compares it to a beautiful woman, and after letting forth her graces in such language as immediately brings to the mind's eye, her, whom Milton has described as being the fairest of her daughters, uses the following simile: "Her teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which come up from the washing whereof everyone bears twins."

In the Bible are many interesting passages in reference to the teeth, showing very clearly that much importance was attached to them in the earlier ages of the world, but to quote any more were unnecessary.

If this chapter on the teeth shall cause any of those who may read it to appreciate more highly their dental organs, and to take more pains to preserve them untarnished, it will have accomplished some good. But above all, if it shall cause any of its readers not to contaminate their mouths with tobacco or snuff, that alone will be ample remuneration for all the labor it has cost. I would add by way of conclusion that I, entertaining the highest regard for the fair readers of the Banner, am happy to know that those of them with whom I have the pleasure of being personally acquainted, pay considerable attention to "the graces." My sincere wish is, that they may be perfect paragons of everything that is lovely in woman.

Yours truly,
A. B. HORN, D.D.S.

A Remarkable Record

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturer in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. B. Horn, Thorshy.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ADVERTISERS

Continuous advertising carries with it the idea of reliability, and no dishonest advertiser can successfully continue in business.

The most successful advertisements of to-day are those who have learned the value of specializing.

After all, satisfied customers are the best advertisement.

Good advertising in a good medium is the greatest reputation builder a merchant can employ.

Make every ad a definite bid for business. You will get only what you ask for, so ask often.

Some men expect too much from an advertisement. No one would expect a traveling salesman to make large sales on his first round in an unexplored field. But there are many who refuse to advertise a second time in a medium which failed to bring in trade on a single trial.

To risk an advertisement in a newspaper which withholds its circulation is like running one's hand in a grab-bag at a church fair.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness

Ma D. P. Eagerly, well-known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhea, attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy, which saved him in less than twenty-four hours. of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

As soon as cotton begins to roll in, the trade starts with a rush. Merchants have laid in larger and more varied stocks than ever before, and it is well known that prices are as low as in Montgomery or Birmingham, and only throwing away car fare to bring in trade on a single trial.

MASTROUS FIRE AT CLANTON

A few minutes before midnight

Saturday the residence of Mr.

Roper at Clanton was discovered to be on fire, and the fire made such headway that it was some difficulty, Mr. Roper's other Tom, and his son Roy, and Calwell, were awakened

and rescued from the burning building, not having sufficient time stroyed.

Mr. Roper was not at home, posed that a spark from this fire ignited the disaster. He had been out in the country to join his

the amount does not cover his loss.

Clanton, Sept. 14, 1903

Editor Banner—I wish to express myself once more on politics in Clanton. Some people seem to take it as a matter of course that I will be a candidate for re-election to the office of Judge of Probate, and I will say to these people that it is by no means certain that I will be a candidate, I have not yet determined what I will do. I know that the people are considerably confused and divided, and I regret as much as any living man can to see this state of things. I also regret that some good citizens who voted for me when I made the race in 1898 seem to feel as they do towards me, and do not see and understand that the political situation now is not at all as it was then; none of the issues exist now that existed then. The party that nominated me is no longer a party, and all the leading men of the State and the Nation admit that the Populist party is a thing of the past.

But in spite of the many hard things that have been said of me

by some of those men, there remains a feeling of gratitude in my heart to the men who voted for me in 1898, and I am only sorry that they (some of them) do not understand me. I have always believed in the rule of the people, and this has been Democratic doctrine since the days of Jefferson and Jackson, and I love these principles as dearly

as I do my liberty, and whether

some of these men know it or not,

I feel just the same interest in the people's cause to-day that I did the day they elected me to office. I am no less a Democrat now than I was then, indeed Democracy has always stood for a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and I rejoice in the fact that I am once more in line with Democracy where it is possible for me to be heard, and thereby enabled to do more for the people than it would be possible to do in any other party. Indeed there is no other party in Alabama that has a shadow of show to accomplish any good for the people. To line up with any other political party in this State simply means a continued political quarrel without hope of accomplishing any good except it might be the election of a few men to a few county offices, and these are very few. Why not then, in view of the inevitable, let the Populists in Clanton do as they have done in most all of the counties of the State, and in all the Southern States, join the Democratic party for the simple reason, first that 95 per cent of the Populists in the South are Democrats, and second,

for the reason that there is nothing else to join. Sincerely,

S. M. ADAMS.

HAPPILY UNITED.

WARE-APPERSON.

Miss Mattie Apperson and Mr.
Benjamin Ware of Dantzler were married Tuesday afternoon, Sept.
8, 1903, at two o'clock at the home of the bride's mother near Billingsley, Rev. J. W. Mitchell officiating. The marriage was to have taken place later in this month, but on account of a change in the business plans of the groom it was decided that the marriage would take place Tuesday. Therefore it was a very quiet affair, only the relatives and a few intimate friends being present.

The parlor was beautifully adorned for the occasion in trailing vines, climatis, banks of ferns, do-ted throughout with immense clusters of golden-rod, bringing out the exquisite scheme of gold and green.
The bride was gracefully gowned
in a brown traveling suit.
Shortly after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ware were driven to the station, and left for Montgomery.
This marriage unites two popular persons. The bride is a very charming young woman, and is greatly admired and loved by her many friends. The groom is a young man of fine intellectual attainments, and a Christian gentleman, and has won a high place in the esteem of all who know him.

The promise of a bright future lies before them, and many good wishes for their happiness and prosperity follow them. As the train was leaving the station they were followed by showers of rice and the proverbial OLD SHOE.

Allow me to return to you my sincere thanks for your kindness

mise, which I will ever have a kind

STOLEN ALCOHOL

Explodes and Sets Fire to the Olympia
—Two Killed.

The explosion of a barrel of alcohol on the superstructure deck of the cruiser Olympia, in dry dock at the Norfolk navy yard, killed two men, seriously injured several others and set fire to the ship. The master at arms of the vessel is missing.

The explosion, according to eye witnesses was the direct result of the theft of a barrel of grain alcohol, containing fifty-six gallons, by a party of sailors. The incident created much excitement, and in the confusion the guilty men escaped. While this was going on, sailors went to the barrel with the intention, it is reported, of getting a drink, and one of them struck a match. The explosion was instantaneous and both men were enveloped in flames. They perished before a hand could be raised to save them. The damage was confined to the deck of the vessel and embraced only the canvas awnings and their fixtures. The decks, however, were slightly injured.

A later report from Portsmouth states that a boat was sighted pulling away from the Olympia's vicinity immediately before the explosion, and the suspicion is held that the master-at-arms was foully dealt with. It is said positively he was not on the ship at the time of the explosion, but was near the end of a dock, searching for the alcohol thieves. Four are in the hospital.

Edwin A. Abbey is hard at work on his big painting of the coronation of Edward the Seventh, for which the king and queen have given him sittings, with others to be held in the future. A number of the titled folk in the pageant have been going to Abbey's London studio in order to be portrayed in the exact costume they wore on the occasion. The order for this large canvas was not given by the government, as at first announced, but by a firm of art dealers, the Messrs. Agnew. When finished it will be forwarded to the United States for exhibition, and will be shown in many of the large cities. The general impression is that the Agnews intend to "star" the picture, relying on the curiosity of all good republicans to see what royalty does.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS

FIFTH DAY.

Wednesday, September 9.

The sessions were not of extraordinary interest, the principal bill passed being one to exempt newly constructed cotton mills from taxation for ten years.

The house committee on local legislation reported favorably the senate stock law bill with a slight amendment and its consideration is made a special order for next Tuesday.

SENATE—Met at 10:30 o'clock. Lieutenant Governor Cunningham presiding. Twenty-seven senators answered the roll call.

Senator Spraggings asked the attention of the senate to the bill passed at Tuesday's session giving the Knights of Pythias of Alabama the authority to loan the surplus moneys in their treasury. There seems to be an opinion that the bill is unconstitutional and its reconsideration was made a special order for Monday.

The first bill called in the senate, the measure of Senator Rogers to extend the terms of office of the tax assessors, tax collectors, county superintendents of education and county treasurers, was the subject of a lively debate. Reconsidered.

A bill was introduced by Senator Hipp of Cullman, calculated to prohibit the system of merchants' trading stamps or checks. The bill was referred to the judiciary committee. It places a license of $1000 on those using the system.

New bills are:
By Mr. Blackmon—To authorize the governor of Alabama to remove constables from office for neglect of duty, and to provide for the punishment of such constable acting after notice of his removal.

By Mr. Blackmon—To authorize the treasurer of the state of Alabama to receive certain deposits from mutual aid associations organized under the law of this state. Revision of laws.

By Mr. Nesmith—To rearrange the boundaries of the city of Ensley, Jefferson county, Alabama.

HOUSE—Kept up its record for work and a number of general bills were disposed of. These bills were of more or less importance, but did not include any of the important recess bills.

The Goodwyn vagrancy bill was called up under a suspension of the rules. The bill is a practical defeat of the law recently enacted in Georgia, and describes who is a vagrant.

SIXTH DAY.

Thursday, September 10.

SENATE—Was called to order by Lieutenant Governor Cunningham. Twenty-eight members answered to roll call.

The special business for the morning session was the consideration of the school tax election bill, which occupied the attention of the senate throughout the afternoon session of the previous day. It passed almost unanimously without debate.

The Harrison vagrancy bill was called as a special order for the hour. Two amendments were submitted, one by Senator Thomas, providing that a defendant proving that he had made a bona fide effort to obtain work for a reasonable salary, and the other by Senator Hipp, excepting persons out of work on account of strike or lock-out. Both amendments passed. The entire vagrancy bill was passed.

The senate concluded consideration of the municipal corporations bill and passed it at 6 o'clock. The senate recess committee bill was considered, and as it is a very voluminous measure, to finish it in a day is regarded as extraordinary. The main features of the measure were not materially changed.

HOUSE—Eighty-three present, and few bills introduced on roll call.

Mr. Goldsmith of Lowndes, made an ineffectual attempt to get his bill to repeal the tax on mortgages before the house.

The bill to provide state control of the Falkner soldiers' home at Mountain Creek was taken up and passed by an almost unanimous vote. An amendment by Mr. McCluskey that no inmate of the home should share in other pension funds was adopted. The bill appropriates $25,000 for more buildings, and grants an annual fund of $125 each for the support of the inmates of the home.

The bill to prohibit stock of any kind from running at large in cities having more than five thousand inhabitants was passed by a vote of 62 to 8.

The bill providing that the tax collector and tax assessor shall keep branch offices at Bessemer was favorably reported and placed upon the calendar.

New bills are:

By Mr. Arnold—To authorize the treasurer of the state of Alabama to receive certain deposits from mutual aid associations organized under the laws of this state. Ways and means.

By Mr. Norwood—To prevent the bringing or causing to be brought into this state, knowingly or wilfully, any of the insects known as the Texas boll weevil, or any of its eggs or larvae, or any similar worm, egg or larvae.

Agricultural.

SEVENTH DAY.

Friday, September 11th.

SENATE—Had a day of eloquence over the Confederate pension bill. The fight to non-concur in the governor's amendment and pass the bill, the governor's veto notwithstanding, is one of the prettiest that has been made in the senate and has developed that there are some speakers in the upper house who can "warm up" to a flow of oratory. The time for finishing the speeches was extended another day.

HOUSE—Passed the Walker municipal corporations bill with amendments. As the house rejected a senate bill for the Walker bill and the senate has passed the special senate bill a clash between the houses is inevitable. A joint committee may unravel the snarl.

Another bill that may occasion friction between the two houses is the Blankhead election bill. The senate committee has amended the bill so as to eliminate the provision for a numbered ballot and this is sure to cause a fight.

The house put to rest the dispensary agitation. The Verner bill got before the house for discussion in the indirect way of a motion by its author to take the bill from the adverse calendar, but after debate the house smothered the motion by the decisive vote of 61 to 22. The house held its first night session and passed the time in the rapid disposal of local measures.

Greater Birmingham is to be a reality. It may not come at once, but the legislature is to provide a method whereby it can be secured before the next census. The scheme is to permit each of the suburban towns and the territory surrounding Birmingham to vote on the question of coming into Greater Birmingham.

EIGHTH DAY.

Saturday, September 12th.

SENATE—A flood of requests to call up local bills was the first feature of the session, and two of this nature, allowing Howard and Owenton colleges to incorporate, were passed.

Senator Stone of Cherokee called up a general bill providing that all agricultural schools be under the general supervision of a board of control, to be composed of the attorney general, the superintendent of education and the commissioner of agriculture. The bill further provides that agriculture be taught in the school under the inspection of the professor of agriculture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Further consideration of the bill, however, was laid over until Wednesday noon, for which it was made a special order.

Senator Johnson called up the motion to non-concur with the house in its concurrence with the governor in his amendment to the veteran relief bill. He moved to indefinitely postpone action of the motion to non-concur. The substitutional point was raised that an indefinite postponement could not be had on a motion to non-concur. The point was sustained. The difficulty thereby raised of compelling the senate to act on an unconstitutional bill was avoided by the adoption of a motion by Senator Johnston to withdraw his motion to non-concur and to set the matter down as a special order for Monday, September 23. The original bill is therefore dead. Action will be taken, however, on a new bill introduced by Senator Blackmon which provides for a $50,000 appropriation.

The general election bill was taken up as a special order. On motion of Senator Smith the measure was taken up section by section. The bill came up in the form of a substitute framed by the recess committee to the Blankhead bill. The first section on which objection was made was the provision that the registrars be appointed. Senator Hogue moved to amend by making the registrars elective officers. The amendment was tabled. A number of sections were passed. The election bill was set down as a special order for Thursday after roll call.

A new bill was introduced by Mr. James—To cause all railroad companies in this state to fence their respective roads to prevent stock from trespassing upon said right of ways. Commerce and common carriers.

Senator Powell of Butler comes to the front with an entirely new idea for the increase of the pension fund, and his scheme will test the real patriotism of some who so earnestly fought for state aid. Senator Powell's proposition provides that the several counties shall appropriate certain amounts for the pension fund.

The bill to appropriate $15,000 for an exhibit at the St. Louis world's fair is to be a special order for Wednesday.

HOUSE—Dr. Johnson, the venerable member from Russell, opened the morning session with prayer. Seventy-seven members present. A resolution requiring the house committee clerks to assist the clerk of the house in the work in his office was adopted.

Mr. Walden's resolution calling for a report by the convict department as to amount of money collected from hire of convicts in the mines was also adopted.

The house declined to suspend the rules for immediate consideration of a joint resolution for a recess on Monday to permit the clerks to catch up with their work. Mr. Walker said that unless the recess was taken the force in the clerk's office would have to work on Sunday.

Mr. DuBose's bill, which seeks to have old burial grounds in country districts marked by erection of boundary lines to be established by a commission named by the probate judges, was called up. The bill places the cost upon the interested parties. Passed.

Mr. Hoffman's bill to authorize and empower the county commissioners or other courts of like jurisdiction in the several counties of the state to contract for and have made map or plat books showing all subdivisions of lands in their respective counties, was passed.

Mr. Hoffman's bill getting after the little money lenders who in many cases charge exorbitant rates of interest, was finally withdrawn and recommitment to the judiciary committee.

NINTH DAY.

Monday, September 14th.

SENATE—Although the senate adjourned to meet at 10:30 o'clock, a quorum was not present until noon.

President Pro Tem Goldsby presided. The special order to reconsider the vote by which the bill authorizing the Knights of Pythias to lend out any surplus moneys in their treasury was called up. A constitutional defect had been discovered in the bill by Senator Spraggins. The vote was reconsidered and the bill withdrawn by its author, Senator Castleberry.

A bill appropriating $50,000 to the Girls' Industrial school at Montevallo for the purpose of erecting and improving buildings, was called up and passed with but one dissenting vote. The bill provides that the appropriation be returned to the treasury out of the Montevallo fund as it becomes due.

The Johnston bill, providing for a $100,000 appropriation for confederate veterans, was reported favorably by the committee on constitution and constitutional revision.

At the afternoon session a number of local bills were passed. The bill providing for the extension of the terms of office of tax assessors and collectors passed with amendments providing for the extension of the terms of county superintendent of education and county treasurer.

Mr. Harrison introduced a bill to provide for the erection of a monument and head and foot stones to Alabama's confederate dead who are buried in Stonewall cemetery at Winchester, Va. Finance and taxation.

HOUSE—Upon the roll call sixty-eight members answered as present. There were several minor bills introduced. Mr. Blackmon called up the bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of stock food. The bill was passed; ayes, 64; noes, 0.

Mr. Hoffman's bill to regulate the lending of money on personal property and to provide a penalty for a violation thereof was called up as unfinished business. This is known as the "loan company bill"; that is, a bill to put more strict regulations upon a certain class of money lenders.

Mr. Goodwyn offered an amendment to strike out that part providing that a record of the loan be recorded in the office of the judge of probate. After debate this was adopted 40 to 15.

The bill providing for the construction and maintenance of good public roads in the several counties of the state came up as a special order. The committee on roads had a substitute for the original bill, but Mr. Glover of Greene, had a substitute for the substitute, which he offered by the way of an amendment. The Glover amendment was brief and provided merely that public roads may be worked by contract, or as in the present manner, and for the levy of a small tax to provide a road fund.

Mr. Goldsmith explained the committee amendment, the main provision of which is to enable commissioners' courts to levy a tax of one-fourth of one per cent to build roads and bridges.

The Glover amendment was lost for want of a quorum voting. Mr. Benner's amendment authorizing the working of county convicts on the roads was adopted. The bill was then passed.

At the afternoon session Representative Wood of Macon, secured the suspension of the rules for the passage of a resolution urging the Alabama members in congress to vote for an amendment to the federal constitution repealing the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. There were only two votes against the Wood resolution.

The house for the third time took up the business of money lenders. An amendment by Mr. Verner to include all banks and other money lenders in the bill was voted down, and Mr. Goodwyn, of Montgomery, made a strong appeal for the measure. He again moved the indefinite postponement of the bill. The motion was carried by a vote of 38 to 33. Mr. Hoffman gave notice of a motion to reconsider on tomorrow.

The bill to prohibit playing base ball, etc., on Sunday was passed.

A new bill introduced by Mr. James—To cause all companies, corporations or individuals engaged in the business of mining iron ore in this state to fence their respective slush ponds so as to prevent stock from getting into same. Mining and manufacturing.

TENTH DAY.

Tuesday, September 15th.

The senate rescinded its action of yesterday and committed the bill extending the terms of tax assessors, collectors and treasurers for five months. The recommission was made for the purpose of amendment. The house refused to pass the general stock law bill drawn by the senate recess committee. During both sessions about four days have been spent in the consideration of the stock law proposition and it will not do down.

The house decided to do away with the money lenders, commonly termed pawn brokers, passing the Hoffman bill which was yesterday defeated.

SENATE—Twenty-four present. The senate again tackled the tax assessor and collector bill, extending the terms of office of these officials.

The vote by which amendments yesterday prefixed to the bill, which extended the terms of the county superintendents of education and county treasurers, were adopted, was reconsidered and recommitment.

The Rogers bill providing for the teaching by text book of agriculture in the schools of the state, not in cities of more than 5000 inhabitants, was passed.

The old soldiers' bill was set down as a special order for tomorrow.

The bill providing that the members of the present railroad commission hold office until their terms of appointment expire was the special order for this afternoon. The measure was brought up in the form of a substitute for the Woolf bill, which provided for the method of filing complaint with the commission.

Senator Rogers moved to amend by providing that the appointed commission go out of office when their successors are elected and qualify in November, 1906. Adopted. The bill was finally passed 19 to 6.

HOUSE—Seventy-three present. The usual routine calls occupied brief time, few new bills being introduced. The committees reported about the average work.

Mr. McTyeer, of Barbour, secured the recommission of the bill to appropriate $2500 for the payment of the chaplains of convicts.

Mr. Goodwyn called up and secured the passage of the bill to regulate the volunteer military forces of Alabama. The bill provides that the governor may order examinations of applicants for officers or for promotion. He may also order examination of commissioned officers as to their fitness for office and if found not to be fit, the office may be vacated. The bill also embraces the different offenses for which members of the militia may be tried.

Mr. Thompson secured the passage of a senate bill providing for the compensation of the clerk of the house.

The stock law bill was then taken up as the special order and two amendments offered by the committee were being considered, when the house resolved itself into the committee of the whole to consider the bill section by section.

Mr. Kelly wanted to amend the first section so as to provide that a wire fence between counties voting for stock law and those not stock law, the fence to be paid for jointly by the two counties.

The Pilley amendment was voted down by 28 to 21.

Mr. Schuessler, of Chambers, offered a substitute for the whole bill, which provided that from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful for any domestic animal to run at large in the state. The substitute was ruled out of order in the committee of the whole.

After a further wrangle a motion by Mr. Rich that the committee arise and report the bill was carried and the house adopted the report of the committee.

Mr. Rich then offered a substitute for the entire bill which would in effect make it unlawful for any stock to run at large after January 1st, 1904. Mr. Lusk's motion to table the substitute was carried.

Mr. Benner said he thought the bill had been discussed sufficiently, and he moved the previous question on the passage of the bill. The motion carried by the close vote of 34 to 32.

The house then adopted the substitute by a vote of 36 to 44. The bill was then defeated by a vote of 47 to 24.

During the afternoon session Mr. Rich's bill to appropriate $20,000 for the improvement of the buildings of the medical department of the university of Alabama at Mobile was called up by the author. An amendment by the committee providing for four annual payments of $5,000 each was adopted. The bill passed by a vote of 53 to 11.

Mr. Hoffman moved the regular order, the consideration of his motion to reconsider the vote by which his bill to regulate the business of money lenders was on yesterday indefinitely postponed. A motion to table was lost by a vote of 44 to 18. The motion to reconsider was carried without division, and the bill was passed by a vote of 47 to 13.

Mr. Davis introduced a bill to promote the development of the cement industry in Alabama and to designate an official testing laboratory for cements and other material of construction. Rules.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

MEXICAN COTTON

Pleasant But Quality Poor

A special from El Paso Texas states that the large acreage of cotton planted this year at Santa Rosa, Mexico, has been struck with a blight in the form of a gummy accumulation on the leaves and heavy damage to the crop. The increase in the yield and power of the crop is now certain.

Up to two weeks ago the crop was promising indeed, but now the blight is a fact, and the crop is a failure.

There will be more cotton raised this year than last, but because of the increased acreage, but it is not as good a quality.

The blight is attributed to a very dry season.

The Cane Crop

In the weather a change for the better. No rain at all without rain at all, a week of abnormal rain, which did harm to the cane crop. The cane has been making a steady growth, and the fields are green again and the crop is looking finely.

The Illinois Central is to deliver 1000 new freight cars to the railroads having just begun to increase interest that will be as to care, management and operation, ability and knowledge of the pure-bred cars will be practiced by the time the stock is practically pure-bred—Genova March, in the Bostonian.

Size and Quality in Fruit.

The value of a crop of fruit depends upon its quality than quantity. Matter how large the general fruit may be, or how heavily the market may be glutted, good fruit will always sell readily, and at fair prices. There can be a surplus grown. If sold immediately the crops may be sold, evaporated or canned, for there is a demand. Too much fruit has not been produced during any season. Then the blackberry was made a popular crop it was predicted that, as the fruit corners and abandoned locations had always afforded a supply, the introduction of large quantities of the cultivated kinds would render the crops too low to realize profits, but as the crops were increased the berries were improved, and a demand was created that grew with the supply, the consequence being that, although early crops are shipped to our large cities during the fruit season, the prices have been higher than at any other previous time when the crop grew wild. The same rule applies to other fruit crops. As the supply increases, the fruit-growers endeavor to advance prices by improving the size and quality of the fruit. There are many ways open for improving the crops. Such crops as apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries may be evaporated and stored, while cider, wine and vinegar are also produced, to say nothing of the various methods of canning and preserving the different kinds of fruit. In venturing upon fruit growing, the varieties selected should be those best adapted to the climate in which they are to be grown. Prolificacy, hardiness and quality being the chief considerations, and it must not be overlooked that some varieties require special cultivation, while the character of the soil is an important factor. In marketing fruit something depends upon the mode of shipment, while the manner of harvesting and the proper time for doing largely affects the keeping qualities. Like every other pursuit, it is necessary. Preventing insect pests and pruning at the right time call for good judgment and careful attention.—Philadelphia Record.

Complaint is being made in all of the Tennessee valley that the cotton crop will not prove to be as large as it was estimated earlier in the season. The plants are better than have been in several years, but the bears but little fruit. Fine stalks should have forty or fifty bolls, but with only ten or twelve bolls.

There will be more cotton raised next year than last, by reason of the increased acreage, but it will not be as good a quality.

The blight is attributed to the extremely dry season.

The Cane Crop.

In the weather a change has come for the better. Nearly two weeks without rain at a critical point in the life of the crop and more than a week of abnormally cool weather done harm to the cane crop. The cane is higher temperature and occasional showers have made the yellowing fields green again and the crop is looking finely.

The Illinois Central is receiving 1000 new freight cars, the last deliveries having just begun. It has let a number of contracts for delivery during the current year. It is this fact it will fall short of line as many cars as it needs. Southern Pacific will enter into a rush with 600 new cars for use on its lines alone, but it, too, has a car shortage. The Texas Pacific, N. Orleans and Northwest and Louisville and Nashville have been receiving new cars, and more as rapidly as possible. They all shy, however, on rolling stock.

The charcoal furnace of the Southern Car and Foundry company at Eden, which was closed down when the company was placed in bankruptcy, has not been put in blast again. It is given out that it will not be a more favorable time. The car plant is in full blast now, and the pairing department is at work on repair order of 600 cars from Queen and Crescent system.

Iron ore shipments during the month of August amounted to 2,496,000 tons, not including those of Michigan and Wisconsin, which were about 2,000 tons more. These all make a total for the season of 16,200,000 tons, which is but 500,000 tons short of year to this time, and is 4,000,000 tons ahead of the preceding year to corresponding date.

Complaint is being made in all of the Tennessee valley that the cotton crop will not prove to be as good as it was estimated earlier in the season. AGRICULTURAL

The Farm Stock.

There is the same necessity for having the farm stock consist of profitable animals that there is in the case of the stock of larger animals.

In a general way the same rules apply to making and maintaining such stock of common stock that is free of disease, hardy and vigorous, well adapted to the soil and climate, and yet not very productive and yet not very productive.

The one who has the care of this stock should know the way it is so. Blood should be able to tell the producer and non-producers, he should know the good mothers from those who are too busy to scratch for one.

comes with the light by each end, standing from each side, fastening to the hoops with nails bent over after driving in a little way, and to each other inside by barrel staves or small pieces of boards, until you make one-half. Then make the other half, add the rest of the hoops and air-tight the bottom with clay, which you had better put in before the last few staves are set up. Tighten the hoops and it is ready to fill.

The whole work may be done by the farmer, his boys and girls, and the necessary cost be less than $20, if he buys the lumber, and much less if he cuts and has it sawed. It won't be perfectly round? Well, who cares? It will keep ensilage enough for twelve cows and pay for itself the first year. C. M., in American Cultivator.

Farrowing Pen.

The cut shows a convenient, cheap farrowing pen for brood sows, when a suitable hog-house is not had. It is made five and a half feet square at lower end or where it rests on the ground. All pieces used are five and a half feet long except part of boards nailed across the ends. At top a piece two by four inches by five and a half feet long, beveled at upper side, is placed for nailing boards that are placed up and down. Also a piece two by four inches by five and a half feet long at lower end where pen rests upon the ground.

ground for nailing boards on. Front end is left entirely open except a few boards nailed across the top to give strength. At back side it is boarded up close, the one resting on the ground being five and a half feet long. Place the pens in pasture, and at farrowing time the sows will select one and go in without further trouble. At least that will be the rule. As this pen is light as well as strong, it can be picked up by two men and carried to any place desired. In wet and stormy weather it can be reversed or simply turned around to protect the pigs from getting chilled. By making one out of two and a half foot stuff it will be either turkeys of hens with their brood in, if a few laths are nailed across the front to prevent the mother from getting out.—Lewis Olsen, in The Epitomist.

Producing Pork at Least Cost.

The first step in the production of pork is the selection of the breeding stock, which in every case should be pure-bred or nearly so. Good grade sows bred to pure males will produce good results, as will also a cross of pure breeds, but the latter should not be continued beyond the first cross, as the tendency is to return to the original scrub. As to the breed, select the one you most fancy. Any of the leading breeds are good profitable feeders. The Iowa experiment station held a series of tests and decided that the Berkshires, Poland-Chinas and Duroc-Jerseys were the most profitable feeders.

I breed and feed the Berkshires and find them a good, prolific, hearty, easy-feeding and quick-maturing hog. Select from a good prolific strain. It costs no more to winter a good animal than one that is not, and if the sow has great vitality there is less loss from disease. Breed from mature stock, as pigs from mature parents are much heartier and grow much faster than from young, immature stock. When you have done this, you have solved half the problem of producing cheap pork.

The other half lies in the feed and the ability of the man who does the feeding. It has long been an established fact that corn is as cheap a fattening food as there is, but should be fed for other purposes only to a limited extent, as stock fed to any great extent on corn soon begin to lose vitality, succumbing easily to disease and becoming less prolific. For our breeding stock and young pigs, we must look for a food richer in protein, one calculated to produce bone and muscle and not so much fat. Wheat middlings, when it can be purchased to advantage, is a very desirable food. Clover is one of the most valuable of feeds for swine, either as pasture or fodder during the winter. It is claimed that an acre of clover is equal to an acre of corn, and from personal experience I believe this to be true. On various occasions I have turned sows on clover as soon as it was suitable in the spring, and at time of feeding green corn they would be from eighty to one hundred pounds heavier. As an acre of clover will pasture about eight good sows, the value of clover is easily computed.

After several years' experience in feeding the various swine feeds and studying how to make the margin of profit larger, I have adopted the method of keeping a good cow for each brood sow, selling the butter. If I have no other desirable food I buy middlings to mix with the milk taken sweet from the separator, then with the spring pigs having the run of a good clover pasture, with plenty of pure water and shade to protect from the heat of the sun, and fed regularly with the middlings and milk and a small allowance of corn, you have a ration which will not only produce cheap pork, but will produce it quickly, which is one of the main points of the business. As the pigs grow older, increase the corn so that by the last of September they are ready for market. Ten pigs fed on this ration averaged, at six months old, 260 pounds each.—O. Cole, in American Agriculturist.

"JOSHED" THE BRITISHER

EXPERIENCE OF A TOURIST AT WHITE HERON LAKE.

The Buffalo Army at Their Feeding Ground and the Steam Out on the War Path, So All Hands Went Snipe Hunting.

"American law courts are yet in an exceedingly crude and embryonic condition. Judges and juries are not only accepted in the most unblushing manner, but are openly solicited, and verdicts are as salable commodities in an American court as are camphor or quinine at a chemist's in London."

"The British people can have no appreciation of the scandalous manner in which justice (?) is dispensed in America. We have actually seen an American jury send down to the defendant a lawsuit and demand bribe; and a judge who was trying a case in our presence offered to quash an indictment for $2, or 8 sailings of our money."

"Important of American game laws, we shot at some snipe out of season. The jury demanded that we buy it beer, and the judge entered a nonsuit when we gave him the pound which he had asked us for in the presence of the attorney for the crown, or state's attorney, as he is called in the United States. The next day this same judge went hunting with us, and not only showed us where snipe were to be found, but shot four or five of these birds himself."

"The law courts of a nation are its foundations, and when they are so rotten as they are in America, it is certain that the structure which they support is bound to fall."

The foregoing are extracts from notes made in this country by an English tourist, who may soon print a book on "Impressions of an Englishman Among His American Cousins."

The English tourist had his experience of American courts up at White Heron lake. He went there a month ago to kill a few buffaloes and see some wild Sioux Indians who had just returned from the war trail with plenty of scalps.

The Englishman was much disappointed on arriving at White Heron lake, to be told that the buffaloes had all gone away to their summer feeding ground in Indiana, and that the Sioux were fighting the Apaches over in Michigan, so he decided to put in a few days hunting snipe.

He started out shooting one morning and was followed by two of the natives of the locality who had carefully provided themselves with tin stars as big as canners and army rifles. They waited until the Englishman had shot a couple of birds and then pounced down upon him and arrested him for shooting game out of season. They took him back to White Heron lake, where a crowd of merely villagers were waiting in the rear room of a saloon.

The proprietor of the hotel was seated behind a table and was pointed out to the Englishman as the judge. The bartender was introduced as the state's attorney, and the lively stable man, who was represented to the Englishman as a lawyer, was engaged by him as his counsel. A "jury" of villagers was hastily impaneled and the trial began.

The bogus game warden was first put on the stand and swore that the Englishman had wantonly violated the game ordinances of the state. Then the Englishman was called. He solemnly took oath on a copy of a "Guide to Bartenders and Favorite Receipts for Favorite Drinks," and then began his testimony.

"Aw," he said, "please your lordship and gentlemen, I really meant no harm. Quite ignorant of your laws, you know—quite sorry it all occurred."

"Is it true," asked the state's attorney, with great solemnity, "that your ancestors fought the American patriots in the war of the Revolution?"

"It is possible, me lud," said the Englishman, hesitatingly, "but really I can't see, you know, what that has to do with this case."

At this juncture one of the "jury-men" came over to the Englishman and whispered to him that the best thing he could do would be to order a case of beer for the jury. The Englishman hastily did so and the beer was brought in and opened and passed around to the members of the jury, who drank the Englishman's health.

Then the defendant resumed his testimony and told how his ancestors had been with William the Conqueror and gave an exhaustive dissertation in response to questions by the state's attorney as to his views of the Boer war, the Irish question, the situation in the Balkans, lynch law in America, and other subjects, having no bearing on the case "at trial." Meantime the jury drank up its beer and the defendant's counsel suggested that the Englishman buy them another case, which he did.

"Say, young fellow, that's all right buying beer for the jury, but you've got to see me. Understand?"

"Aw, quite right," replied the prisoner, "but I am looking right at you, don'tcherknow?"

"That ain't it," growled the "judge." "You'd better tumble and save yourself trouble."

"Tumble? Tumble?" The prisoner's face wore a puzzled look. "Why should I tumble, me lud? I am not a circus performer."

"Well, then, just dig up a couple of dollars or I'll send you to the pen, see?"

"O, I understand, my lud. Quite so."

The Englishman produced a couple of silver dollars from his pocket and handed them over to the "judge." The Englishman just took them, rang them on the bench, hit them with his tooth, and then inspected them carefully. Then with a satisfied look he put them in his pocket and, banging with a beer glass on the table, roared: "Case dismissed. The prisoner can get out of here."

The Englishman stood not on the order of his going. He went and the judge took the jury and spectators to the saloon and stood treat with the $2. The next day he took the Englishman out shooting.

The next day the Englishman came back to Chicago and prepared some of his manuscript, which he said he might publish some day. He submitted it to an American friend for examination and the friend kindly copied the extract herewith given.—Chicago Tribune.

TANNED BY THE X-RAY.

A New Leather Process Which May Give Us Cheaper Shoes.

The discovery of a process of tanning by means of which hides can be transformed into leather in a short time by the use of the X-ray is said to be the result of four months' experimenting in Cincinnati, and will be the first application of the X-ray to an industrial use.

According to this new process, says the Baltimore Sun, the hides will be soaked in lime for the separation of the fibres and removal of the hair, as is done now. When this has been completed, which usually requires about four days, the hides will be soaked in a solution of certain chemicals, a part of the invention, for about two hours, and will then be exposed to the X-rays for about 15 or 20 minutes, which will thoroughly tan them. The finishing will then proceed in the way employed at present.

The value of the invention consists in the exposition of the soaked hides to the rays. The present process of soaking the leather in vats requires about four months, so that the chemicals may penetrate every fibre of the skin. Under the new system the chemicals absorbed by the hides during the two hours' soaking are said to be decomposed by the X-rays in less than half an hour. Every molecule is thoroughly penetrated, and the leather is as perfect as any tanned by the old process. Prominent and large tanning concerns and leather experts have tested the product, Cincinnati reports state, and say that it is the equal of any other leather.

After the hides have been soaked in the solution they are put on a highly polished steel plate and a series of three tubes diffuse the rays upon their entire surface. They remain in this state for about 20 minutes, when they are ready to finish as usual in enamel, patent leather or any desired article. The great difficulty with which the inventors met was to obtain a ray sufficiently strong to penetrate the entire hide. The discovery of Sheldel's coil led them to further experiment, and gave them a ray powerful enough to photograph a hand after the ray had been passed through a city directory, an oak board and the hide intended to be tanned. This gave absolute proof that they will be able to tan about 20 hides at one time, laying one upon the other.

The inventor claims that not only will this new process reduce the time necessary for tanning from four months to four days, but it will also reduce the cost of manufacture fully 75 percent. More than that, it will be possible to fit up a plant necessary for the working of the process at about one-fourth the cost of erecting a plant under the present system, and all skilled labor will be dispensed with, not even an electrician being necessary, once the plant is in operation. The Ohio inventors have just perfected their process, and this week they expect to have several hides completed for inspection.

Ministers' Well-Trained Sons.

Not the least gift of the American clergy (and their wives) has been the training of their sons. Think for a moment of Emerson, whose ancestors had been ministers for five generations. James Russell Lowell started from a minister's home. Oliver Wendell Holmes learned to tune his lyre in his father's paragon. Henry Ward Beecher sprang from the loins of a grand old minister of brain and brawn. Looking at the records of literature in England we find the same thing. Addison, Thomson, Goldsmith, Coleridge, Young, Cowper, Montgomery, Heber and Tennyson, were "sons of the prophets," and withal hymn writers and great poets. Turning to philosophy you have the same story. Dugald Stewart, Reid, Abercrombie and Bentham were parsons' sons.

In general literature we find multitudes of ministers' sons—Swift, Macaulay, Thackeray, Kingsley and Matthew Arnold were clergymen's sons. Of the more recent past or still living are such men as Lord Charles Berkeford, Lord Curzon, Cecil Rhodes, W. T. Stead, Anthony Hope, R. D. Blackmore, Henry James, Marcus Dods and Grant Allen. Such names as these, supplemented by thousands less conspicuous, but none the less useful, that can be found in any American or English work of national biography, will stand as an abiding witness that ministers' sons turn out—and they turn out well.—The Pacific Churchman.

The submarine is three hundred feet long, seventy-five feet wide and twelve feet deep, and is to contain boilers, engines and steering gear, which will be submerged to a depth of twelve feet. From the submarine will rise vertically two masts, sixty-five feet apart, each two hundred feet long and ten feet wide.

A scientific investigation of muscular fatigue has been begun by M. A. M. Bloch. From questions sent to persons of many occupations he finds that it is not the most used muscles that are most subject to fatigue, but those that are kept under tension, although doing no work. The baker becomes first tired in the legs, the wood-sawyer in the calves of the legs, the blacksmith in the back and loins, the young soldier in the back of the neck, the horseman in the thigh, the artilleryman in the neck and loins, the immature violinist in the neck, the practiced violinist in the left hand, the expert fencer in the right shoulder, the oarsman in the calves and insteps.

Date Set For November the Ninth.

After consideration and consultation with members of both the senate and house, President Roosevelt has abandoned the suggestion that congress be called into extraordinary session in October. The extraordinary session which he announced many months ago would be held this fall, will be called, according to present plans, to meet in November 9. No definite agreement has yet been reached as to the character of the financial legislation which may be enacted at the approaching session of congress. Indeed, it is not certain that an agreement can be reached between the two branches of congress whereby any special legislation can be enacted.

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER.

Declared by the Navy to be the National Anthem.

The navy department has issued an order declaring "The Star-Spangled Banner" the national anthem and directing whenever that composition is played that all officers and men shall stand at attention unless they are engaged in duty that will not permit them to do so. It is required that the same respect shall be observed toward the national air of any country when played in the presence of official representatives of that country.

Can't Stop It.

Secretary Shaw decided to discuss the question of the present rush of banks to retire their circulation in order to take the profit on United States bonds now deposited with the treasury. It was said, however, by a high treasury official, that the secretary could not stop the retirement of the circulation by withdrawing government deposits from national banks applying for such retirement, because the present movement was not confined to government depositors alone.

The applications to retire circulation amount to $7,800,000. These applications cover the entire amount which may be legally retired during September, October and over half of November. The treasury official quoted said today that the present situation was a complete answer to those who have argued that the removal of the limit of $3,000,000 circulation which may be retired each month would provide a more elastic currency.

Something About Pensions.

Commissioner of Pensions Ware, places the total number of pensioners now on the rolls at 998,545, of which 729,356 are soldiers and 267,189 are widows and dependents. Mr. Ware announces that it is not probable that the pension roll will again cross the million line, the high water mark having been reached a year ago.

Five of the pensioners are on the roll on account of the war of the revolution. The roll shows a net loss of 2901 pensioners during the year. Out of a total of 304,809 applications on hand during the year, 130,109 were admitted and 114,794 were rejected. The average annual value of each pension is now $133. The cost of the pension system per capita of population for 1903 is given at $175.

Added to the Navy.

Saturday the cruiser Maryland, 15,000 tons, was launched. The Maryland's armament will consist of four 8-inch guns mounted in pairs in two electrically controlled elliptical balanced turrets, one forward and one aft, four 6-inch guns on the gun deck and a main broadside battery of ten 6-inch guns, five on each side; besides thirty-eight other guns of smaller size. She is heavily armored.

It is rather remarkable that in the long line of men who have been and who will be at the head of the army, until the retirement of Wood in 1924, none since Schofield has been or will be West Point men. Generals Miles, Young, Corbin, Chaffee, MacArthur and Wood are not graduates of the famous military academy.

Torpedoes were successfully fired at three vessels of the United States navy by the submarine boats Adder and Moccasin, participating in tests to be made in connection with the naval maneuvers. The Adder and Moccasin, embarking about five miles away, attacked a supposed defending force, without detection, dummy torpedoes were fired at three torpedo boats at such close range that, had they been loaded, the three boats would have been destroyed.

Saturday the transport Kilpatrick arrived at New York with the bodies of 300 American soldiers who had met death in the Philippines.

It is reported that Secretary Moody, of the navy, will retire. He has been opposed to the leave granted to Commander Perry to make another attempt to reach the pole, and Assistant Secretary Darling and the president have been as anxious that he should try.

Costs $155,000,000 a year to support England's navy. This is a little more than Uncle Sam's pension budget.

But Two Are Invited and Roosevelt is in a Quandary.

An unpleasant episode with a phase of international interest, has been the outgrowth of a dinner to be given Friday night, the 15th inst., by the Swanwick-Corinthian Yacht club.

Through a series of misapprehensions on the part, seemingly, of some members of the club an apparent slight has been put upon Sir Thomas Lipton and President Roosevelt has been placed in the attitude of being discourteous to the British yachtman.

The club has a home on Center Island in Oyster bay. President Roosevelt is an active member of the organization and Sir Thomas Lipton holds an honorary membership in the club. The club tendered the president an invitation to attend the annual dinner of the organization Friday night. The president declined, but after being assured that it was to be purely a neighborhood affair, consented to be present for a short time. He expressly stipulated that it was not to be a formal function to be attended by guests outside of the club. Later he learned that Sir Thomas Lipton was invited and the president declined again.

A member of the club is quoted as saying: "We would not for a minute consider having another guest of honor. The president had a thorough understanding of the matter. He did not care to attend an elaborate function for very substantial reasons."

Asked if Senator Loebe had presented as one of the conditions of the president's acceptance of the club's invitation that Sir Thomas Lipton should not be present, "Oh, no," he replied, "not at all."

It was said that President Roosevelt had indicated quite clearly his opinion and regard for Sir Thomas Lipton by inviting him to the white house and subsequently by entertaining him on board the cruiser Mayflower.

Historic Character Gona.

Charles Pfister, of Mayville, Ky., friend of Cassius M. Clay, and of John C. Fremont, and an abolitionist of note in Kentucky in ante-bellum and war days, is dead. He was 84 years old. The deceased was the only man in Mayville to vote for Fremont for president in 1856, and was one of only six to vote for Lincoln in 1860. The other five were burned in effigy. He built Fort Hill, commanding the Ohio river for five miles, and turned it over to the Union army and sought no pay for it, but congress remunerated him in after years. He once arranged a meeting at which Gen. C. M. Clay spoke, the general holding a revolver in each hand while he delivered his discourse.

Faith vs. Medicine.

The Rev. Ellenberg, leader of the holiness sect at Aniston, was arrested and jailed because he refused to allow his 7-year-old daughter medical attention. She is critically ill of typhoid fever in the tent in which the family lives. Medical attention is now being given the child by the city physician on order of Mayor Henderson.

The father said that the child was in the Lord's hands and if the physician gave it poison, which he calls medicine, he would hold the mayor responsible. Ellenberg was relying on faith to cure the little girl until the matter was reported to the mayor.

Miss Mary Costeau, a French girl of Boston, made an American flag, stitched with her own hands and of the best materials that she could get, and sent it to the president. He returned it with the explanation that he cannot accept presents. The young lady is very much disappointed.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED "CROSS BEARING."

THE CROSS BEARING. A sermon by the Rev. James E. Hays, D. D., of the First Baptist Church, New York City, delivered at the First Baptist Church, New York City, on Sunday, September 12, 1904.

Three kinds of crosses were in use in the days of Jesus, the so-called St. Andrew's cross, the cross in the form of the letter 'T' and the ordinary Latin cross. It was on the last of these that Jesus suffered crucifixion. The cross of a strong upright post, which was carried before him to the place of execution, and two cross-pieces, which were born by the victim. It was then transverse, as we have seen, and too heavy for the man to carry. It was, in the morning that that memorable procession, of which Jesus was the central figure, a place outside the city. The cross was a white wooden board on which the victim was laid, and preceded by a public executioner from time to time proclaimed aloud the condemned man's name. BOOKKEEPING ON THE FARM.

There, as Everywhere Else, It Bears a Vital Relation to Success.

BY DAVID HUFFMAN.

GREAT many times in my life I have been asked the question, "Can farming, as a business, be made to pay?" The question is a very old one and I suppose for some time to be.

My answer has always been "yes," but it must be recognized that farming, as a business, is not the same as the general principle which governs any other business. It is a business which is not a business.

But there is a project in sight which will overshadow all others in importance for the year. This is the building of the Goodwyn Institute, which will be begun by December 1st.

Work on the addition to the building has been progressing slowly. The city of Memphis has been the beneficiary of the city's progress.

Mrs. John E. Wilson was shot and killed in East Nashville, and her husband is in jail charged with the murder. The woman was living in the same house and had been married to her husband for several years.

George Hightower and Lin Todd fought on the highway with a view to the Tennessee line near the border and Hightower accidentally killed Alfred Lewis, who was watching the fight. Hightower was arrested and charged with the murder.

A runaway horse at Gallatin caused the fatal injury to three persons Monday and the serious injury to more, those fatally hurt are Mrs. Smith, Mamie Smith and Miss Saker.

A census report of the quantity of cotton ginned in the United States from the growth of 1903 up to including August 31, gives the following figures: Total commercial 17,587, including 26 bales of Sea Island cotton.

The rejection of the recent bill the money order supplies outside the blank money order forms received from the government for the first four years.

all been in the lines which he followed, and having attained a moderate success he placed the stamp of full approval upon himself and his manner of farming. He was doubtless honest in his judgment, but his success was not in a large enough way nor of a sufficiently attractive kind to justify it.

WHAT SYSTEM WILL DO. But perhaps of greater value as an illustration than any other instance I could cite is that of a man in my native State of Rhode Island. He inherited from his father a very good farm, beautifully situated and of fertile soil, though rather far from market.

For some reason or reasons it paid him very little and he became greatly dissatisfied. He finally decided to keep for one year a separate account of each feature of his farm in order to ascertain what was the most and which the least profitable. This brought to light some surprising facts. He found that he had been fattening steers at a loss, and that his dairy was barely self-sustaining. His sheep paid much better, but the one feature which paid for in excess of any other was his poultry.

He now gradually disposed of his cattle, keeping more sheep, and increasing his poultry (which he kept on the "colony plan"), till he had over 7000 hens. Figured on the above basis, which is a safe one, the income from these alone is no mean figure to say nothing of what he realizes from his sheep and other sources. I have personally examined (and admired) his farm a great many times and know that it is an exceedingly profitable one. And yet this is the same farm which formerly yielded only a meagre and unsatisfactory income.

I might cite other examples, but the above are probably sufficient. They cover very diverse conditions of soil and climate, and I think, contain in pretty full measure the answer to our question. The question may very naturally follow: "If agriculture can be made to pay so well as a business why have not more men gone into it as such?" The answer is simple. Young farmers have rarely been trained in exact business methods, and habit holds them to their manner of life; while young men in the cities lack that intimate knowledge of agriculture without which all the method and system in the world would never make the farm pay. The number has thus been restricted to those who would naturally grasp the possibilities of agriculture, and to whom it would appear as a thing in which brains and capital could be profitably invested.

Nevertheless, I believe that in the future—possibly much sooner than any of us expect—greatly increased attention will be bestowed upon agriculture as a business. Its possibilities, as brought to light by investigation and the gradual narrowing of many other fields, will naturally compel this. It is a field that has never been overdone and it contains golden prizes for those who will cultivate it aright; even in those departments which have been most largely developed and in which there is still room for the production of the best. Of the best agricultural products there has never been, and never will be, an oversupply.—Saturday Evening Post.

Uncle Daniel's Good Luck.

"Dear me," a lady on the street cars was overheard to say to another lady. "Is your Uncle Daniel married again?" "Yes—he is," the other lady replied, "and eighty-seven years old. We think he ought to be ashamed of himself. He has three widowed daughters to keep house for him and make him comfortable, but he managed to evade their watchfulness and go courting. Maria, Rebecca and Eliza are highly indignant with him. He was married out in the country, and brought his new wife home before they had heard he had any such intentions."

Sad Feature of Reunions.

"I'll do anything in my power for old soldiers, collectively or individually," said an officer who served in the Civil War, "except to attend Grand Army meetings, reunions and places where they assemble. To see them getting older and feeble, to see how the ranks are thinned year after year, makes me feel mighty uncomfortable. I keep up my affiliation in the post, pay all my dues and contribute to all the soldier charities, but I simply can't go among them as these celebrations. It makes me feel more as if I were attending a funeral than a festive occasion. I don't like to see the soldiers get old."—Washington Star.

Safe Bullets for Duels.

A harmless bullet, made of a shell of chalk, has been invented by a Parisian physician, and it will no doubt be extensively used by French duellists. When it strikes a person it merely marks the spot without doing the least injury. With a mask over the face men can practice revolver shooting at each other just as they now practice fencing.

MAN'S ANIMAL FRIENDS

THE DOG AND THE MEN MOST WIDELY DISTRIBUTED.

Regions Where Horses Can't Live—Mules Most Common in South America—Great Range of Cattle—Cats' Love of Civilization—Silk Worm Girdles the Earth.

The dog is the most widely distributed of the domestic animals, declares the New York Sun. He lives in the lowly hut of the African savage and in the mansion of the Greenland Esquimaux, the most northern inhabitants of the world. He is in fact the inseparable companion of man and is found wherever the human race exists. His habitat is thus extended further north and further south than that of any other domestic animal.

The horse has also a very wide habitat. He lives north of the Arctic circle only in the northern parts of Norway and Sweden; the northern half of North America and the northern third of Asia never see him. The most northern part of his habitat in Asia is around the north shores of the Sea of Okhotsk and in the neighborhood of Yakutsk on the Lena river.

South of this latitude he is found nearly everywhere except in the very moist and hot regions like the Amazon basin and equatorial Africa and the southern part of India. He thrives in the dry heat of the Sahara desert in many of the oases, but he would be sought for in vain in tropical Africa between the latitude of the Cape Verde islands and the Tropic of Capricorn.

When explorers pushed northward from the Congo their native servants were greatly surprised on reaching a region near Lake Chad to find the horse in abundance. Their astonishment was unbounded when they saw the horsemen of the Soudan on the feet of riding animals that had ever met their gaze.

The mule is more generally distributed over South America than any other of the continents, being found there everywhere excepting along a part of the hot, damp coast between Pernambuco and Rio Janeiro; and he is also practically unknown in the Guianas, the Amazon basin and Terra del Fuego.

His home covers perhaps a fifth as much area as that of the horse. There are few mules around our Great Lakes excepting along their southern shores, but from the lakes the animal extends southward to the Straits of Magellan. His home in all temperate and hot countries, is practically coextensive with that of the horse, but it does not extend nearly as far north as the horse's range, and he is not found in the deserts.

The range of the ass is about as large as that of the mule, but he lives in Asia, far to the northeast of the mule's habitat, and his habitat stretches across the continent as far as Irkutsk on Lake Baikal.

The range of the tame reindeer has been widely extended in northern Asia by the tribes that number him among their valuable assets; and now he is in process of being widely introduced into Alaska. Civilization, therefore, has done much to extend the habitat of this animal to the south, but the domesticated reindeer has not been introduced into most of the great regions of the Arctic, where the wild animal roams at will.

The range of cattle is practically coextensive with that of the horse. Cattle, however, are found more extensively in very hot, damp climates than the horse and are entirely absent from dry desert regions where the horse is found in considerable numbers.

Cattle, for example, are wholly lacking in the desert of Sahara, but they graze in the southern part of India, where no horses are found. They are grown wherever grass thrives, except in some hot regions of excessive humidity, while the horse is important only in regions where grain supplements grass as a part of his food.

The hen embraces nearly all the world, and its range would be as great as that of the dog if it extended farther north and south; but it is found north of the Arctic circle only in Norway and Sweden, and is as yet lacking in the southern part of South America, except where the Scotch have settled in Patagonia.

Travelers throughout the most of Africa and India and in many little-known parts of the world can usually add chickens to their food resources without difficulty; but there are some large islands, like New Guinea, where the hen is not found, and more than half of Australia is destitute of this animal.

We seldom think of the enormous addition which the hen makes to our resources. It is well known that our country, year by year, usually produces more gold and silver than any other country in the world. But the last Year Book of the agricultural department gives facts to show that the value of the eggs sold in this country has every year surpassed that of the gold and silver it has mined since 1850, except in one year.

entire Amazon basin, and is never seen in at least two thirds of Africa.

It lives in Morocco, Algeria, along the Nile and among the whites on the east and west coasts; but the vast expanses of the Sahara and of the tropical interior of Africa do not know this animal.

The domesticated ostrich is not found in any of the haunts of the wild bird, but is confined in Africa to the north and the south parts of the continent, where he is raised for his feathers. As is well known, there are a number of ostrich farms in Arizona and southern California, where the animal is thriving.

The honey bee lives almost all over the world where flowers supply the nectar it requires, except in the Amazon basin, in most of which the bee is not found. The bee, therefore, is distributed all over our country, though very sparsely in the dry and unfertile regions of the west. It is wholly absent in the cold and most of the desert parts of the world.

The silk worm girdles the earth between the 50th parallel of north latitude and the Tropic of Cancer, being found further south only in Siam and Cochinchina. In other words, it lives wherever the mulberry and other trees on which it feeds are found in perfection. It belongs distinctively to the northern hemisphere, but may yet be introduced into parts of the southern hemisphere that are favorable for the mulberry.

FISHERMAN'S PARADISE.

A Name to Which Newfoundland is Certainly Entitled.

A native of Newfoundland is a born fisherman or a fish dealer. If the turn of his business life prevents him from catching fish, it seldom, if ever, gets him out of the atmosphere of them. If he doesn't catch them he sells them, or gets his living in some way out of them. He lives and thrives, as it were, on codfish, fresh and salted, or in the fattening from cod liver oil, crude and refined. The scheduled commerce of the island is made up of fish—the cod, herring and the salmon—the latter a mere drop in the aggregate bucket. This condition has existed since the early years of the 16th century, when the Portuguese, the Biscayans, the French and English fought fiercely over the rights to the coast fishing.

For nearly 400 years the traffic in these special products of the seas was, and is now, carried on purely from the dollar standpoint, and during this long period we find no reference to the angling wealth of the inland waters, except when, here and there, a stray Waltonian, stranded in transit to his far-off home, improvised a rod and fishing gear and gave glowing accounts of the salmon and trout waters near the coast. But these reports were few and far between, and owing to the isolated location of the island and the dearth of transportation facilities, Newfoundland continued to be an undeveloped Utopia to the anglers of the world.

This condition existed until within the last decade, when the American tourist, as restless and indefatigable in his search for new avenues of pleasure as he is probably had formerly been in chasing the dollar, traversed the island and corduroyed, as it were, its many and difficult portages in his heart for choice angling waters. He found them everywhere; nestled in the lap of every vale; in the concaves of the hilltops, and dashing down the mountain sides, widening from turbulent trout rivulets into noble salmon rivers flowing placidly to the sea. For he it known that more than one-third of the area of the island is covered with fresh waters, and in their broad reaches live many species of fish esteemed the world over for their game qualities. It is not to be wondered that such a country forms an objective point in the itinerary of the angling season with the fisherman.—William Harris in the Illustrated Sporting News.

Heat Hints From India.

Though Britain is itself a cool country English soldiers have plenty of experience in India, which isn't, and the British war authorities are constantly testing new devices for avoiding sunstroke. A metal lining for army helmets was tried out at Aldershot during the recent manoeuvres without decisive results.

Sunstroke occurs in the British army in India not in the hottest months but in the muggy weather just before the rainy season. The rules for safety in hot weather are: Eat little, especially of mere foods, such as fat, take fluids freely, as they aid the perspiration-cooling mechanism, wear loose, porous, thin, light-colored cloth; beware of over-exercise in hot, damp air.

Indian experience warns on the hat. Kipling's advice to the "recruit" is, "You must wear your 'elmet'."

Protect your eyes and brain and spinal cord by hatrim for the eyes, hat for the head; a brim or handkerchief or high collar for the nape of the neck.

In this country the coat protects the rest of the spinal cord, but in India an extra layer of thin cloth is often sewed into the middle of the back of the jacket.

Meanwhile the scientists are still discussing whether heat prostration is caused by visible sunlight or by the "Roentgen rays" therein.—New York World.

Relics of the Armada.

Some interesting relics of the Spanish Armada have been found in Tobemore bay, where one of the Spanish galleons was sunk. A bronze breech-loading cannon, dated 1563 is among the finds.

AGRICULTURAL

Handling Bees.

In subduing bees with smoke do not overdo the thing. If you smoke them for the purpose of removing honey from the super do not drive the smoke in at the entrance. That will drive the bees from the brood chamber to the super. The fewer bees you have to contend with in the super the better. Turn up one corner of the quilt and smoke from the top; this will drive the bees below. When you remove the quilt do not hold the nozzle of the smoker too close to the bees. By so doing I have more than once seen a novice singe the wings of the bees. Do not drive the smoke in as if you intended to heat a smelting furnace. There is reason in all things. "Enough is as good as a feast" is an old proverb.

Always use a bee-veil in handling bees. By experience you will gain confidence. Even then always have your veil on your hat ready to protect your face should the bees suddenly become angered.

In handling or manipulating frames of brood or honey hold them with both hands, so that they may hang perpendicularly, otherwise you are liable to break the combs. Should you meet with such an accident with a brood-comb, if the parts will hang together, return it at once to the hive; the bees will very soon repair the damage. If it be completely severed, or a danger thereof, bring the broken edges together, so that the comb will be in its original position, and tie it there with narrow bits of tape. Return the comb to the hive, and after about twenty-four hours remove the tapes; it will be all right.—American Cultivator.

Saving the Milk.

To treat a cow from milking herself make two pieces like cut according to length and thickness of neck; then make four round sticks; bore holes through as wide apart as neck is thick; put together at bottom and pin tight; slip up on neck and put in both top sticks with small bolts, leaving ends of sticks out six inches from frame. Better than spike halters and a sure cure.—S. H. McClurg, in The Epitomist.

Breaking Large Stones.

The use of dynamite in the removal of large stone is becoming very common, and when in the hands of an experienced person is safe and effective. A correspondent of the Michigan Farmer says:

The largest stone which I have disposed of measured five and a quarter by three and three-quarter feet at its extreme measurements across the top. Its thickness varied from three feet to nearly seven feet, an average of two and a half feet being above ground. The stone was broken up in pieces small enough for any man to lift on a low-wheeled wagon. It was an exceedingly hard, heavy, blue granite stone, and I defy all the kerosene and fence rails of Shiawassee County to break, crack or budge a stone of this nature and size.

Instead of half a day it took less than half an hour to dispose of this more than ordinary large stone, and the entire cost, including labor, did not exceed $125. Had the stone been of a sandy nature, hence soft, the entire cost would have been less than fifty cents, and most of the pieces would have been chips too small to pick up.

Stones too heavy for a team to handle should be disposed of with dynamite, using what in railroad construction parlance is termed "dauby charge." The forty per cent. dynamite is safer and cheaper than the higher grades, and it answers the purpose fully as well. From two to four sticks weighing one-half pound each should be used for a charge.

Prepare a painful or more of mud of the consistency of stone mortar. Have it nearly free from stones or sticks and use clay, muck or road dust rather than sand. Place the charge upon a seam or depression on top of the stone, and when using three or more sticks of dynamite for a single charge, lay the stick having the cap and fuse attached to it on top of the mud, pressing it down slightly so as to exclude all air, and finish it into a little mound, finally smoothing it with the back side of a shovel or with a trowel. A thickness of at least three or four inches of mud should be all around and on top of the dynamite, and the edges of the little mound should be pressed and well smoothed so as to unite the mud with the stone and thereby exclude all air holes. Light the fuse and pretend you have some business to look after about 200 or 300 feet away from the stone.

The rock described above required four charges of four sticks each, and I subsequently used two more sticks on one piece, which was a little too heavy for one man to lift.

Soft sandstones too heavy to lift, but light enough to be handled by a team need not be removed, as the dynamite method is the cheapest way to dispose of them. Within the last two years I have come across several such weighing 500 to 800 pounds, and by using three sticks of dynamite there is usually nothing left except sand and a few shovelfuls of coarse gravel.

Homage Feed Bag.

Any one who has ever seen a horse struggling to secure the contents of a feed bag fastened to his head will at once recognize the necessity of some improvement in the design of these things purely from a humane standpoint. The bag is fastened in such a way that when the animal has consumed part of his meal the remainder remains in the bottom of the bag at a level just below that of his mouth and out of the animal's reach. In his efforts to get the feed he tosses his head wildly around, and in thus securing a few grains he scatters the greater part of his meal hopelessly around the ground.

There has been recently introduced for this purpose a nose bag in which the level of the grain is maintained at the same point constantly until the supply is completely exhausted. The general appearance of this improvement is shown in the accompanying cut. The basket or main receptacle is of the ordinary circular form with a flat bottom, but is much shallower than usual for the purpose of giving the animal greater breathing freedom. The supply tube is of canvas and communicates with the basket through the neck, which is of metal and contains a butterfly valve for the purpose of regulating the supply of feed. This regulation, however, is necessary only when the contents of the bag is of finely ground grain. If this arrangement the level of the grain in the basket is always kept at the level of about the top of the gates through which it enters from the source of supply. The tube holding the reserve supply is held in an upright position by being fastened over the animal's neck by means of a strap. There is thus no reason whatever for the horse to throw his head in the air to get possession of the grain, but if he should have contracted the habit there is provision made for preventing the spilling of the grain in the supply bag by fastening the top. Another similar device at the bottom cuts off the supply entirely when it is desired to do so.—Philadelphia Record.

Best Stable Fastenings.

The halter may be of rope, chain or leather, or part chain and part leather. The old fashioned, and still common, plan of tying is of rope, usually called the head collar rope. They wear out owing to friction through the mangering which may be of iron or brass, and so require frequent renewal. Saddlers sell head collar ropes with a worked eye at one end, and the rope is first passed through the ring or rings of the head stall, and then through the worked eye which may be of iron or brass, and so require frequent renewal. Saddlers sell head collar ropes with a worked eye at one end, and the rope is first passed through the ring or rings of the head, stall, and then through the worked eye in the end of the rope and drawn tight. This cannot be undone in a hurry, especially when the ropes have been some time in use. One or two ropes are used. If one is employed it is secured in the manner described in the ring under the chin piece of the head collar, and if two are used they are fastened to the rings or D's on either side of the head collar at the check pieces. Whatever form is used it is best to have two halter ties for horses in stalls, because they keep the horse standing straight.

To avoid the necessity for frequent renewal, chains are sometimes used instead of ropes, and for cart horses very strong chains are often employed. These are highly objectionable. They make night hideous owing to their rattling through the iron manger rings at every movement of the horse's head; they cannot be cut in emergencies, and if a horse happens to get a leg over a chain the injury is likely to be much more serious than if a rope or strap is used. We have often known cases of injury from horses getting a leg over a chain that practically ruined the animal.

If ropes are used they should be furnished with strap and buckle ends for fastening to the head collar, and the easy working of the knots at the logs should be frequently looked to. If leather straps are used they should have chain ends with spring hooks. All-chain leads should never be employed, since they are dangerous as well as noisy. It is quite possible to combine easy means of release with the retaining strength so necessary to prevent horses breaking loose at night, which with a "light cord" they would constantly be doing as soon as they learned that a snatch of the head would set them free.

The strap, somewhat stouter than the ordinary driving reins, with a small chain at one end, is no doubt the best thing. It is furnished with a spring hook to fasten at the head collar, and the leather makes it practically noiseless as it runs through the ring. Where iron manger fittings are used the halter tying is sometimes made to pass through a ring or shackle on the front of the manger. This is an improvement, because the rope and log are more out of the way under the manger and less liable to cause injury.—American Cultivator.

A Quiet Day

When mother has a quiet day,
And all the house is still,
She hears a noise, and she knows That Johnny is at it.

When there's no tramping or Boys' laugh or shout,
Assured that Johnny is not ill,
She knows he must be out.

But if the silence deeper grows,
With no sound, she'll creep
And look into the darkened room,
Where Johnny lies asleep.

I rather think, if truth were told,
She loves those days the best,
When Johnny's snoring, noisy play Gives no one any rest.

A quiet day will only come,
Of this she has no doubt,
When snoring, tumbling Johnny Asleep, or li or out.

Nicest Mother in the World

"I've got the nicest mother in the world," said Freddie Birkhoff, laughing.

"Oh, no! Mine is lots nicer," said Angela Trueman, with a smile.

"I'm perfectly certain that my mother is nicer than anybody else's mother," announced Jennie Smith, smiling broadly at the others. And they all believed that they were joking. But in the end three very angry little girls walked away from each other with heads high and never a trace of a smile on their faces, and they "didn't speak" for a week.

At the end of that time the three "nicest mothers" noticed something strange in the manner of the children, and knowing that they had been good friends always, wondered. Two days later the three ladies, walking down the street together met the three little girls walking up it, not speaking to each other and two or three feet apart, and insisted upon knowing the reason why.

"She said her mother was nicest!" said all the girls at once, pointing to one of the other two.

The three mothers looked at each other and smiled.

"Then each took her own little girl and walked home with her, explaining that God made all mothers seem the very nicest to their own dear children, but that it wouldn't be possible for any one else to compare them.

And next day three little girls, a trifle shamefaced and conscious but very happy in that they were all good friends again, walked gayly off down the street together, laughing and talking, and nobody has so much as mentioned the "nicest mother" incident to them since.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Sallie

When the government lighthouse tender Manzanita returned from her Alaskan voyage she brought one more passenger than she started with. This passenger was a little black bear cub, Sallie, which literally hugged her way to the hearts of all on board, says an eastern exchange.

Being constantly with the men, and at the same time being allowed to roam all over the vessel she became tame and gentle as a kitten, and quite as playful.

The one place where she was not allowed was the engine room, and this not because the chief did not like her, but because he was afraid she would get hurt.

The other day Sallie was missed at dinner time, and one of the men volunteered to find her; when, after a long search she was found perched on the walking beam of the engine which was in motion.

There she clung, and at every movement of the great beam she was raised to within six inches of the ceiling and her little fat body compressed to a corresponding thinness, but she never made a whimper, and was too much frightened to jump off, so there she clung, alternately getting a good breath and the next moment losing it in a rather violent manner.

The moment she was safe in the man's arms she hugged him tight and began to cry and make a tremendous row generally.

Among the many tricks she plays is one of stealing quietly up to the cabin door, rising on her hind feet, giving the door a sounding knock with one of her paws and, grabbing the knob, almost shake the door from its hinges; the second she hears a footstep, away she goes scampering aft. A very cute bear is Sallie.—Detroit Free Press.

Bear Story

Our neighborhood was long proud of possessing one who was the first white child born within the state of Indiana. This was Uncle Johnnie G— of reported memory, who died some six years ago, well past the four score mark.

He was born in a fort down on the Ohio, and he used to tell that he had upon his advent "been sound in a bucket of ice cold water," that he might be made a "hardy pup." The role treatment, it would seem, was in Uncle Johnnie's case it worked all right. It would seem, as he was a hale, active man well up to the last.

Of all the many experiences that befell him on a long life through stirring times, there was none the old gentleman enjoyed telling better, perhaps, than the way in which he had once killed a bear. The story is strictly true, as all who knew Uncle Johnnie would unhesitatingly agree.

He was the typical barefoot, homespun boy, hosing corn in a stumpy "clearing," one warm spring morning, when on arriving at the farther side his eyes espied something bulky and unusual lying up in the crotch of a neighboring tree. Upon investigation, which was immediate, we may be sure, it proved to be a good-sized brown timber bear, and it was fast asleep.

The sound of the hoe had not disturbed it.

The "folks" were all away for the day, leaving the lad alone on the place, and it stands to reason that the welkin was not badly disturbed by the sound of his hoe.

Well, bears were rather more abundant then than now, and still the boy Johnnie had not yet killed one. This he now resolved to do, and without dividing the honors with any neighbors.

And then he remembered the odds against! The one ride the family owned was disabled and the "folks" had taken the stock along for repairs. But the bear must be killed for all that, and with all a boy's unbounded hopefulness he set out to do it. He went to the cabin, got powder, bullets and the rifle barrel and carrying a firebrand, proceeded to the execution.

Selecting a convenient stump—always a white oak in Uncle Johnnie's description—the boy very carefully propped up and adjusted the barrel, first well loaded for bear, took careful aim, the bear very accommodatingly never moving an inch, when on touching fire to powder: "Bless my soul and body, down he came!" and after a hearty kick or two lay dead as you please! Uncle Johnnie never seemed to have gotten over the surprise of it, and that there was a good deal of the accidental about it is hardly to be doubted.—C. R. P., in Indiana Farmer.

"King Dogs"

The intelligence and usefulness of the Arctic dog is declared by explorers to surpass all understanding. In "Farthest North with Greely," Major D. L. Brainard gives a story of two "king dogs." Each pack of Greenland dogs has an acknowledged leader, an absolute, autocratic king, who has won his way to supremacy by fighting every other dog that dared to enter the lists against him. Likewise each team has its king, whose exercise undisputed way over the others, enforces discipline and administers punishment whenever in his judgment it is necessary.

"Rittenbark," the king dog of our team, writes Major Brainard, was a conspicuous example. Large, with a mixed white, black and mouse-colored coat, a tall which curled tightly over his back, a broad, intelligent head and a bright, twinkling eye, he was the embodiment of strength, courage and sagacity. By reason of his great strength and superior intelligence he had gained the supremacy of the team. He was, therefore, the leader in all the schemes for stealing our provisions.

One day, when he had stolen a ptarmigan, which had been placed for safety on the ridge pole of the tent, he lay down and apparently with no qualms of conscience, began in the most complacent manner to eat it. I rushed at him with a spade, expecting to drive him from our anticipated dinner, but he was far from being the coward I had pictured him. He gave vent to a growl of defiance and stood immovable, his sturdy legs wide apart and his great bold eyes looking squarely into mine. Of course I might have crushed his skull with a blow, but my admiration for his courage deterred me. I threw away the spade and called him by his familiar name, "Rit," whereupon he trotted up and rubbed his head in the most confiding manner against my knee.

When Rittenbark joined Lieutenant Greely's pack at the Greenland town from which he was named, a huge dog known as "Disco King" was the ruling spirit among his companions, which were confined in a large wooden pen located on the main deck of the Proteus. The battle for supremacy was fierce and prolonged, and Disco King, divested of his royal authority, was ever afterward a broken-hearted, mean-spirited outcast, who lived a melancholy life, apart from his former subjects. He had not recovered from his humiliation on the northern trip, although several months had elapsed since his downfall, and he would discourage the friendly approach of the members of our party, or of his associates, with a curiously snarl which soon gained him the appropriate name of "Howler." He never engaged in Rittenbark's midnight predatory raids on our commissary department, but would frequently warn us of the conspiracy of foot to rob our larder. For this and other reasons he was not popular with his companions; and Rittenbark encouraged his subordinates in their constant attacks upon his former enemy.

Death of Mrs. G. A. Conville

On the last stroke of 10 Sept. 20, 1903, when the noticed hands of relatives and friends ceased to avail any comfort to the afflicted, the great monster death swooped down on the home of Rev. G. A. Conville and bore from thence the sweet spirit of his wife to realms of unknown bliss in the happy beyond. Mrs. Conville was born April 17, 1854, and was married to Mr. I. L. Maddox March 31, 1870, of whom she leaves five sons and seven daughters to mourn her loss, and after a lonely widowhood of two years she was linked in holy wedlock to Rev. G. A. Conville July 29, 1903. Mrs. Conville has been a consistent member of the church since early life, and resigned to God's will until shrouded in death. As wife she was devoted; as mother affectionate and as a friend sincere. And to her husband and twelve children our sympathy is unlimited and we can only say:

Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crow's well won,
Then comes death.

Why Old Uncle Lige Left the Whole Cabin to His Wife.

One winter in the mountains of North Carolina I met old Lige Downs, a familiar character of those hills, treading toward town with a bundle tied in a red bandanna slung over his stooped shoulders.

"Good morning, Uncle Lige," I said. "Maw'nin', missy," he replied, taking his hat from his kinked white crown. "Are you going away?" I asked. "Yessum," he answered, "yessum."

"Where's Aunt Hootie?" he was going too.

"None; she ain't gwine wif me. I ain't no tittin' cump'ny fer dat woman nohow."

"Why, what's the matter?" I asked, amazed. "I always thought Hootie was the best wife in the world."

"Yessum; dat's what she shorely is. But a pore, mis'ble stinnah talk me kaint stan' so much goodness. Dat woman nevah did know de power of sin, an' de parson himself kaint come up to hah fer preachin'." Dey hull cabin shines wif glory, but me—I ain't nuffin' but a black spot.

"Why, Uncle Lige, you can't leave your wife because she's good," I said. "That would be a strange cause for divorce."

"Dey lots of um does it, missy. I ain't no dejections to hah bein' good, but when anybody gits so good dat dey ain't got no feelin' for nobody, what dey wants is a cabin to dere-elves."

The "black spot" moved down the sun-flecked road toward other blacker spots that waited for him in the village—Exchange.

Chilton County Sunday-School Association.

The last session of the Chilton county Sunday-school Association was held at Verbena on the 19th and 20th inst.

Five Sunday-schools were represented, viz: Verbena Methodist and Baptist; Canaan Baptist; Clanton Baptist and Thorby Union.

There was a good local attendance which was encouraging. The meetings were made interesting and profitable by the able discussions of the subjects.

Miss Minnie Kennedy, Secretary of the Primary Department State Sunday-school Convention, was present and added no little to the interest of the Convention. Miss Kennedy is one of the best Sunday-school workers in the State.

The local Sunday-schools were disappointed in having so few delegates to entertain. Dr. Caffey, who is a former president of the Association, expressed it as his opinion that every Sunday-school in the county ought to be represented in the county Association.

Mr. E. B. Deason was elected president and Miss M. C. Gibson secretary for the ensuing year. JUDSON STRUCK.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. Horn, Thorby.

Aggravation Peculiar. Up in the mill district of Kensington it is the custom for employees to contribute so much per capita each week to a fund for providing soap, towels, ice water, shoe blacking, etc., one of the number in each mill being appointed to take charge of the purchasing and distributing of supplies. A young Celt had this duty in one of the mills for some months. One evening after the whistle had blown for the stopping of work for the day a grumpy machinist found a very damp and unlabeled towel after he had reached the wash rack.

"Say, Reddy," he called to the custodian, "this is the limit to ask a man to wipe on."

"Don't yer be so alrish!" retorted Reddy. "Fifty or sixty just as good as ye have wiped on it already, and yer is the first to complain."—Philadelphia Times.

Try for Health.

222 South Peoria St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Wednesday, September 25d.

The legislature had another busy day and besides disposing of a number of bills made provisions for lengthening the sessions so as to have more working hours. Hereafter the morning sessions will begin at 9:30 o'clock.

The anti-boycott bill was made a special order for tomorrow morning and a warm fight is expected when the measure comes up for final passage.

The legislature listened for two hours to a speech by Senator John T. Morgan. The speech was possibly delivered with as much personal pride as any that has ever come from the lips of the statesman. It came upon the day following the greatest victory that Senator Morgan has ever won. While his speech referred to the canal in the main part, still it covered a rather wide scope.

Referring to the Panama canal treaty Senator Morgan said the American people escaped a great danger by the failure of the Colombian government to ratify the treaty. "I believe," said he, "it was done by the guiding hand of Providence. Certainly no man had anything to do with it. In his own way the Great Ruler of the universe has provided that there shall be a great gateway constructed that shall bring peace to the whole world."

SENATE—Took from the adverse calendar the Sunday bill, adopting the minority report of the committee on public buildings and grounds to which the matter was referred.

The senate again took up the municipal revenue bill, but before any progress had been made recessed to hear the address of Senator Morgan.

At the afternoon session the senate passed the bill regulating municipal licenses, after it had been before the body three days.

The bill to decentralize the district agricultural schools was called up. No action was taken when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE—Eighty-two members present at the morning session.

The house reconsidered the vote by which the bill increasing the appropriation for the State Normal school for negroes was passed on yesterday, to correct an error in the roll call. Mr. Wood, of Macon, moved to indefinitely postpone further consideration of the bill, which was carried by a vote of 49 to 41.

The house gained an hour more of working time for the consideration of general bills by the adoption of Mr. Davis' resolution that hereafter the morning sessions shall begin at 9:30 a. m. and continue to 1 p. m., the afternoon session to begin at 2 and continue to 5:30, the evening session to begin at 8 o'clock and continue at the will of the house.

The Lusk amendment was adopted by a vote of 19 to 21.

Mr. Callahan offered an amendment providing that in all cases where a rehearing is asked for that the entire court should hear the briefs. Mr. Walker, of Madison, opposed the amendment, saying that its effect would be to take away one of the essential provisions of the bill—to permit the court to sit in sections for the purpose of expediting business.

Mr. Callahan defended the amendment in an earnest appeal, but the house declined to agree with him by a vote of 43 to 35. The bill was then passed. Several local bills were passed at the night session.

The bill passed 59 to 33.

More than half of the afternoon session was consumed with the consideration of senate messages, a fight on concurrence in a senate bill providing boards of trustees for the district agricultural schools causing a spirited debate. The motion to concur finally won by a vote of 47 to 32.

The bill to establish at the University of Alabama a summer school for teachers and to provide an appropriation for its maintenance, was called as the special order and a couple of amendments were offered and adopted. The bill was passed by a vote of 52 to 37.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

The Powell bill providing that the expenses of the supernumerary judge be paid out of the state treasury was passed. The bill to prevent the interference with grand juries passed as did the two bills to preserve oysters.

On motion of Senator Rodgers the anti-boycott bill was set down as a special order tomorrow immediately after

Mr. Haley, of Jefferson, secured unanimous consent and called and had passed the senate bill to provide for the change of name and otherwise amending the charters of educational institutions of collegiate rank, which have been established by an act of a general assembly of Alabama.

The house adopted the report of the conference committee on the public school re-districting bill.

The municipal corporation bill reached the house, and Mr. Walker moved non-concurrence and asked for a committee of conference, which was adopted. This bill is the most voluminous one that has yet been presented to the session.

A companion bill to the tax officers' extension bill, fixing the terms of office so as to have them conform in the future was passed.

The Bankhead bill to regulate the taxation of insurance companies caused considerable debate. The bill was lost by way of indefinite postponement, the vote being 67 to 18.

The house resolved itself into the committee of the whole for the purpose of consideration of the primary election bill. For the purpose of making progress, the senate bill was offered as a substitute for the house bill and adopted. After some parliamentary suggestions it was agreed to let over the consideration of the bill so far until tomorrow immediately after the reading of the Journal.

The bill amending the code with reference to the salaries of county treasurers was considered under unanimous consent. The bill proposes that the treasurers shall receive all that is due them by virtue of the passage of a bill at the former session. The bill was passed.

NINETEENTH DAY.

Saturday, September 26th.

Only three legislative days remain in which to transact business to tide the state over to January, 1907.

This being practically the last day on which a bill originating in either house can by statute pass the other resolutions were passed in both houses to that effect. Both houses adjourned till Tuesday.

SENATE—The senate broke the resolution mentioned for the purpose of considering the house anti-boycott bill. The fight for the passage of the bill was led by Senator Rogers, seconded by Senator Morrow. The opposition was championed by Senators Craig, NeSmith, Lynne and Hurst. Several amendments were submitted, but were tabled by the friends of the bill, which passed 22 to 9.

The senate refused to pass the bill appropriating $250 for each of the district agricultural schools for repairs. The Harrison bill providing that $500 be appropriated for the erection of a monument and head and foot stones at the Alabama confederate dead buried at Winchester, Va., was passed without opposition.

HOUSE—Mr. James' motion to take from the adverse calendar the bill to make trading checks issued by corporations transferable, provoked good-natured wrangling. Mr. James won out by a vote of 33 to 32.

The bill was then passed without opposition. Three volumes are to be printed, including one political, civil and criminal.

Tuesday, September 27th.

SENATE—The Blackburn bill consolidating the city court of Birmingham, the circuit court of Jefferson county, the criminal court of Jefferson county and the chancery court of Jefferson county into one court, to be known as the circuit court of Jefferson county, passed. The final vote was 17 ayes and 12 nays. The senate by an almost unanimous vote passed the university summer normal school bill.

HOUSE—Seventy-three present. Judge Wheeler, of Madison, arose to a question of personal privilege. Papers had so reported his speech on the anti-foreign corporation bill on Saturday so that they might be construed as a reflection upon the senate. He had not intended such reflection.

It still being possible for house bills to reach the senate and get through that body the house resumed the order of Saturday, permitting a member to call a bill as he could secure recognition.

A new bill, which passed, makes it the duty of the solicitor to prosecute attorneys in disbarment proceedings. The bank examiners' bill was under discussion when adjournment came.

$35,000 FIRE.

Several Firemen Injured—One of Them Seriously.

The large one-story building of the Alabama MHI and Elevator Company in Birmingham, was almost completely destroyed Tuesday night by fire.

The loss from fire, smoke and water will amount to over $35,000, covered by about $25,000 insurance. One section of the building containing about one hundred tons of hay, was saved by extraordinary work on the part of the firemen.

Charles Lane, foreman of the hook and ladder company, was buried under a falling wall and suffered a compound fracture of the left leg below the knee. Several other firemen were bruised and cut by the falling brick, but Lane was the only one seriously injured.

This is the second fire in three months, the other doing considerable damage. The building was valued at $20,000, and there was something over $12,000 of stock. The insurance is divided. The stock was probably the heaviest the company has ever carried.

Andrew S. Wallace, late postmaster at Opp, Covington county, has been held in the sum of $500 to await the action of the grand jury of the federal court in December. He is charged with having offered to the postmaster-general a bribe of $50 for appointment as postmaster at Andalusia.

He returned home and is now walking around the streets as if nothing had happened.

The cane crop. Dry days and cold nights during the past week have been reported from all quarters of the sugar country and there has been a practical cessation of growth. The cane fields are yellowing as if for the harvest and a heavy rain fall and warmer weather would be everywhere welcomed. The southern winds just now prevailing have elevated the temperature somewhat and made an early rainfall seems probable. The weather conditions have been bad for the cane crop from a quantitative point of view. At 60 F. and below sugar cane lies dormant and this September has given too much weather down in the sixties, as well as a practically continuous drought thus far throughout the month.

Dry days and cold nights during the week have been reported from quarters of the sugarcane country and there has been a practical cessation of work. The cane fields are yellowing for the harvest and a heavy rain and warmer weather would be everywhere welcomed. The southern is just now prevailing have cooled the temperature somewhat and an early rainfall seems probable. Weather conditions have been bad the cane crop from a quantitative point of view. At 60 F. and below the cane lies dormant and this September has given too much weather in the sixties, as well as a pretty continuous drouth thus far throughout the month.

Pig Iron Production.
The Wall Street Journal thinks pig production in this country this year will approximate 20,000,000 tons against 17,821,307 tons last year. It is, too, that Alabama will produce this, becoming third in the country. The time is coming, says the Journal, when Alabama will outrank standing second to Pennsylvania.

RAPID PHOTOGRAPHIC PRINTING.

Patented in U. S. and Foreign Countries.

The record for rapid photographic printing has been broken by a machine recently invented, and which is now engaged in the work of turning out prints for the publicity bureau of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This machine is a very compact affair, no larger than a small table. The cabinet seen in the illustration herewith reproduced, under the table top contains a 500 candle-power electric light, which is constantly in operation and which is covered, in order to concentrate all the light rays on the sheet of sensitive paper. The latter is held in place over the light by a device which is to be seen in the top of the table. The printing operation is performed by the manipulation of a treadle, which is moved back and forth under the table, and the prints are made almost as rapidly as this can be done. In fact, the speed of this machine is almost as great as a foot-power printing press.

The paper used in the machine is what is known as the developing paper, which is sensitive to artificial light. The sheets of the desired size are placed in some convenient place on the top of the table. The operator puts the sheet in place and drops the lid over it, which insures perfect contact of the paper with the negative. Pressure on the treadle opens a wing shutter under the table top, which heretofore protected the negative from the action of the light. A second or two at the most is sufficient for the exposure, and as the treadle is allowed to fall back into its normal position, the shutter is again closed. Upon raising the lid the paper is projected by a spring attachment, leaving all in readiness for the succeeding sheet.

The operators at St. Louis have become very proficient with this clever bit of mechanism, and one of the young ladies recently established the record of 840 prints in one hour, the same negative being used during all that time. On another occasion, when it was necessary to make prints from thirty different negatives, 1500 prints were made in three hours. The latter task, under ordinary circumstances, would have required the services of six men.

The prints made use of so lavishly by the Exposition authorities are for the purpose of advertising the event. The prints are sent to newspapers and journals of various kinds which make use of matter of this character.

FOR WOMAN'S BENEFIT

EXERCISING FOR BEAUTY.

Some Hints For Women Who Desire Muscular Development.

The following exercise is recommended for filling out the chest and throat: Take the usual erect position with chest out high and fine, heels together, and hips back. Bring the arms directly forward with the hands tightly clinched and palms uppermost; then draw the arms back as if you were pulling at reins, keeping the arms directly at the sides and sending them back as far as ever you can. All this time the chest must be kept forward. Never allow it to relax. With every pull at the make-believe reins take a deep inhalation, exhaling when the elbows are far back, and take a rest of four or five seconds. This exercise means muscular development. It should be started slowly, and increased gradually. First day repeat only five times; in a week increase to ten. As you get stronger, you can make it fifteen.

Hollows at the base of the neck is an affliction with which many women suffer.

A tiny little scoop is considered pretty, much prettier indeed than a neck that is layers upon layers of fat. However, for an actual hollow in the neck this exercise will be found beneficial.

Heels together, hips back, chest out. Close the teeth tight together, turn the head so you will look straight over the right shoulder, then, with the fingers anointed with skin food, gently massage the left side of the neck, sending the finger tips about in tiny circles, always with an upward, outward pressure. Massage while counting five; turn the head the other way, count five again, and continue for six or seven minutes—never any longer.

Beware of fatigue when exercising. Remember that as soon as you are tired you are in no condition for exercise. Drawing upon the strength of the muscles is an exhilarating pastime, not a task, and you should think of your exercise in that way. Whatever strain is not a mental stimulus, and when the mind is congenially centered results are much speedier and more lasting.

An exercise for the nervous girl who can't sleep and who thinks she is the biggest of martyrs and the saddest of mortals is to stand erect and very slowly relax every muscle of the body. Drop the shoulders forward and let the chest cave in; head must fall forward on the bust. Then very slowly and gradually raise the chest, letting the shoulders and head go back until the head rests on the back. Sway the shoulders forward, and in this way bring the head in position without any force or tension. There must be no muscular movement of the neck. It is the swaying of the shoulders that takes the head from one position to another. Drop right shoulder and lift left, allowing head to drop to right. Back slowly to position. Of course all the muscles of the face must be completely relaxed.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Little Woman.
Rumor has it that once again the small woman is to be the "fashion." It is so long since the time when the petite was not rather a stigma than otherwise that the really small people of my acquaintance find it is anything but an easy matter to believe that a "good time" is really coming to them. Time was when the fashionable novelists of the day created heroines who were all fairy-like beings with infinitesimal waists and impossible hands and feet; and long before their day the poet Suckling had immortalized a certain little bride fashioned on a miniature plan which greatly commended itself to him.

But the reign of the "daughter of the gods, divinely tall"—the girl who can go round the links twice in the morning, who can play tennis all the afternoon, and dance all the evening—has had so long a reign that her smaller sisters had grown quite accustomed to their eclipse. Perhaps, now that "little" women are to be the rage, we shall enjoy a period of fashions suited to set off her style of beauty, to the best advantage. Hitherto the difficulty of dressing both becomingly and fashionably if one's height did not reach the essential five feet seven inches has proved a terrible problem, the solution of which defied all efforts.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Fashionable Skirt.
The skirt made with yoke is for the moment extremely fashionable, and the yoke may be plain, trimmed, shirred or of different material to the rest of the gown. A lace yoke so shaped as to be much narrower at the back than in front and made so that it fits in with a panel of the same lace, which covers the front breadth, or takes its place, is most effective, but the shirred yoke in wide or narrow cords, as is the more becoming, is also extremely effective. Some of the veiling and crepe de chine gowns have the yoke only at the sides and back and a perfectly plain front breadth. Then below the yoke, at the sides and back, the skirt is in accordance or wide pleats. The fashion is thought to make the hips look smaller, but it is necessary to arrange the shirrings most carefully, so there shall not be a particle of material more than is required on the hips and there must always be the effect of the yoke being shorter at the back than in front.

Not particularly new, but always effective, is the skirt with the hand-tucked yoke, in bias effect, and then below the yoke the breadths alternate

Farm Topics

GROWTH OF YOUNG STOCK.

Variety of food gives more rapid growth to young stock and increases the flow of milk of the dams. All kinds of stock are more thrifty when they are not confined to one or two articles of food.

SUCCESS WITH SHEEP.

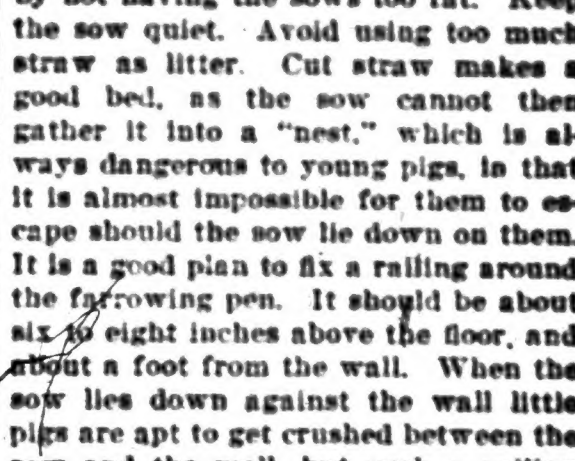

What are the essentials of thrift? I say good feed, water, shelter and close attention of the shepherd, says Jacob Ziegler, in The Cultivator. It is the worst possible practice to allow the sheep to fall away in flesh as the grass fails in the autumn. The increasing wool conceals the shrinking carcass, much to the disappointment of the careless stockmaster. Better confine them in the yard than to allow them to ramble about in some field in search of food which furnishes a little green feed, but too light to be of any real value.

THE BROOD SOW.

A little forethought in providing proper accommodation for the brood sow pays exceedingly well. Clumsy sows lying on and killing their young are common experiences on the farm, and seriously reduce the profits. A large measure of this may be avoided by not having the sows too fat. Keep the sow quiet. Avoid using too much straw as litter. Cut straw makes a good bed, as the sow cannot then gather it into a "nest," which is always dangerous to young pigs, in that it is almost impossible for them to escape should the sow lie down on them. It is a good plan to fix a railing around the farrowing pen. It should be about six or eight inches above the floor, and about a foot from the wall. When the sow lies down against the wall little pigs are apt to get crushed between the sow and the wall, but such a railing prevents this, and allows the young porker to escape.

CHEAP CHICKEN COOP.

A very simple and cheap coop for hen and chickens is shown in the accompanying sketch. Take a box measuring about eighteen by twenty-four inches and from fourteen to eighteen in height. Remove all boards from top of box, also about twelve inches on one of the sides from top and down. Then take laths and nail them into the side of box where boards have been removed, leaving openings three inches apart between laths to let the little chicks get in and out. Turn the box upside down, and place the hen and chicks under it. See that it is placed upon level and a little elevated ground, so that water will not flow into it when it rains. Such a coop is handy, and it will hardly cost you more than a few minutes of work to make it.—Lewis Olsen, in The Epitome.

DUST BATHS.

In summer, as well as in winter, hens greatly appreciate a dust bath. When they have their full liberty they generally scratch and scratch in a dry hedge-corner till they make dust baths for themselves, but those in confinement must have it supplied. Any dry dust does; road dust, dry sand, sifted ashes. There should be a heap of it put in the run, or anywhere except under the poultry-house; the raised-floor house is no longer popular, as the space beneath is always wet and cold. The dust bath should be in the sun, but needs, of course, shelter from rain. It is well to mix a little sulphur in the dust. It amounts to cruelty to deny fowls a dust bath, even when they are free from lice, as they obviously enjoy it so much. It indirectly improves the egg yield, for it affords them occupation and keeps them in health. Chickens from a week old enjoy a dust bath if they can have it; nothing keeps lice away more, and yet many poultry-keepers give their chickens no opportunity to keep themselves free of these pests.

DON'T BLAME THE COW.

Is the cow to blame because she is thin in flesh and gives little milk? The man who says this is true ought to be ashamed of himself. He knows well enough that his own carelessness or wilful negligence has brought the cow where she is. The cow has no way of keeping up flesh except through the feed you and I give her. If any one is to be found fault with, it is the master.

Because she kicks or steps about when you are milking? Don't say "Yes" to this until you have stopped to inquire whether or not you are doing your part as you should. Any cow that is really alive would feel like showing her opinion of the man who pinches, pulls, hauls and twists her as some do while milking. Be fair with the cow and she will be fair with you.

Because the butter will not come? I have known some who would fearfully because "that cow's milk is to blame" for her master being compelled to churn an hour or two at a time. It is about time such men learned the first principles of butter-making. Then they will see that last of all the cow should be held accountable for the kind or quality of the butter produced or the length of time taken to make it. In short, instead of kicking the cow, most of us have better grounds for taking a day off with our own selves, and see if we are not the ones that need the punishment.—Farmer Vincent, in Farm Journal.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Washing-Cleaning House Work.
The cleaning of the upper surface of large windows sometimes presents a problem, standing on a step ladder, and in this position it is by no means easy to reach the glass well.

A very simple contrivance will greatly lessen the labor of the window cleaner and enables her to stand firmly on the floor all the time. It is made from an old broom, which is no longer in the state to be of any use for sweeping. Cut off what portion remains, leaving the wood bare. On the left end nail firmly a strong flat piece of board about a foot long and eight inches wide. This should then be covered with two or three thicknesses of heavy flannel, fastened to it by the string, which can easily be taken out when over the flannel has to be removed. The same sort of contrivance is useful for polishing the windows, but for this purpose wash leather or brass should be drawn over the padding of flannel.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

To Clean Window Sills.
The sills and these should be swept by which the summer dirt collects is particularly annoying if handled according to the usual method, as some special wash must be devised for removing dirt, or the sills are highly recommended, but a Brooklyn young woman has discovered one way to handle a window shawl satisfactorily. She made a shawl with warm water and white soap, adding a little ammonia, and rubbed the shawl gently around in this, repeating, but never lifting the mass of wool. A large pan was utilized for the washing process, and when the suds were poured off fresh rinsing water was added twice. After the second rinsing every possible drop of moisture was squeezed out of the shawl, and the pan set over the warming oven of the range. The shawl was turned over and over until perfectly dry, when it looked good as new.—Brooklyn Eagle.

How to Wash and Squeeze Socks.
The directions for washing are the same for all small birds. Bear in mind, however, that for the extremely small ones a very hot, bright fire is needed, as the birds should be dry immediately; consequently, the time required for broiling them is very brief. Squeeze and wipe the birds, then fill down the middle of the back, remove the contents, pound the birds lightly, to flatten the breastbone, and wipe thoroughly with a damp, clean towel, taking care that everything is removed and the birds left perfectly clean for cooking; season with salt and pepper, rub thoroughly with soft butter and dredge with flour. For squabs or quail about ten minutes are required for broiling. Smaller birds require less time.

To roast birds, draw and wash quickly, wipe dry, season with salt and pepper, and put a slice of pork on the breast; put the birds in a shallow pan in a hot oven, and bake for fifteen or twenty minutes. Partridges require forty minutes. Serve with currant jelly and with brown sauce, which is made in the following way: One pint of milk, one half cup of fine bread crumbs, two tablespoons of chopped onion, one tablespoon of butter, one-half tablespoon of salt, one-third of a cup of white pepper, two-thirds of a cup of cream, one-half cup of butter, and one-half cup of flour. NINE ARE DEAD; SEVEN INJURED

In Frightful Plunge of Southern Train Through a Trestle.

SCENE A HORRIBLE ONE

Most of the Victims Were Postal Clerks.
In-Fated Fast Mail Suffers Disaster for Third Time Within the Year.

While running at a high rate of speed, No. 97, the Southern railway's southbound fast mail train, jumped from a trestle 75 feet high, half a mile north of Danville, Va., Sunday afternoon at 2:50 o'clock and was almost demolished. Of the crew of sixteen men on the train, eight were killed and seven injured, and one was unhurt.

The known dead are: James A. Brodie, engineer; J. Thomas Blair, conductor; A. G. Clapp, fireman; John L. Thompson, postal clerk; W. T. Chambers, postal clerk; D. T. Flory, postal clerk; P. N. Ardant, postal clerk; S. J. Moody, bagman; twelve-year-old boy, son of Postal Clerk Thompson.

The injured are: Louis W. Spiera, Frank E. Brooks, Percival Indemeyer, Charles E. Reames, Jennings J. Dunlop, M. C. Maupin, J. Harrison Thompson, all of whom are postal clerks.

All of the injured men are seriously hurt and are in the hospital in Danville. The recovery of Mail Clerk Spiera is not expected, and other clerks are thought to have received mortal injuries.

The trestle where the accident occurred is 500 feet long and is located on a sharp curve. Engineer Brodie was a new man on that division of the Southern, and it is said that he came to the curve at a very high rate of speed.

The engine had gone only about 50 feet on the trestle when it sprang from the track, carrying with it four mail cars and an express car. The trestle, a wooden structure, also gave way for a space of 50 feet.

Cars Torn To Pieces.

At the foot of the trestle in a shallow branch with a rocky bottom. Striking this the engine and cars were reduced to a mass of twisted iron and steel and pieces of splintered wood. As the cars went down they touched the sides of the Riverside cotton mill, which is very close to the trestle.

All the dead men were killed instantly, it is thought, and all were greatly mutilated.

Several thousand people were soon at the scene of the wreck and removed the bodies from the debris. No one on any of the cars had made an effort to jump and the bodies of all those killed were found in the wreckage of the different cars to which they belonged. Some of the bodies were crushed to a ghastly degree.

It seemed miraculous that any one should have escaped, for each car falling with the engine bounded from it and completely collapsed after striking the rocks at the foot of the trestle.

All unofficial opinions that have been ascertained agree in giving only one cause for the wreck—the high speed of the train on the sharp curve. No. 97 was running about an hour behind time; it is thought that the engineer being unfamiliar with the road, did not take into consideration the danger of coming on the curve with such great velocity.

The mail bags in all the mail cars were torn open and the letters and packages were scattered, but it is believed none is lost. Fire which appeared in the wreckage shortly after it occurred was quickly extinguished by the Danville fire department.

In less than 10 minutes the most of the Southern and it is the third time that the fast mail has been almost entirely demolished.

Within the last twelve months the same train ran into a large rock on the track near Lexington, N. C., the engine ruined, cars gutted and several lives were lost.

A few months ago the fast mail struck a freight train head on near Charlotte, N. C., and was again almost demolished.

STORM COUNCHED RED FIFE.

Chicago's Conflagration Celebration Marred
by Heavy Downpour of Rain.

The centennial celebration of the founding of Chicago was formally opened Saturday night when a ton or two of red fire powder was burned on the street corners, in an attempt to give a realistic imitation of the great Chicago fire.

The conflagration was not exactly the success hoped for, because of a heavy storm, which prevailed throughout the time for the burning of the red fire.

It seems that the teachers of France and England are also striving to cement the union between the two countries. The National Union of Teachers in London has received invitations from the French Society of Schoolmasters and Schoolmistresses, and from the Association des Anciens Elèves, the first to a conference at Marseilles, and the second to one at Lille. The British organization has announced that it will be represented by four of its most distinguished members.

AT BEIRUT SHIPS STAY.

Admiral Cotton Will Not Withdraw His Fleet Yet Awhile, Though All Is Now Quiet.

Withdrawal of the American war ships from Beirut seems unlikely for the present, in view of a cablegram received at the state department Saturday from Minister Leischman, at Constantinople, stating that although his advisers from Beirut indicate that the situation is quiet just now, nothing like permanent order has been established.

It is indicated in Mr. Leischman's cablegram that the departure of the war ships might be the occasion for a renewal of the riots. This confirms the opinion held by state department officials in Washington that the quiet at Beirut is due directly to the presence of American war ships off that port.

Minister Leischman adds that the new governor at Beirut is actively inaugurating reforms there, but that it is not yet certain he will be able to handle the situation.

Fear Admiral Cotton cables the navy department, under date of Beirut September 25, that Beirut is quiet and that the case of the American consul is still pending.

Slaughtering Still Goes On.
News comes from Monastir, Macedonia, that snow has fallen on the higher mountain ranges and the refugees must either leave their hiding places or suffer the greatest hardships.

The Turkish troops continue to slaughter refugees who return to their former homes, at the invitation of the government, who promised protection. Fourteen were massacred near the village of Zlatan. One of them survived his wounds. The refugee women discovered the bodies and carried the survivor before the lieutenant governor of Reana, who refused to hear their story.

The rumors current that Bulgaria would send an ultimatum to Turkey setting forth that unless satisfactory assurances were received that the Ottoman troops would be withdrawn immediately from the Bulgarian frontier, Bulgaria would forthwith mobilize her whole army, were caused by the mobilization of a regiment of engineers.

The Bulgarian war office has received information that in the event of hostilities the Turks will make a dash and endeavor to seize the Shipka Pass, against which contingency strong Bulgarian forces are now held in readiness.

EIGHT NEGROES SOLD INTO SLAVERY.

Lured Aboard Russian Ship at Sapelo and Landed at English Port.

Lured aboard a tugboat at Savannah, Ga., by means of false promises of easy and remunerative employment, carried to Sapelo, Island, and sold to the master of the Russian bark Alice, on which they made the voyage across the Atlantic and were finally discharged at Bristol, England, without a cent, is the story that eight Savannah negroes have sworn to before United States Consul Orin A. Lathrop, at Bristol. Their alleged sale into involuntary servitude is the offense charged against Harry Olsen and Jack Johnson in eight warrants based upon affidavits made by Assistant District Attorney Alexander Akerman and issued by United States Commissioner Ryals at Savannah, Saturday afternoon.

On these warrants the arrest of the defendants was effected. Olsen, a local shipping agent, is now under bond to answer a similar charge in the cases of Joe Rucker and John Seage, two boys who, it is alleged, were shipped aboard a British ship some time ago.

Johnson is a negro who is said, under Olsen's guidance, to have carried out the plan which placed the unlucky members of his race aboard the Alice.

The arrival and discharge of the negroes at the British port, destitute and dependent for daily necessities upon the charities of the townspeople, created a decided stir, it is said.

ENORMOUS SHORTAGE OF TEXAS CROP.
According to the Houston Post State War
by $3,500,000 Bales.

The Houston Post publishes a report showing that great damage has been done to cotton over the state by the boll weevil, the boll worm, the sharp-shooter and dry weather.

The estimate of the probable crop, based on the reports from country correspondents, is placed at 2,500,000, provided that there is a late frost.

The regular estimate six weeks ago was 6,000,000 bales.

It is stated that there is absolutely no chance for a "top" or second crop.

And I believe if we did win it, it would not stay on our side more than a year."

According to the Triouna, Plus X on receiving the abbot of the celebrated monastery of Monte Cassini, in the Campania, said: "We shall soon meet, most Reverend Father, at Monte Cassini." Theodore Roosevelt is the first president for many years to write his own messages and speeches. It is usually supposed that the words of a ruler are his own and his acts the acts of his ministers, but as a rule the speeches of emperors, kings and presidents are composed by their ministers, or at least the material is furnished them. This is the case with every sovereign in Europe except Wilhelm of Germany, who, like Mr. Roosevelt, never allows anybody to put words into his mouth, although he often has several accomplished gentlemen to collect facts and statistics for him. The messages of the presidents are usually composites constructed by the several cabinet officers. Mr. Adee, second assistant secretary of state, has written the foreign affairs of the president's message every year for a quarter of a century until last year, and his copy has been usually accepted with very few changes. Last year it went into the waste basket, although the president took many ideas from it. Ordinarily members of the cabinet furnish contributions about the matters which come under their jurisdiction, but that plan was abandoned when the present occupant of the white house sent his first message to congress in December, 1901, and to this day he has continued to prepare his own speeches, as he prepares his own speeches, and it costs him a great deal of labor.

Unless differences between the Colombian government and the Central and South American Telegraph company are adjusted by October 1 it is probable that the company will close its office at Buena Ventura, which operates the Colombian end of the cable. The diploma is conferred solely on the examination, no specified previous work being required, the candidates simply appearing before the examining board at the appointed time and answering whatever questions are put, to the best of their ability. An N. D. A. National Diploma in Dairying, is also conferred by the two societies. The propriety of calling this diploma national is now being discussed by British agriculturists, and the general opinion seems to be that unless the Government in some way directly overrules and sanctions the degree the word national is not justified or appropriate.

FILTHY MECCA.

The Holy City is the Dirtiest Spot in All Islam.

Mecca, the holy city of the faith, is called by many names. Some call it "the Mother of Purity," "the Citadel of Arabia," "the Holy Mosque." Others speak of it as "the Mother of Compassion," "the Supreme Sanctity," "the Guardian Angel of Islam." The devout never utter the word Mecca without adding to it some adjective of praise, such as "the blessed," "the exalted," "the great," "the highly esteemed," and so on. The town itself is about two miles in length and one mile in breadth.

The dirtiest the pilgrim keeps himself the more respected he is as a pious Moslem. Consequently Mecca, being as it is the most sacred city of the faith, is literally the filthiest in Islam. The most important streets measure about ten yards in width. The rest are mere lanes, wonderfully and picturesquely crooked and some six feet wide. The streets were crowded with tents, camels, mules, asses, horses, pariah dogs and a motley crowd of pilgrims, unspeakably disheveled and unwashed, while the lanes were absolutely filled with every kind of offal and refuse. Mecca, which lies in a hollow, would be a regular cesspool were it not for the pariah dogs, lean, snarling brutes of a bright yellowish color, that serve the purpose of scavengers, and the fierce, dry, Arabian sun that is the sole sanitary inspector in the country. The dirt dogs make at night is indescribable. A pack of jackals would be quiet in comparison.

Hair Needs Exercise.

One reason why so many men are bald, according to a foreign medical journal, is because they allow their hair to die through want of exercise. Under the skin which covers the head are several muscles, it explains, and these are never stirred into activity, the result being that they do not perform their proper function, and consequently the hair is insufficiently nourished and the hair gradually dies. "Women," it continues, "do not become bald, and the reason is because they spend much more time combing and arranging their hair than men do. During this operation the skin on the head is stirred into activity, and as a result the muscles remain active and the hair flourishes." "It is evident, therefore, that the best way to prevent baldness is to rub the skin frequently and vigorously, for unless this is done the muscles will be unable to supply it with the proper amount of nourishment."

John Randolph's Appearance. Washington Irving when secretary of legation in London was much amused at the rollicking good humor with which William IV. began his reign, and he once tried to give a lesson in dignity to the Duke of Sussex. He had to accompany an eccentric friend of meager and limping figure, who persisted in wearing an extraordinary nondescript garb instead of the prescribed court dress to St. James'. The ushers demurred; the foreign minister smiled. The Duke of Sussex stopped Irving as he passed and whispered, moving his thumb jerkily up and down, "Who's your friend Hoky Poky?" "That, sir," replied Irving emphatically, "is John Randolph, United States minister to Russia and one of the most distinguished orators of America." It was all in vain. Some time afterward Irving was dining with the duke, whose first laughing inquiry was, "And how is our friend Hoky Poky?"—Temple Bar.

Badly Expressed. The builder of a church on returning thanks for the toast of his health which had been proposed remarked: "I fancy I am more fitted for the scaffold than for public speaking."

THE Legislature adjourned last Saturday and is generally acknowledged to have been the most meritorious legislature that the State has known in the last quarter of a century.

A NOVEL sight was witnessed in Clanton Wednesday afternoon.
Two automobiles carrying a party of ladies and gentlemen arrived in town at 4:30 o'clock. They had left Birmingham at 8 a.m., and were en route to Prattville, expecting to reach there some time the same night. They had found the roads pretty dusty, but had enjoyed a very pleasant run.

ENTERPRISING merchants and business men appreciate the importance of frequently calling the attention of the public, through a reputable newspaper, to that which they have to dispose of. Among the changes in our advertisements this week we call your attention to C. R. Mullins, insurance and sewing machines, Mrs. H. Touro, the bargain house, and a new one from W. Kanter & Bfo., dry goods.
Live merchants recognize a live medium.

LOCAL industries are the best paying of all investments; the money invested is kept at home, the dividends are paid at home, the workpeople are paid and spend their money at home, consequently home industries pay both coming and going. The following is taken from the Age-Herald, commenting upon some remarks of the Talladega News-Reporter:

Alabama does not need any finer object lesson than Talladega presents. "It not only," says the News-Reporter, "has its own mills, built with its own capital, employing its own labor and keeping their dividends at home, but it finds them profitable, and this induces it to reach out in other directions for safe and profitable industries at home. The fact is, home industries are the most profitable of all industries. They not only feed labor, but they leave dividends at home."

This does not leave anything to be said. Talladega has three cotton mills, all its own, and all doing well and now is preparing to establish three factories belonging to other industrial lines. The industrial spirit permeates Talladega, and it knows the value of mills, both in the respect of general prosperity and in the respect of dividends dispersed at home. If every Alabama town containing less than 10,000 people would send a commission to study the Talladega situation, a great industrial development throughout the state would soon follow. What Talladega has done every other county town or trade center could do, and pilgrimages to Talladega should become an Alabama fashion. Talladega knows how to build mills on the installment plan, and that plan is capable of great extension in this state.

DIED, Monday, at his home near Mahan's mill, Jud Maddox, aged 18, son of Jesse A. Maddox. He had been sick but a few days. The funeral took place Tuesday at the Maddox family graveyard. He was a young man well liked and respected.

Anniston, Ala., Oct. 3, 1903
Editor Banner, Clanton, Ala.
Dear Sir:—I herewith enclose of this service will be of distinct benefit for the people along the

A Perfect Painless Pill is the one that will cleanse the system, set the liver to action, to remove bile, clear complexion, cure headache and leave a good taste in the mouth. The famous little pills for doing such work pleasantly and effectually are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Bob Moore, of Lafayette, Ind., says: "All other pills I have used give gripe and sickness, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers are simply perfect." Sold by Hopkins

The Farm Home versus the Landed Estate

To perpetuate our unrivaled system of medium sized farms, as compared with very small farms inhabited by mere peasants, or with very large farms owned by the wealthy and worked by hired servants, our government could well afford to continue making vast expenditures.
Heretofore, its expenditures for this purpose have been in the form of free lands under the homestead laws.
Henceforth they must be in the form of special education for the common farmer. Unforeseen financial chag-es might tend to greatly increase the percentage of Uncle Sam's acres owned by "landlords." Reducing the proportion of that class who manage and "work" lands which they own lowers the average standards of country wages and country living. The principal reason why the common farmers now hold the land is because, by uniting their capital, their labor, and their brains with the making of a permanent family home, they can pay so much for the land that the capitalist cannot afford to own it for leasing, or to "run" it at a gain's-length without pauper labor. Remuneration in the form of independent homes for families is not secured by the absent landlord and by only a few of the inhabitants of the large estate conducted by the owner. Whenever other industries lag, capital seeks investment in landed estates, and once estates with expensive central buildings are developed, it is, indeed, very difficult to break them up into smaller holdings. European states help to hold as peasants a large class of people who do not like in ability, as shown by the rapidity with which they rise when placed on free soil in America.

Since the farmer and farm homemaker on the medium-sized farm must meet sharp competition, special education for the mass of farmers becomes a matter of grave economic and civic as well as of educational importance—a broad State and national problem. Our modest farm homes stand as our strongest political bulwark. Homes on farms worked by the owners are the best places to breed vigorous people alike for country and city. Our educational scheme is not doing all it might to build up our country life, and the times are ripe for a natural and somewhat radical change. We need to evolve a branch of our educational system which shall be especially helpful in building up our farm homes, our farming and our rural affairs, and country life generally. The movement is well started, and some of the leading forces already operating need only to be correlated to develop a unified scheme.—From "Our Farmer Youth and the Public Schools," by Prof.
Willet M. Hays, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for October.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 5, 1903
There is considerable incandescence here over the fact that the plutocratic press of the country is especially enamored on the remark made by Gov.
Durbin, of Indiana, the other day,
"the man who violently assails, by word or deed, the laws of the country such as ours commits a crime not only of infamy but of insanity."
The opinion exists here that the above comes with rather poor grace from Gov. Durbin, who has refused to honor the requisition of the State of Kentucky for one of the men accused of the murder of Gov. Gobel, when the law and the constitution requires the perpetrators of such crimes to be delivered up to justice.
Is he hardly a fit man to read lectures on what is right and wrong?
It is admitted that to violently assail a law that is robbing the people of the United States, such as the Dingley tariff law, is a crime to the trust magnates who profit by it. To denounce the laws in several states that tax the small home and the little personal property of the poor man on its full value, and let the corporations and the millionaires off with only paying 20 or 30 per cent, is insanity according to Hanna and the Republican leaders in Ohio.
To all such the law of their own making is too sacred to be tampered with, and Gov. Durbin only echoes the cry of the trusts and corporations, who, in most cases, have paid for the unrighteous laws they hold so sacred. The most of the laws passed recently have been passed by Republicans, and the shoe is beginning to pinch when the people are crying out against them, and hence the howl by the governor of Indisana, who stands for everything the trusts demand. If the people of Indiana like that sort of thing and that sort of governor, they may continue to worship their own fetish, and the thinking people of this country will draw their own conclusions concerning the mental condition of Indiana's population.

The recent action of the prominent Republicans of the country make it clear that all the talk indulged in by some of their leaders about tariff reform and revision is the merest "guff." The lowaidea was rampant some time ago, and Governor Cummins of that State was standing upon his hind legs and wildly waving his ears and howling for some measure of relief from the exactions of the tariff wall, and demanding it at once. He now is cooling like a sucking dove, as mild as a May morn, and he says that the revision should not be made in the face of a national campaign, but that we should wait until 1905 before attempting anything like a tariff revision. This should make it as gross to the sense as the sun at noonday that unless the people of the country unhorse the Republican party they will wait until the trumpet of the angel Gabriel blows before they will obtain relief from the clutch of the corporations. It is up to the people to do a little thinking.

The idea has just begun to percolate through the hair of the Republicans that there is going to be an investigation by Congress of the naastiness in the Postoffice Department, or at least it will be up to them to refuse to have one. The Democrats are determined to press the matter and the responsible party for the refusal will be the Republicans. If they refuse all will know the reason why. If they do not, then there will be an attempt to whitewash somebody and something, but the Democratic members of the committee will come out with some powerful good campaign material.
The Republican party is between the devil and the deep sea.

There seems to be a gradually intensifying desire on the part of many people in the country and especially the men of prominence who visit this city, to know exactly what it was that happened to Mr. Magelsen, our vice consul to Beirut.
Thus far not a morsel of information has been vouchsafed from any quarter. Here we are jumping on the collar of a nation with which we are supposed to be on amicable terms, yet no one seems to know why the demonstration was made.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

Do Good—It Pays.
A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists, Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

CLANTON DEMOCRATIC CLUB

The regular meeting of the Clanton Democratic Club last Friday night was a very interesting one.
A discussion was started on "Why every man in Clanton should be a Democrat," and a lively debate ensued which continued all the evening. Many reasons were adduced and a variety of new ideas brought forth, but it was discovered the subject was far too big to be disposed of in one evening, so it was resolved to continue the debate to the next meeting, to be held on Friday night, October 16, when everybody is invited to participate, pro or con. It will be an open meeting, free to all, and as the question to be discussed is a big one a lively debate is expected.
Let everybody come and enjoy it.

He Learned A Great Truth

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grip; that it coun-teracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists, Clanton, A.
Horn, Thorsby.

TWO CASES OF TYPHUS.

Story of a Turkish Doctor and a Modified Prescription.

Mr. Oscanian in his book, "The Sultan and His People," says that a Turkish physician was called to visit a man who was very ill of typhus fever. The doctor considered the case hopeless, but prescribed for the patient and took his leave. The next day, in passing by, he inquired of a servant at the door if his master was dead.

"Dead!" was the reply. "No, he is much better."

The doctor hastened upstairs to obtain the solution of the miracle.

"Why," said the convalescent, "I was consumed with thirst, and I drank a painful of the juice of pickled cabbage."

"Wonderful!" quoth the doctor, and out came the tablets, on which he made this inscription: "Cured of typhus fever, Mehemed Agha, an upholsterer, by drinking a painful of pickled cabbage juice."

Soon after the doctor was called to another patient, a yashikgee, or dealer in embroidered handkerchiefs, who was suffering from the same malady. He forthwith prescribed "a painful of pickled cabbage juice."

On calling the next day to congratulate his patient on his recovery he was astonished to be told that the man was dead.

In his bewilderment at these phenomena he came to the safe conclusion and duly noted it in his memoranda that "although in cases of typhus fever pickled cabbage juice is an efficient remedy it is not to be used unless the patient be by profession an upholsterer."

He Wouldn't Split.

The tramp in the green goggles stood before the door.

"Yes," said the housewife kindly: "you can have a good meal if you split that wood."

"Madam," said the tramp in a precise grammatical manner, "I was born and raised in Boston— But stop, shall I tell you the sad, sad story of my life?"

"Yes, yes."

"When a youth in Boston, I was disinherited for splitting an infinitive, and since then (his voice broke) I have vowed never to split anything, not even the wood!"

"Stick 'im, Tiger!"—Baltimore Herald.

The Royal Color.

Purple has always been considered the royal color. The ill-fated Charles I. was, however, at his own desire, crowned in a robe of white. Although he was seriously reminded that of the two exceptions to this rule, Richard II. and Henry VI., who wore white satin robes at their coronations, both had come to a violent end, one at Pontefract castle and one in the Tower. Charles I. was resolute in his decision, and, when, twenty-three years afterward, almost to a day, his body was conveyed to its grave through a heavy shower, the superstitious could not help remarking that the third "white king" had suffered a violent death.

A Case of Typhus Fever. The patient was cured by the use of the following medicine.

Hawaii's Rippling Language.

The language of the Hawaiian Islands, as every one knows, abounds in vowels and therefore ripples deliciously in the mouth. It is only necessary to pronounce such names as Honolulu, Oahu, Kilauea, Hilo, Mauna Loa, Kamaehameha and Liliuokalani to discover this. A young Presbyterian clergyman of Brooklyn who visited the islands two or three years ago and prepared a lecture on them on his return declared that there was only one place on the islands which possessed a name lacking in euphony. That place was Specklesville. This euphony of the Hawaiian tongue was productive of one of the jokes of his lecture. The first time he gave it he remarked incidentally that he "took the steamer Wally-wally" to go to the town of Wally-wally. A laugh followed the remark, and thereafter he always included this phrase in his lecture. It invariably produced the same result when used.—New York Tribune.

The Apology Was Still Worse.

A philanthropic lady visited the asylum at Kingston, Canada, says Brooklyn Life, and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man particularly gained her compassion.

"And how long have you been here, my man?" she inquired.

"Twelve years," was the answer.

"Do they treat you well?"

"Yes."

"Do they feed you well?"

"Yes."

After addressing a few more questions to him the visitor passed on. She noticed a broad and broadening smile on the face of her attendant and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than Dr. Clark, the superintendent. She hurried back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am very sorry, Dr. Clark. I will never be governed by appearances again."

MAN ON THE CORNER
The hunter is to be looking long after night's have fallen, and the gay possum is having a time of it. A dark night, and dogs, and possums plenty there is lots of fun in hunting noosed, long-tailed critter.
seem to be plentiful just now, you'll be in a short time if the
have been lately. There is no how many Hugh Foshee
while Hugh Simpson
an expert in 'possum
The other night Jim was triumphantly stag-
home, carrying a small tree, the branches of which peered glimmering eyes of his captive, Monday night Marshal Tom had placed one under arrest, and convicted him, and sen-
him to the pot next day.

Taking a walk the other afternoon around the western part of Clanton, I was surprised to find greatly that part of the town growing. In every direction new houses have been built, and the course of erection, new streets have been opened up and there is evidence of the prosperity of Clanton to be seen there than in any other part of the town. The census of 1900 says Clanton had only a total population of 623, and we were to take a town census it would be found that the population of the town
the census returns of 1900, the total population of the town is well ahead of 1000.

We told you last week two automobiles were in town Wednesday evening, and were attracting considerable attention. Saturday morning they were here again on their return trip from Prattville to Birmingham, and were again the center of attraction. The occupants of the duty traveled stained appearance, but were enjoying their trip.
The motive power was gasoline, and the chauffeurs were evidently skillful in the handling of their horse-carriages.

Were you ever hoodooed? I don't know what it is, but I think there has put a hoodoo on me.
This week everything will go wrong, and while I do my best to keep things straight, they just naturally won't go that way, and it will be a hoodoo—no other way to account for it. When you get hood-ooed life is not worth living, you lose your nerve and make things unpleasant all around, and everything you attempt to do goes wrong. It is hard to be hoodooed and the best thing to do is to get rid of it just as fast as you possibly can. No more hoodoo for me.

To-morrow (Friday) night, at the court house, the debate opened the last meeting of the Clanton Democratic Club is to be continued, and the meeting is thrown open to all, and the subject is "Why every man in Clanton should be a Democrat," there should be a lively discussion. There are plenty of reasons why the white men of Clanton should be united in the Democratic party, but there may be some who think they can show why we should all be Republicans or $1.50 per day Socialists, and this is their opportunity to convince us. At all events the Club wishes the honesty of its convictions in the Democratic cause by inviting all comers to join in the debate. I trust the ladies will grace the occasion by their presence.

Cotton Picking.
On Tuesday morning, Oct. 6th, just as the autumn sun was showing his face above the eastern horizon, eight of J. L. Williams' boys, (they left one at home, he being too small to work), Alonza, Toi, Jerome, Leon, Ernest, Harvey, Macon and Greeley, met in Mr. B. Headley's field to pick cotton. The boys had not all worked together in some time, and decided they would pick cotton together just for fun. They said they had it to do.

People are getting along very by their automobiles. Some of the darkeys got behind trees and climb-they did not know what to make of those strange machines running without horses. The Mungers have returned recently from touring

MAN ON THE CORNER

Monday morning a pretty party came driving into town and made straight for the house, where the services of Adams were brought into play to tie the knot which was to be united. The contracting party were Mr. L. B. Burmister and Miss Hester, both from the northern part of the county, the Autauga line. The bride was pretty, and the groom appeared as all grooms should, proud in the possession of a happy bride. Accompanying the couple were Misses Emma Barber, and Miss Ola Barber, all from Tusculum, and very smiling were they. "Happy the bride the sun shines on" will be the lives of the happy couple as bright as their day more.

Hopkins Drug store has sold the drug business to E. E. Upchurch, of Tusculum, whom we heartily welcome to town, and wish him prosper. He is a nice, pleasant gentleman and deserves to succeed. Dr. Upchurch will continue his medical practice, and will retain his office at the drug store as formerly.

Friday night was wet and rainy, and the consequence was the promised debate at the Democratic Club did not take place. It will, however, be held at the next meeting of the club. By the way, the Club numbers 200 members and is in very healthy condition.

Other Democratic clubs recently been organized, one at the Hill, Beat 11, and the other Mineral Springs, Beat 1. They start off under bright prospects, with enthusiastic members, and it will be but a time before Chilton county is as strong a Democratic stronghold as most counties in the state.

With sincere regret we bid adieu to Dr. Curry, who leaves us to go to New Decatur. During his stay in Clanton the Doctor has made many friends, and his wife has made many who are loath to have them go. Dr. Curry is a gentleman, a fine preacher and a fine Christian. Such men as he are the pillars of a community, and it is hard to find a place to fill the vacant place. Dr. Curry goes with Dr. Curry to his new home.

In Birmingham a few days ago I visited a friend lying in the St. Vincent's hospital, who was delighted to find such a doctor abroad for a sick man. The hospital is perched high up on a hill, with the free, fresh air of the mountains, bringing life and health to the convalescent, and keeping the building and its surroundings clean and everything spotlessly clean. A speck of dust to be seen anywhere. The wards are models of cleanliness, while the cheerful and kindly sisters, ministering to the helpless patients, add a feature to the scene. A person may well thank the fortune that finds him an invalid while sick and helpless, of an establishment as the St. Vincent's hospital.

Bethlehem.
The farmers of our community are all getting along very well picking cotton and some are gathering corn and some of them are sitting out on the side of the road watching for a man to come from town so they hear from the price of cotton.

We are glad to say that the infant child of Mr. R. N. Wilkins, who has been quite ill for some time, is improving.

Messrs. E. B. Popwel, W. J. Vinson, Joe Moore and John Beebleom attended the Association at Ebenezer church near Stanton Wednesday and Thursday and report a nice time. So we will close for this time and if this misses the waste basket we will come again.

Success to the Banner and all its readers. TWO OF THE BOYS.

Mulberry.
I thought I would write a few lines that all may know we are still in the land of the living. No deaths have occurred in our vicinity. Health of the people is good. Cotton picking is the order of the day. Corn is tolerably good.

Mr. J. C. Anderson's house took fire a few days ago and in trying to extinguish the flames Mr. Anderson fell and hurt himself badly, so much so an operation had to be performed. A physician from Thorsby and Dr. Cloughton of Maplesville was summoned. Dr. Cloughton performed the operation under most unfavorable circumstances. Dr. Cloughton is not only one of our best physicians but has proved himself to be a most skillful surgeon. Mr. Anderson is doing well, and doubtless will recover. Success to the Banner. ZANE.

IN MEMORIAM.
The Death Angel came to the home of our much beloved Brother and Sister Giles October 12, at one o'clock and called for little Hattie, who had been loaned to them for awhile. She had a good home with them, but God had a better one for her. She to early rest is gone; she to paradise has fled; God hath taken her away from their bosom to His own. She never shall return to them but they can go to her. So all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family. The writer of these lines was called on to hold the funeral services, assisted by W. A. Wood. B. H. VICKERS.

A PRETTY WEDDING
occurred last Thursday morning, 15th inst, at 9 o'clock at the home of Mr. J. W. Rice at Prattville, when Miss Kate Rice and Mr. R. P. Barnes were united in marriage. Rev. H. H. McNeel officiated in an impressive manner. Miss Kate is a charming young lady of Prattville and possesses those admirable traits of character which have won for her the love of all who know her. Mr. R. P. Barnes is a promising young man, a son of M. H. Barnes of West Chilton, and holds a responsible position with the Tisser Hardware Co., of Selma, where he has many friends. We join all the friends and relatives of this charming young couple in wishing and extending them a long and happy life, and congratulations are showered upon this charming young couple by all who know them. A FRIEND.

Lightwood.
A very beautiful and quiet marriage was celebrated at the home of Mrs. Lake, near this place, on Thursday night, Oct. 15, the contracting parties being Mr. W. M. Aldridge and Miss Annie Lake. Mr. Aldridge is a prosperous farmer and a fine citizen of Calera, and Miss Annie was one of Lightwood's most beautiful and charming daughters. They have many friends here who wish them a smooth sail over the sea of life. Mr. R. J. Lake and wife of Clanton were present at the marriage. A. A. C.

Paris' Eiffel Tower will stand for only a few years longer. A commission appointed to decide on the uses to which the Champ de Mars shall be put has ordered that the tower be torn down at the end of the concession, which expires in 1910.

The most highly situated monument in Germany will be that now being erected on the summit of the Zugspitze, in memory of Dr. Ennsenberger, the ill-fated member of the German South Sea expedition, who died in the Kerguelan Islands. The monument will be located at a height of 10,240 feet.

The college student who, crossed in love, languished, took poison, regretted it, swallowed some melted butter and was saved, ought to lift his hat to every cow he meets in the road henceforth.

The custom of the late Phil May, according to the Westminster Gazette, was to make his first sketch for a drawing with the utmost care, putting in all the details, light and shade, and so on. When that was finished, he proceeded to knock away the scaffold, as it were, and in the finished product there remained nothing but the absolutely essential lines of the picture. He reached his ends by the elimination of the superfluous pushed to its furthest limits, and the result liberally repaid the sacrifice of labor apparently entailed by the process.

German residents in Buenos Ayres are planning the organization of a union to comprise all people of German origin living in the Argentine Republic, such as Swiss, Dutch, Austrians and Scandinavians, for the purpose of protecting the rights and interests of members against unfair treatment by the Government. A similar league is to be formed in Brazil also, with the object of reviving the feeling of solidarity among the Germans, of preserving friendship with the mother country and especially of keeping up German schools.

Mr. Howells said in "Silas Lapham" that our civilization came mainly through books. Nothing could be truer, thinks the Woman's Home Companion. It is but a medium of culture that we get by open precept or by word of mouth. We absorb our ideas about life and our ideas for both art and life from books. This being the case, nothing is more important than the sort of books we read. We should see to it, above all, that they be healthy; above all, sane. Books which tend to pull down one's faith in life or in mankind are not for us. Sweetness and light is a thing to have in front of us. We want our civilization to tend toward these things, and we will do well to test our reading by them.

Chicago focused the eyes of the world on that great metropolis in 1893, and made it a conspicuous force. It may be, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan, that the St. Louis exposition will mark a turning in the stream of American industrial life, by which the seaboard influences, and advantages will be brought into the very heart of the continent, and the west given a new outlet and a larger communication with the rest of the world. Such a change would in time work a revolution in the west. It would at least modify the commanding position of the east. It would possibly cause a shifting of American civilization coincident with the change in the centre of our population.

A Question of Titles.

The City Treasurer of Edinburgh, Colonel Sir Robert Cranston, who has lately been knighted by King Edward, was called upon recently by a commercial traveler, who wished to see the colonel on business. As Sir Robert, like most of his associates, is of the Volunteer Corps, not of the regular army, the traveler's inquiry was for Mr. Cranston. Colonel Cranston, he was informed, was out.

"Oh, very well; can I see Mr. — then?" (mentioning another member of the firm).
"Major — is out, too."
"And is Mr. — out also?"
"I am sorry to say that Captain — has just left to attend a musketry class."
The exasperated traveler turned to go, when he was recalled and asked if he wished to leave any message.
"Well," he replied, "it's of no consequence, but you might just say, if you think of it, that Lord Wolsley looked in."

TEXT OF NEW STOCK LAW

No. 211.) AN ACT (H. 609.)

To authorize the court of county commissioners or board of revenue, or court of like jurisdiction, in the several counties of the state, to establish separate stock districts, and to cause elections to be held for the repeal of and regulation of same.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of Alabama, That the board of county commissioners or board of revenue, or court of like jurisdiction, be and hereby is constituted a court or board to supervise all stock laws in the respective counties, with full and complete authority to supervise and direct the holding of elections for establishing stock law districts in the respective counties, or parts thereof, and for holding elections for the purpose of repealing stock laws established in the respective counties, and to declare the results of such elections; provided, that this act shall not apply to incorporated cities and towns; to have power and authority to define what is a lawful fence or line between stock districts and non-stock law districts; to provide for building fences on lines of the district and to cause to be built a legal fence on lines between any county that allows stock to run at large, and on lines of the subdivision of the county that allows stock to run at large; to authorize the issuance of warrants or the county treasurer to pay for building line fences; when a county allows stock to run at large in a part thereof; to build and pay for the line fences between the stock law and non-stock law districts; provided, this act shall not be construed as repealing any local stock law heretofore enacted.

Sec. 2. Whenever a majority of the bona fide freeholders in any precinct in any county in Alabama, owning a freehold estate in such precinct, shall file with the board of revenue or court of county commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, of said county, a petition, in writing, stating that they desire an election in such precinct to ascertain whether or not a majority of the qualified electors of said precinct desire or favor a law prohibiting the running at large of stock in such precinct, and shall deposit with the probate judge of said county an amount of money sufficient to defray the expenses of holding such election, it shall be the duty of said board of revenue or court of county commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, to file said petition and indorse thereon an order that an election shall be held in such precinct on a day to be named in such order, not less than forty nor more than ninety days from the date of filing such petition; and it shall be the duty of said persons filing said petition to post in five public places in such precinct or five places in every precinct embraced in such petition, public notices in writing stating the time and place of the holding of such election and once a week for three consecutive weeks in some newspaper if one is published in the county.

Sec. 3. Said election shall be held on the day specified in said order and notice provided for in section two of this act; that managers of said election and a returning officer for each precinct embraced in such order shall be appointed by the board of revenue, or court of county commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, and said election shall be held in the same manner and under the same regulations as general elections; provided, that the ballots to be prepared by the Board of Revenue, or Court of County Commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, shall have printed thereon "Stock Law, Yes," "Stock Law, No." and provided the voter shall indicate his choice by marking a cross mark (x) in front of after the word "Stock Law, Yes," if in favor of prohibiting stock from running at large and by making a cross mark (x) in front of after the words "Stock Law, No." if opposed; and provided further, that both those in favor of a stock law and those opposed, shall be represented on the board of managers, clerks, and other managing officials.

Sec. 4. That the managers shall after closing the polls on the day of the election canvass and count the votes cast at such election and shall immediately after completing the same, make out and certify to the result, and shall post a copy thereof at the place of holding such election and shall seal up their certificate together with all ballots, poll lists and tally sheets and deliver to the returning officer. The returns shall be made by the returning officer, or officers, to the Board of Revenue, or Court of County Commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, on the day after said election and shall be on the second day after such election canvassed, and the result declared and certified by said Board of Revenue, or Court of County Commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, and file with the petition already filed in said office. Said certificate, with the endorsement thereon, and the certificates of results, shall be recorded in the office of said Board of Revenue, or Court of County Commissioners, or court of like jurisdiction, as the case may be, and the record thereof, or a certified copy thereof, or the original documents themselves, may be offered as evidence in any court and either the original, or the record, or a certified copy thereof, shall be proof that such election was held and the result thereof declared.

Sec. 5. All qualified electors shall be entitled to vote at such election, and none others.

Sec. 6. If a majority of the votes cast shall be for "Stock Law, Yes," it shall be unlawful for any stock to run at large in said precinct or precincts in which the election was held, and if a majority of the votes cast be "Stock Law, No," it shall not be unlawful for stock to run at large in such precinct; provided, that if such election is held in any precinct in which stock law already exists, and a majority of the votes cast be "Stock Law, No," the result of such election shall not take place until the lapse of six months after such election is held. And provided, further, that if the petition particularly describes certain kinds of stock, it shall be unlawful only for such kinds of stock so described to run at large. And provided, further, that if no election shall be had in any precinct, it shall not be unlawful for stock to run at large in such precinct not holding such election, if not otherwise contrary to existing laws.

Sec. 7. Such election may be contested on the same ground, and in the same manner before the probate judge as contests of election of constable are had before said probate judge.

Sec. 8. When an election has been held in any precinct under the provisions of this act, no other elections to determine the question of "Stock Law, Yes," or "Stock Law, No," shall be held therein until the lapse of one year from the time of holding such election; provided, no election shall be held under this act between the 1st day of March and the 1st day of December.

Sec. 9. When such election is held in any such precinct and a majority of the qualified electors therein cast their votes in favor of prohibiting stock from running at large in such precinct it shall be unlawful for the owner of any stock therein to knowingly, voluntarily, negligently or willfully permit any such animals to go at large on the premises of another, and the owner of such animals so permitted to run at large shall be liable to all damages done to the crops of such person or persons or fruit or shade trees, or ornamental shrubbery, to be recovered before any court of competent jurisdiction; and the judgment of the court when against the owner of any such stock so deprecating, shall be a lien, superior to all other liens, on the stock causing the injury, in addition to other execution and judgment liens provided by law.

Sec. 10. Any person who is the owner of, or in the lawful possession of any land, or the agent of the same, shall have the right to take possession of any animal if found at large and uncontrolled on the premises of such persons; and when so taken up shall notify personally the owner of such animal, when known, or by leaving such notice at the usual place of residence of such owner within twenty-four hours after seizure. If the owner is unknown, three days' notice of such seizure shall be given by posting up such written notice of such seizure, at all the signs and mills in such precinct, and if no gin or mill, then public places. The person so taking up such animal shall be entitled to possession of the same until the judgment which may be recovered in the preceding action is paid, together with the cost of the same, or until the same is sold under execution to satisfy said judgment, or until the damages which may be ascertained as hereinafter provided shall be paid.

Sec. 11. The owner of any animal which has been seized as provided in section 10 of this act, shall have the right to the possession of the same

Killed By a Live Wire.
A Birmingham man light which had broken its fastenings and fallen to the middle of the street, with the wires still attached, was touched by Derry Meeks, who was instantly killed. Mr. Meeks was 24 years old and leaves a wife and one child, besides two brothers, Andrew and J. D. Meeks, and an aged father in St. Clair county.

by paying such judgment and the cost thereof, or by paying the damages, fees and costs and expenses due on account of such seizure to the person so seizing such animal; but should the parties be unable to agree upon the amount of damages, fees, costs and expenses due, either party shall have the right to go before any justice of the peace within the beat where such stock is seized or taken up, or the nearest justice of the peace, should there be none within the beat where such stock is seized or taken up, and have the issue tried instantly or as soon as practicable, on a written statement or complaint setting forth in substance the facts of such seizure, first giving the opposite party one day's notice thereof, and said issue shall involve the validity of such seizure, and the amount of damages, fees, costs and expenses, under the provisions of this act, and the judgment of said justice of the peace shall have all of the force and effect of a judgment in any other case at law, and be executed in same manner as any other judgment of a justice court is enforced. That the owner of such property so taken up may give bond in double the value of the same payable to the person so taking up said property to be approved by the justice of the peace before whom the proceedings are pending conditioned to deliver such property to the constable or other legal officer having the writ of execution or order of sale issued on any judgment rendered in said cause within five days after such judgment to satisfy such judgment as to damages and costs. If upon the trial it is shown that the owner of said stock tendered to plaintiff a full and fair compensation for the damages before suit, then the suit shall be dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff; and on the trial of such issue, the party taking up such animal shall be the plaintiff in the action. In case the owner is unknown, the justice of the peace shall determine the validity of the seizure and the amount of damages, fees, costs and expenses under the provisions of this act from such evidence as shall be adduced before him. The fees and costs of the justice of the peace and constable in such trials shall be the same as the fees of such officers in other trials in justice court for like services. From any judgment rendered by any justice of the peace under the provisions of this act an appeal may be taken to the circuit court, or other court of like jurisdiction, in such county within five days from the rendition of such judgment in the same manner as appeals are taken from judgments of justices of the peace in other cases.

Sec. 12. If the owner or his agent shall not, under the provisions of this act, when he has made no bond as above provided reclaim his animal in twenty-four hours after the justice of the peace shall have ascertained such damages, then the justice of the peace shall order the same sold by the constable of the precinct, or by some one appointed to act as such, and the constable, or the person appointed to act as such, upon the making of such order, shall sell the same upon giving five days' notice of such sale by posting a written or printed notice at all the public signs and mills in the precinct in which such injury occurred, and if no gin or mill in such precinct, three public places, and out of the proceeds pay the expenses of such sale and of taking up and of the fees and damages due to the plaintiff and of making the order of sale, and the balance must be paid back to the owner of such animal, if known, and, if not known, then into the county treasury. The justice shall be entitled to 50 cents for making the order of sale, and the constable or person appointed to act as such, shall be entitled to one dollar for making such sale and posting the requisite notices.

Sec. 13. The term stock where it occurs in this act shall be held to include horses, mares, mules, jacks, jennets, colts, cows, calves, yearlings, bulls, oxen, sheep, goats, lambs, kids, hogs, shoats and pigs.

Sec. 15. The board of county commissioners, or board of revenue, or court of like jurisdiction, may suspend a stock law as herein provided for, for not exceeding five months, on a petition of a majority of land owners of any district.

Sec. 16. To secure an order for an election to repeal existing stock law or stock laws a petition signed by a majority of the land owners of the county or precinct or sub-division whose land lies outside of any incorporated city or town shall be necessary, said petition to be verified by affidavit of two or more, showing that petitioners, land owners of the county, district or precinct or sub-division; that their lands do not lie within an incorporated city or town. The truth of the allegations of such petition to be determined by competent evidence as in other cases in courts of law.

Sec. 17. That in counties having stock law now in force over the entire county, no election shall be held embracing less territory than the whole county.

SOLDIERS DROWNED.
Boat Capsized at Fort Morgan—Two Rescued.
Two soldiers stationed at Fort Morgan were drowned by the overturning of a yawl in which they and two other soldiers started from Fort Morgan last Saturday for Fort Gaines to relieve two soldiers stationed there. They are Eben Jeffries and William Rice, privates. The men hung on to the boat until late at night, when Jeffries became deranged and said he was going to strike out and swim to Fort Morgan. Despite the entreaties of his companions he released his hold and was drowned. Early Sunday morning Rice became exhausted, could no longer hold on and was drowned. Sergeants John Webber and Clarence Purcell hung on to the boat, which drifted to Sand Island.

Hurt By a Falling Tree.
While helping his father cut timber Thursday morning, Berney Baker, aged about eighteen, living near Center, was caught beneath a falling tree and perhaps fatally injured. Baker was helping his father cut the tree and when it began to fall he ran directly beneath it. The tree fell in a dense growth of underbrush and it was some time before Baker could be located. When finally extricated his right hip was crushed and he was otherwise severely injured.

Annie, the ten-year-old daughter of W. E. Byars, representative of Blount county in the last legislature, was probably fatally injured by a falling limb of a beech tree. Her skull was crushed in and there is little chance for her recovery.

KILLED BY THE CAR.
Jasper Merchant Thrown Under a Frisco Engine.
S. K. Birchfield, of Jasper, was run over and killed by a Frisco freight train Sunday. Birchfield was walking along the track and in stepping off in front of the train his foot slipped and he fell across the track, the engine and cars passing over both legs between the ankle and knees.

The surgeon for the Frisco there amputated both legs, but having lost so much blood before medical aid could be had, he died shortly after the operation. He was associated with M. Newburger in the mercantile business and was a member of several secret societies. He leaves a wife and several children.

DROWNED HERSELF AND BABY.
In a Water Tank of the Northern of Alabama Railway.
Mrs. Columbus Gentles, who lived near Haleyville, committed suicide by drowning herself and her two-month-old baby in Flat creek tank on the North Alabama railway. She had been acting peculiarly for some time, but nothing desperate was anticipated.

Friday night she took the infant and without a wrap walked a mile and after climbing a ladder 40 feet to the top of the tank, leaped into the water with her baby in her arms. Thus they were found Saturday morning by Ernest Williams, who has charge of the tank.

A Bid for the Bonds.
A Cincinnati firm has agreed to buy the remainder of the Jackson county turnpike bonds, $65,500, and the first installment of bonds for $10,600 has been shipped to them and the money for them is expected in a few days.

A meeting of the pike road commission will be held in Scottsboro on Friday, October 23, to decide whether or not to sell bonds to build five miles of pike in Paint Rock valley to connect the sections of road that are already built there. The bonds will be bought by Colonel Alex Clay, a prominent farmer of that county, provided the money is used for that purpose.

HOSPITAL FIRE

Grady Institute, Atlanta Partially Destroyed.

Two wards of the Grady hospital were destroyed by fire Saturday morning and only prompt and heroic action on the part of the hospital people, citizens, police and fire department prevented a holocaust beyond description.

The wards that burned were the negro wards, the male and female and in addition the building which was in the latter part of the hospital. The fire started in the kitchen of the male ward, and spread to the other wards. The men were taken to the hospital and the women to the Grady hospital. The fire was extinguished by the fire department.

Metal Shrapnel.
The report that a large quantity of metal shrapnel had been found in the ruins of the Grady hospital, has been confirmed. The shrapnel was found in the ruins of the male ward, and was believed to be of the type used in the war of 1898.

Annals of the Grady.
Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 23.—The Grady hospital, which was destroyed by fire Saturday morning, was one of the largest and best equipped hospitals in the South. It was founded in 1882, and has since that time been a landmark in the medical history of the city.

Two thousand five hundred of the typhoid fever cases which were reported in the city of Atlanta last year, were caused by the drinking of water from the city water supply.

There are interesting items in connection with the report. It shows that the bulk of shipments of all fruits was to the westward and that the export trade is slightly on the increase. 341 tons of iron, steel and cast iron piping having been sent to that trade.

Incidentally, it might be stated that the admission is made by all the railroads that the shipment of pig iron has been the greatest of any commodity in the month of September. The value of the shipment of pig iron has been $1,000,000.

Bank Failure.
Mexico furnished a sensation when it became known that the International Bank and Trust Company had suspended. The institution had branches in New York and San Francisco and at points throughout Mexico. The cause of the failure is said to be over lending.

The institution has advised that it has a paid up gold capital of $1,000,000 and deposits of about $1,500,000. The institution has been in existence for some four years and had until recently enjoyed public confidence.

A Successful Failure.
A fiendish attempt was made to wreck a passenger train yesterday on the Southern railway between Atlanta and Chattanooga. At a point near Dallas, Ga., a freight was through a trestle, resulting in the death of Fireman Roy Pagola.

Investigation developed that the plates had been pulled from the rails. The freight was not due to arrive at that time, hence the conclusion that the attempt was to wreck the passenger.

Two hundred and twenty five deaths in Atlanta have from one to eight names. The city council is wrestling with the problem of giving one name to each of these thoroughfares.

Professor Haman says Holston, now number about ten million, is now a good two-thirds are settled in Europe. Next to Europe comes the United States with one million, and Asia, the original home of the race, contains 250,000. Professor Haman believes more than 200,000 Holston embraced Christianity during the nineteenth century.

A HARROWING RIDE.

Dickens' Trip by Stagecoach from Cleveland to Sandusky.

When Charles Dickens visited America in 1842, he traveled by stagecoach from Cleveland to Sandusky, O. Describing his experience, he wrote:

"At one time we were all thrown together in a heap at the bottom of the coach, and at another we were crushing our heads against the roof. Now the coach was lying on the tails of the two wheels, and now it was rearing up in the air. The driver, who certainly got over the ground in a manner quite miraculous, so twisted and turned the team in forcing a passage cork-screw fashion through the bogs and swamps that it was a common circumstance on looking out of the window to see the coachman with the ends of a pair of reins in his hands, apparently driving nothing, and the leaders starting unexpectedly at one from the back of the coach, as if they had some idea of getting up behind."

"A great portion of the way was over what is called a 'corduroy road,' which is made by throwing trunks of trees into a marsh and leaving them to settle there. The very slightest of the jolts with which the ponderous carriage fell from log to log was enough, it seemed, to have dislocated all the bones in the human body. It would be impossible to experience a similar set of sensations in any other circumstances unless perhaps in attempting to go up to the top of St. Paul's in an omnibus."

This description serves to illustrate the condition of our country roads, generally speaking, as they were half a century ago except in a few wealthy communities. There has been a wonderful change since then.

Peking Village Names.

"The Street of the Roasted Corn" is one of the curious names of streets in Peking and suggests the singular and often confusing names given to Chinese villages. Here are a few village names taken from an area of a few miles square: "Horse Words Village," from a tradition of a speaking animal; "Sun Family Bull Village," "Wang Family Great Melon Village," "Tiger Catching Village," "Horse Without a Hoof Village," "Village of the Loving and Benevolent Magistrate" and the "Village of the Makers of Fine Toothed Combs."

Arthur H. Smith in his book on "Village Life in China" says that a market town on the highway, the well of which afforded only brackish water, was called "Bitter Water Shop," but as this name was not pleasing to the ear it was changed on the tax lists to "Sweet Water Shop." If any one asked how it was that the same fountain could thus send forth at the same time waters both bitter and sweet, he was answered: "Sweet Water Shop is the name as Bitter Water Shop."

Painless Deaths.

Probably the least painful death is by means of an overdose of chloroform. You begin with a pleasant sensation and end in oblivion. Prussic acid acts instantaneously. Presuming the agony of anticipation avoided, some violent deaths are quite painless, as they give no time for feeling pain. Such are being blown to pieces by dynamite or by a shell. Drowning is said to be a luxury, and experts have recommended opening a vein in a hot bath. Laudanum and other narcotics would run chloroform and ether hard for first place.

The Daring Little Humming Bird.

Courage has little or no relation to bodily size. The humming bird is the smallest of birds, but also one of the most fearless and pugnacious. He attacks kingbirds and hawks, and those tyrannical creatures, though of monstrous size in comparison, seem not at all ashamed to fly from his envenomed flights of humming birds among themselves are often fierce and protracted.

Economical.

There is a reminiscence of Caleb Baderstone in the utterance of an economical Scotch butler who was lately waiting at an important dinner. He had taken round a plate of beef in vain. After his last effort at persuasion had failed he set it down in front of his master with decision. "Ye maun tak' that yerself," he said. "I canna' get any tither customer for it."

The Lipari Islands. From the Lipari Islands of mythology, the abode of Eolus, the ruler of the winds, and the scene of his meeting with Ulysses, to the Lipari Islands of today is a very far cry indeed. There are no hotels, and the islands are almost unknown to tourists, while the 13,000 inhabitants are almost in a state of primitive and patriarchal simplicity. They tender their services voluntarily as guides and refuse payment, regarding all visitors as their guests. The donkey is the only means of locomotion. Horses are unknown in the island.

A Cinnabar Mine. A very curious old mine with many romantic associations is that at Quindia, in the United States of Colombia, where cinnabar, the ore of mercury, has been wrought from the time of the earliest Spanish explorers, almost 200 years ago, at a spot 10,000 feet above the sea. Its locality is further remarkable as being one of the wettest places on the globe. It is exceptional for the rain to cease throughout the greater part of the year.

An Optimistic View. The invalid looked out of the window just as a nurse went by, and he smiled happily. "Dye mind, Biddy," he said, "it's worth the dyin' to have a ride in a thing like that, with the feathers on top an' a man with a bug on his hat, an' you bein' greeter an' more ails sary than the marshal is a St. Patrick's day parade. There's waunst in ye're life ye're the whole thing, an' that's whin ye're dead."—Chicago Post.

The Sensible Thing. Schoolmaster—What is the meaning of one twenty-fifth? Boy—I-I don't remember. Schoolmaster—If you had twenty-five friends visiting you and only one apple for them, what would you do? Boy—I'd wait till they'd gone and then eat it myself.

INDIGESTION

Theodor's Black-Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Theodor's Black-Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

Speak Kindly Words Now. In the course of our lives there must be many times when thoughtless words are spoken by us which wound the hearts of others, and there are also many little occasions when the word of cheer is needed from us and we are silent.

There are lives of wearisome monotony which a word of kindness can relieve. There is suffering which words of sympathy can make more endurable, and often even to the midst of wealth and luxury there are those who listen and long in vain for some expression of disinterested kindness.

Speak to those while they can hear and be helped by you, for the day may come when all our expressions of love and appreciation may be unheard. Imagine yourself standing beside their last resting place. Think of the things you could have said of them and to them while they were yet living. Then go and tell them now.—Exchange.

it was along in the spring when the Things change very much as the time passes swiftly by, so we must tell the people the changes we have had during the past months. The

Lily post office has changed hands.
You will now find the office at the

with them, but God had a better one for her. She to early rest is gone, she to paradise has fled, God hath taken her away from their bosom to His own. She never shall return to them but they can go to her. So all things work together for good to them that love God, to those who are called according to His purpose.
We extend our sympathy to the berieved family, and sorrowed with them as they left the Rockymount cemetery and returned to their lonesome home.

Professor Brewer, who twenty-five years ago predicted that one minute fifty seconds is the limit beyond which the American trotter will never go. It remains to be seen whether Lou Dillon cannot reach the limit now and save the professor from waiting twenty-five years more for the fulfillment of his second prophecy.

A writer in Electricity says it has been discovered that the aging of a violin can be artificially secured by exposing the wood to X rays. The beautiful tone which has heretofore resulted from a natural aging of the wood for fifty or sixty years can thus be obtained in a single day. If this be true, Stradivarius violins will be no longer at a premium, except in so far as perfection of manufacture is concerned; though it is probable that, as in most other processes, the natural aging will yield the better tone.

The London News has been engaged for six months in gathering church-going data in that city. Assuming that the people at church in the morning and evening are not the same, one person in every four and a half attend church on Sunday. The attendance is largest in the Church of England, second largest is the non-conformist churches and third in the Roman Catholic. The non-conformist churches lead in the attendance of men, however, having 120,000 every Sunday, to the Church of England's 98,000. The seating capacity of all the churches of the city is only about one-fourth of the population.

The peculiar California law which seeks to secure the reversion to the State of bequests made by residents to institutions outside of the State is likely to be well tested in the case of the will of the late Dr. Charles Kendall Adams. Dr. Adams died in California. In his will he left $150,000 to the University of Wisconsin, of which he was once President, to found fifteen scholarships. This money California claims under the law referred to, but Dr. Adams' executors will dispute the claim up to the court of last resort. If the law is declared constitutional it will be California's duty and interest to repeal it. It is not a good advertisement for a health resort to give public notice to invalids that if they shall happen to die there their estates will be plundered in the name of the law.

Sir Frederick Bramhall has offered $250 to the British Association to be invested for fifty years, the proceeds then to be paid as a prize for the best obituary on steam power, which will then be dead, Sir Frederick thinks. The association doubts the legality of the gift. It would amount to about $1125 by 1951. In 1798 a Swede named Thelsson left an estate of $2,500,000 to be divided among his great-grandchildren, or if there were none, the proceeds were to be applied to the national debt. Lord Rensselaer was a descendant of the eccentric Swede. Thelsson's will was probated, but caused the passage of a special act limiting deferred legacies to twenty-one years. So it was plainly illegal to offer, as another chap did recently, $50 to be put at compound interest for the city of Birmingham for 900 years. At three per cent it would amount to a trifle of $294,493,000,000. To be richer than Rockefeller is a perfectly simple matter. Only it takes so long!

By the terms of the act of Congress granting $5,000,000 in aid of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, at St. Louis, the appropriation was made conditionally, the requirement being that twice the amount should be expended by the Exhibition Company in preparing for the fair as a guaranty of good faith. This having been accomplished, the contribution of the Federal Government now becomes available. The appropriations made by forty-five foreign nations, which have signified their willingness to become exhibitors, amount in the aggregate to over $6,000,000, several of the co-operating nations having increased the amounts of their contemplated expenditures when they realized the magnitude of the forthcoming Exposition. The forwardness of the enterprise is gratifying, and the gratification should not be confined to St. Louis; the whole Nation is interested in the success of the centenary celebration of the first and most important act of American expansion.

GENERAL ELECTION LAW.

It is made the duty of the board of registrars in each county to visit each precinct at least once, and oftener if necessary, between July 1 and October 1, 1904, and each two years thereafter to make a complete registration of all persons entitled to register, and remain there at least one day from 8 o'clock in the morning until sunset. They shall give at least twenty days' notice of the time when, and the place in the precinct where they will attend to register applicants for registration by bills posted at three or more public places in each election precinct, and by advertisement once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper, if there be one published in the county. Upon failure to give such notice, or to attend any appointment made by them in any precinct, they shall, after like notice, fill new appointments therein. The time consumed by the board in completing such registration shall not exceed forty working days in any county, except that in Jefferson county the time shall not exceed sixty days.

No person shall be registered except at the county site or in the precinct in which he resides. The registrars shall issue to each person registered a certificate of registration. On Friday and Saturday next preceding the day of each regular election, the registrars shall sit in the court house of each county, during such days, and shall register all applicants having the qualifications of an elector, who shall have reached the age of 21 years since the last date of registration, or who shall prove to the reasonable satisfaction of the board that by reason of physical disability of himself or sickness in his family or unavoidable absence from the county, they had no opportunity to register prior to said time, and they shall not on such days register any other persons.

The board of registrars in each county shall meet at the court house on the last Monday in September, 1904, and each two years thereafter and shall remain in session one week for the registration of voters.

When there are two or more court houses in a county the registrars may sit during such two days at the court house they may select, but shall give twenty days' notice by bills posted at each of the court houses designating the court house at which they will sit.

The board of registrars is given power to examine, under oath or affirmation, all applicants for registration, and to take testimony touching the qualifications of such applicants. Each member of such board is authorized to administer the oath to be taken by the applicants and witnesses, which shall be in the following form, and subscribed by the person making it, and preserved by the board, namely:

"I solemnly swear (or affirm) that in the matter of the application of _____ for registration as elector, I will speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God." Any person who, upon such examination, makes any willfully false statement in reference to any material matter touching the qualification of any applicant for registration shall be guilty of perjury, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years.

The following persons and no others who, if their places of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election, the qualifications as to residence prescribed by section 1 of this act, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 2 of the act.

T. L. Caine was seriously injured at Copeland's brick yard, Pratt City. He, with a companion, was repairing some machinery, and was pouring molten metal into joints of the machinery, when in some manner the hot air in the pipes caused an explosion. The molten metal was blown over the head, neck and shoulders of the unfortunate man.

Confessed.

George W. Clements and Robert Price, two of the men who were arrested at Gadsden for using the mails to defraud, have confessed their crimes and made full statements to Judge Thomas G. Jones in the United States court. They lay nearly all the blame on L. R. Price, who is also in jail here, and claim that they were led into crooked work by him. The men worked a scheme together for several years and obtained thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise from the leading tobacconists of the country.

Crushed by a Drill.

A young white man giving the name of Frank Curtis, was hurt at Vance and is suffering from a crushed and broken leg. The accident was caused by a steam drill getting displaced and falling on him. It was after dark when the accident happened and in trying to evade the falling piece of machinery he ran the wrong way and was caught underneath.

Those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, and those who are unable to read and write, if such inability is due solely to physical disability, or.

The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of forty acres of land situated in this state, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of real estate situated in this state, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more, or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in this state assessed for taxation for three hundred dollars or more; provided that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and is undetermined.

Any person making application to the board of registrars for registration who fails to establish by evidence to the reasonable satisfaction of the board of registrars that he is qualified to register may be refused registration.

The action of the majority of the board of registrars shall be the action of the board, and a majority of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all business. Any person to whom registration is denied shall have the right of appeal, without giving security for cost, within thirty days after such denial, by filing a petition in the circuit court or court of like jurisdiction held for the county in which he seeks to register to have his qualifications as an elector determined. Upon the filing of the petition the clerk of the court shall give notice thereof to any solicitor authorized to represent the state in said county, whose duty it shall be to appear and defend against the petition on behalf of the state. Upon such trial the court shall charge the jury only as to what constitutes the qualifications that entitle the applicant to become an elector at the time he applied for registration, and the jury shall determine the weight and effect of the evidence and return a verdict. From the judgment rendered an appeal will lie to the supreme court in favor of the petitioner, to be taken within thirty days. Final judgment in favor of the petitioner shall entitle him to registration as of the date of his application to the registrars. No person registered as an elector shall again be required to register unless his place of residence is changed.

The secretary of state shall, at the expense of the state, have prepared and shall furnish to the registrars and judges of probate of the several counties a sufficient number of registration books and of blanks of oath, certificates of registration and notices required to be given by the registrars. The cost of the publication in newspapers of the notices required to be given by the registrars shall be paid by the state, the bills therefor to be rendered to the secretary of state and approved by him.

Any person who registers for another or who knowingly and willfully registers or procures the registration of any person not possessing the qualifications of an elector, or who registers more than once, and any registrar who enters the name of any person of the list of registered voters, without such person having made application in person under oath on a form provided for that purpose, or who knowingly registers any person more than once or who knowingly enters a name upon the registration as the name of a voter, without any case of that name applying to register, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years.

The board of registrars shall each year within two weeks after the expiration of the time prescribed for registration make a true copy of the list of names registered, which copy, along with the registration list, must be returned to the office of the judge of probate of the county. The judge of probate shall certify an alphabetical list to the secretary of state. The judge of probate shall keep both the original list filed by the registrars and the alphabetical list made therefrom as records in the office of the judge of probate of the county.

The judge of probate shall, from the registration list returned to his office, including those registered prior to January 1, 1903, make correct alphabetical lists of the electors registered by precincts, which list shall be certified by him officially to be a full and correct copy of the lists of registered electors for each precinct respectively as the same appears from the returns of the board of registrars on file in his office.

One copy of said list for each precinct the judge of probate court shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the inspectors in each precinct immediately preceding every election.

Each judge of probate shall be paid for his services about the registration and certification of electors, one cent for each elector registered and certified.

Any elector who registered prior to January 1, 1903, who has changed the county of his residence shall be registered on application on production of his certificate, unless he has since become disqualified.

When the certificate of any elector who was duly registered has been lost, mutilated or destroyed on application stating that the certificate has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, and verified by affidavit, the judge of probate of the county of registration or the secretary of state will issue to the applicant a certificate that he was duly registered as an elector. Such certificate shall be issued free of charge to the elector. The secretary of state shall at the expense of the state furnish the judges of probate blank certificates for use as provided in this section. The certificate of the registrars or the judge of probate or of the secretary of state shall be sufficient evidence to establish the fact of such registration.

Any applicant for registration may be required to state under oath, to be administered by the registrars, or by any person authorized by law to administer oaths, where he lived during the five years next preceding the time at which he applies to register, and the name or names by which he was known during that period, and the name of his employer or employers, if any, during such period. Any applicant for registration who refuses to state such facts, or any of them, shall not be entitled to register, and any person so refusing to register, who willfully makes a false statement in regard to such matters, or any of them, shall be guilty of perjury, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years.

The board of registrars shall meet in each county on the second Monday in August, 1904, and on said date each two years thereafter for paying the registration list and may continue in session for one week. The names of those who have died, become insane or who have been convicted of any of the offenses mentioned in Art. 182 of the constitution since being registered or otherwise disqualified as electors under the provisions of the constitution, and any names which may have been fraudulently entered on such list by the registrars shall be stricken from the registration list.

When the name of any elector is proposed to be stricken from the registration list unless he be dead or insane, notice shall be issued to him by the board of registrars citing him to appear before the board on the fourth Monday in August following, and show cause why his name should not be stricken from the list.

The following persons shall be disqualified from registering and voting: All idiots and insane persons; those who were by reason of conviction of crime disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of the constitution on November 28, 1901; those who have been since November 28, 1901, or shall be convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, receiving stolen property, obtaining money under false pretenses, perjury, subornation of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, burglary, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on the wife, bigamy, living in adultery, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature or any crime punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary or of any infamous crimes or crime involving moral turpitude; also any person who has been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted as a vagrant or tramp, or of selling or offering to sell his vote or the vote of another, or of making or offering to make false return in any election by the people or in any primary election to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office, or of assuming any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector, provided, that on the application of any person disqualified by reason of conviction of any of the offenses mentioned in this section, except treason, whether the conviction was had in a state or federal court, accompanied by the recommendation of fifty reputable citizens of the county of the residence of the petitioner, the governor is authorized to restore such a person to all the rights and privileges of citizenship.

Under the bill the following officers in the state shall be elected by the qualified electors thereof: Governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, state auditor, secretary of state, state treasurer, superintendent of education, commissioner of agriculture and industries, senators and representatives in the legislature, chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court, judges of the circuit court, circuit solicitors, chancellors, judges of other inferior courts, sheriffs, coroners, clerks of the circuit court, tax assessors, tax collectors, county treasurers, county superintendents of education, county commissioners and boards of revenue, constables, justice of the peace, representatives in congress and electors for president and vice president of the United States, and such other officers as may be required by law to be elected by the people.

Death at the Furnace.

Perry Waldrop, a white man employed on the Trumville furnace, was instantly killed by falling off the stack to the hard ground beneath. His skull was crushed in, he having fallen a distance of about 30 feet. Waldrop was standing as usual on the stack, when all of a sudden there was a discharge of gas from the furnace. It is believed that the man was asphyxiated before he fell.

German Steel Combine.

According to latest plans the man steel combination will include the largest steel plant in the country, a $10,000,000 plant, this has caused a great deal of anxiety among the producers who foresee that they will be completely under the thumb of the combine without having any voice in it. In consequence smaller producers are now getting together with the object of organizing themselves in such a way as to force the larger combine to incorporate them.

When the combination is formed, it is considered by the producers that it will be more than a match for the United States.

A New Concern.

The American Casting company has been organized and is preparing for a charter. The company capital stock of $20,000, all paid up, has been commenced. The plant will be located at the corner of Second and a half acres of ground at Birmingham. The company will manufacture hardware specialties.

Iron Quiet.

It is announced that there are no sales of pig iron being made in Alabama furnaces, though the market is extremely small lots. There is a scramble, though, as to price. The Birmingham Iron and Steel Foundry is quoted at $12.50 a ton.

The Tennessee Iron and Steel company, Chattanooga, filed a petition for bankruptcy, in which it was valued at $25,000 and given assets of $5. The creditors include Cincinnati, Chicago and other firms.

The Alabama Steel and Iron company expect to apply for the first of the four large blast furnaces, great steel and iron mills which they are erecting in Alabama.

Holmes reports a wild man, woods near that place. The four-story brick building of R. Wolf at Montgomery, destroyed by fire and damaged by loss, $10,000; partially destroyed.

Dr. Frederick P. Henry, Honorary Librarian of the College of Physicians in Philadelphia, says that corporate was the second largest medical library in the world. The largest is the Surgeon General's collection in Washington. The Philadelphia library was begun in 1788 by a gift of twenty-five volumes from Dr. John Morgan, the founder of the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. It now contains 67,923 volumes.

The State Democratic Executive Committee met in Birmingham last week, and passed a resolution that no county should make nominations until after another meeting of the executive committee to be held early in January, 1904. As none of the candidates have yet put in an appearance in Chilton this does affect us.

How can the south best prepare against a financial panic at this season? Let us look over our situation and take stock of our means for defense. The most effective bulwark against hard times is, of course, money. The south has, or will have in the next 60 days, the receipts from her 1903 cotton crop
—money in perfect shoals. The conservative estimates of the cotton crop place the total production
for the year at about 12,000,000 bales. The price of cotton averages about 10 cents per pound.
The average bale of cotton weighs
500 pounds and is therefore worth $50. On the basis of 10 cents per pound, then, the 12,000,000 bale crop in the south should bring in a total of $600,000,000. The south will have $600,000,000, at least,
with which to ward off a panic in
the event one strikes this country.
But besides this sum, she should have the receipts from her other crops, such as corn and cane and tobacco. Her wealth, it is a word, reaches that degree which may be described as enormous. She is simply rolling in wealth. In past years she has been heavily in debt
when her cotton crop was marketed and much of the money went to pay her debts. In this year, fortunately, the debtors in the south
are greatly reduced in numbers and
it may be said the section is scarcely in debt at all. The crops have been plentiful and good prices have been paid. Such a splendid financial situation has never been known in the south before.

However the wealth must be saved, not spent, if it is to be used as a defense against the sweep of hard times. It is notoriously true that the people of this section are great spenders. As soon as money is received, as a rule, it is promptly spent. We are not spendthrifts, all of us, yet it is only in the times
of necessity that we have economized in the past. Why not economize now, in time of plenty, and
save the money to stave off the crisis? We can economize, for we have done it under force of necessity.
We must do it even now when we are rolling in wealth, or else we shall shiver, and shake and starve when a crisis strikes us—and
look again to the eastern sky if you seek evidence that one is impending.
The people of this section
may be in a perfectly independent position if they will but look ahead of them and take warning
from the signs on the pathway.
Take warning and save up for the
hard times coming. This should be the watchword throughout the entire section.—Atlanta Journal.

Lily.

Quite a number of our young people attended the all day singing at Milledgeville, and report a nice time. Mr. Robt. Williams, Esquire and Miss Lena attended the fair the past week. Miss Ledia Malone has been in Maplesville
for the past week. Mr. A. S.
Jones has erected a beautiful new residence on his place which adds greatly to the appearance of his home.

Lily post office has changed hands and Miss Velma White is now handling out the Lily mail.

Lily was very well represented at the show at Maplesville and
some came back poorer but wiser.
We are glad to have Miss Ledia Malone with us again after a pleasant visit to friends and relatives at Stanton. We have a number of whoopingcoughers
among us, some who are old enough to want to go to the singing but could not go. RAG BAG.

The young people of this place
enjoyed themselves at a song service
at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W.
Cobb, Sunday evening.

Miss Mammie Branch paid Miss
Lizzie Cobb a dying visit Sunday.
We are sorry to hear that Mr.
John Martin's little baby is so very
low; we hope to see it up again.

Mr. C. N. Cobb paid Shelby a flying visit last Sunday and reports
a nice time.

There will be all day singing at this place the first Sunday in November by Mr. Ras Langston and everybody is invited to come and
bring their baskets and Christian Harmony song books and we will have an old time singing all day.
So come one, come all, and make
yourselves at home.

We have been having some cool
weather the past week.

We are very sorry to know of a mad dog passing through here last Sunday, but we hear of no damage
except the biting of two of Mr. J.
P. Gentry's hogs. Mr. L. Reynolds and Mr. Gentry following the dog killed it under Mrs. Martin's house.

The Sunday-school near this place
at Mars Hill is progressing nicely,
had a very good singing there last Sunday eve.

How was the fair boys? I didn't get to go. I had to stay at home just because none of the black-eyed
girls wouldn't go with me.

Mrs. J. P. Gentry and her charming daughter, Miss China, have returned home from Parkwood, where
they have been visiting their brother and uncle and reported a very nice time.

You needn't get mad because
you have to gin on Saturday evening, things will work all for the best in the future.

ter this week, the free delivery will supply the office.

We are expecting to lose some of
our neighbors soon.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 5th day of August, 1903,
Miss Lella Howard, of this place,
was happily married to Mr. Perry Yeager, of Decatur, and left her childhood's home with heart glowing with happiness, and bright anticipations of a joyous future,
stretching out through the long vista of years to come. Endowed with a loving and amiable disposition, refined in nature, and cultivated in those graces that ennoble their possessor, and having, like Mary,
"chosen that better part, which shall not be taken away from her," it would seem that here was a culmination of the highest ideal, for glorifying the new sphere she was entering, and abiding a fragrant influence over all with whom she came in contact. But alas! for the vanity of human hopes, even while
the hearts of this young couple thrilled with the bright promise of future happiness, the fell destroyer
was at the door, and his baleful shadow gleamed across their path-
way. Ere the lapse of one month
the young wife was seized with symptoms of the fatal illness that terminated her life, and after a few days of suffering, patiently endured,
her sweet spirit winged its flight to God, and on the 26th day of Sept.,
her body was brought back to her parents home for burial.

On the morning of 16th Oct., Miss Ada Howard, sister to Mrs. Yeager,
after months of languishing through
a painful illness, submitted to with unmurmuring fortitude, was called
from earth to her heavenly home.

It is difficult to speak of the death-
bed scene of this sweet young girl
without seeming exaggeration, intuitively recognizing that her end was
at hand, she declared her joyous willingness "to depart and be with Christ." Her excellent spirit welled with glowing love to God, and declared with radiant countenance, and eyes glistening with supernatural light that it was sweet to die, and she would soon be at home to dwell forever with Jesus, and would joy-
ously greet her loved sister Lella,
who had preceded her only a few days to the heavenly mansions above.

She earnestly exhorted her parents
and other friends gathered around her dying couch to "love God, to lead a christian life and meet her in heaven." Such a scene of cestatic christian exaltation is rarely witnessed on earth, and was an inspiration to those beholding it.
Thus within the brief period of 25
days, has passed from this mortal
to immortal life two sweet, gentle, devoted and consecrated christian sisters. "Blessed are the dead in the Lord, from henceforth: rest saith the Spirit, that they may rest
from their labors, and their works do
follow them." H. W. CAFFEY.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, October 27, 1903.
The coming Fall elections are important as showing the drift of
public opinion on political issues,
and especially how the voters of the states in which elections are held
view the erratic course of the Republican Administration. If the Republicans hold their own, it must be taken for granted that the majority of the voters of the United States
are satisfied to continue the extortion through the protective tariff and
continued high prices of the cost of living. By endorsing the Republicans, the voters will sanction the
program that the leaders of their party have agreed upon, of allowing congress to take no action other
than to pass the appropriation bills
and adjourn at the earliest day practicable.

That would mean the transcontinental railroads have sufficient influence with the Republican leaders
to prevent the building of the Panama or Nicaragua canal; That no
action will be taken upon treaties
which President McKinley so ardently wished to see ratified, to ward off
the inevitable reform of the tariff,
which he foresaw must come unless
some relief from monopoly was granted; That the much agitated
labor legislation is again to be postponed, and that the promises made in the Republican platform are again to be broken; That no investigation of the frauds in the departments is to be undertaken; That the financial legislation that has been declared so necessary to prevent a panic will not be attempted, and
that Secretary Shaw can continue
to loan the surplus, without interest,
to favor banks and continue to disburse the law for the protection of the United States by receiving doubtful security in place of United States bonds, which the law plainly commands. Why is this Republican Administration afraid to legislate on these and other matters?
Being in league with the trusts and combines, they dare not legislate against them. They fear the people.

If the Democrats show gains in
the elections of this Fall, it will indicate that the voters are determined to turn out the Republicans,
with their numerous scandals, and inaugurate the reform that is so necessary
for the public welfare. "Equal rights to all and special privileges
to none" is the Democratic slogan,
and as the voters are beginning to see that trust prosperity means the piling up of millions in the pockets
of the favored few and no fair share
to the many, it is only reasonable to expect the voters will demand a change in political conditions. That the Republican leaders are frightened to the point of desperation is plain enough or President Roosevelt would not have authorized the
speaking members of his cabinet to take the stump for Hanna in Ohio
and to bolster up the rotten Lodge machine in Massachusetts and to aid
the disreputable crew in Kentucky
that call themselves the Republican party in that state.

The disagreement between Russia
and Japan and the utter breakdown
of the much-heralded "open door"
in Manchuria has alarmed the export merchants of the United States,
and they have sounded a note of
warning to President Roosevelt and
the Republican leaders, that instead
of aiding the enlargement of our business in Asia, they have virtually closed the door that was at least partly open. That Russia will ever withdraw from Manchuria is not within the realm of probability; she owns the railroads and the banks
there; the Chinese authorities are subservient to the Russian representatives; in a word, Manchuria is Russianized. The boast of the Administration that the treaty just concluded with China gives us two
open ports in that country is, therefore, worthless, unless Russia opens their doors, for she has the key to both of them. Even if these two ports were open, are they of value?
Mookden, one of the two, is on a small river a hundred miles from the sea, accessible by a scow, and Niu Chwang, at the mouth of the stream, is occupied by the Russians. The merchant who tries to get any trade
through these "open doors" will not bless John Hay and the Republican party. CHAS. A. EDWARDS.

Modifying It.

Mrs. C. was horrified to discover that her little seven-year-old daughter was acquiring the habit of alluding very freely to the devil, and at last she told her determinedly that a repetition of
the obnoxious word would bring severe punishment.

The child knew that her mother was
in earnest, so she set a seal on her lips.
At last she seemed to have forgotten it, but one Sunday Mrs. C., who had been too ill to go to church, asked her
if she could tell what the minister had preached about in his sermon.

"Oh, yes," she answered. "He preached about our Lord going up into

THE State Democratic Executive Committee met in Birmingham last
week, and passed a resolution that

tions until after another meeting of
the executive committee to be held
early in January, 1904. As none
of the candidates have yet put in an appearance in Clanton this does affect us.

How can the south best prepare
against a financial panic at this season? Let us look over our situation and take stock of our means
for defense. The most effective bulwark against hard times is, of course, money. The south has, or
will have in the next 60 days, the
receipts from her 1903 cotton crop
—money in perfect shoals. The conservative estimates of the cotton crop place the total production
for the year at about 12,000,000
bales. The price of cotton averages about 10 cents per pound.
The average bale of cotton weighs
500 pounds and is therefore worth
$50. On the basis of 10 cents per pound, then, the 12,000,000 bale
crop in the south should bring in
a total of $600,000,000. The south
will have $600,000,000, at least,
with which to ward off a panic in
the event one strikes this country.
But besides this sum, she should
have the receipts from her other
crops, such as corn and cane and tobacco. Her wealth, it is a word, reaches that degree which may be described as enormous. She is simply rolling in wealth. In past years she has been heavily in debt
when her cotton crop was market-
ed and much of the money went to pay her debts. In this year, fortunately, the debtors in the south
are greatly reduced in numbers and
it may be said the section is scarcely in debt at all. The crops have been plentiful and good prices have prevailed, hence the debts have in the main been paid. Such a splendid financial situation has never been known in the south before.

However the wealth must be
saved, not spent, if it is to be used
as a defense against the sweep of
hard times. It is notoriously true
that the people of this section are
great spenders. As soon as money
is received, as a rule, it is promptly spent. We are not spendthrifts,
all of us, yet it is only in the times
of necessity that we have econom-
ized in the past. Why not economize now, in time of plenty, and
save the money to stave off the
crisis? We can economize, for we have done it under force of necessity.
We must do it even now when we are rolling in wealth, or else we shall shiver, and shake and starve when a crisis strikes us—and
look again to the eastern sky if you
seek evidence that one is impending.
The people of this section
may be in a perfectly independent position if they will but look
ahead of them and take warning
from the signs on the pathway.
Take warning and save up for the
hard times coming. This should
be the watchword throughout the entire section.—Atlanta Journal.

Lily.

Quite a number of our young people attended the all day singing at Macedonia and report a nice
time. Mr. Robt. Williams, Esq. and Miss Lena attended the fair the past week. Miss Lodie Malone has been in Maplesville
for the past week. Mr. A. S.
Jones has erected a beautiful new
residence on his place which adds greatly to the appearance of his
home.

Lily post office has changed
hands and Miss Velma White is
now handling out the Lily mail.

Lily was very well represented
at the show at Maplesville and
some came back poorer but wiser.
We are glad to have Miss Lena Rasberry with us again
after a pleasant visit to friends and relatives at Stanton. We have a number of whoopingcoughers
among us, some who are not enough to want to go to the singing but could not go. RAC RAC.

Rev. Jas. S. Cox, of Wake, Ark., writes: "For 12 years I suffered from Yellow Jaundice. I consulted a number of physicians and tried all sorts of medicines, but got no relief.
Then I began the use of Electric Bitters and feel that I am now cured of a disease that had me in its grasp for twelve years." If you want a reliable medicine for Liver and Kidney trouble, stomach disorder or general debility, get Electric Bitters.

Oak Grove.

The young people of this place
enjoyed themselves at a song service
at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W.
Cobb, Sunday evening.

Miss Mammie Branch paid Miss
Lizzie Cobb a dying visit Sunday.
We are sorry to hear that Mr.
John Martin's little baby is so very
low; we hope to see it up again.

Mr. C. N. Cobb paid Shelby a flying visit last Sunday and reports
a nice time.

There will be all day singing at this place the first Sunday in November by Mr. Ras Langston and
everybody is invited to come and
bring their baskets and Christian Harmony song books and we will
have an old time singing all day.
So come one, come all, and make
yourselves at home.

Bessie.

We have been having some cool
weather the past week.

We are very sorry to know of a mad dog passing through here last Sunday, but we hear of no damage
except the biting of two of Mr. J.
P. Gentry's hogs. Mr. L. Reynolds and Mr. Gentry following the dog killed it under Mrs. Martin's house.

The Sunday-school near this place
at Mars Hill is progressing nicely,
had a very good singing there last Sunday eve.

How was the fair boys? I didn't get to go. I had to stay at home
just because none of the black-eyed
girls wouldn't go with me.

Mrs. J. P. Gentry and her charming daughter, Miss China, have returned home from Parkwood, where
they have been visiting their brother and uncle and reported a very nice time.

You needn't get mad because
you have to gin on Saturday evening, things will work all for the best in the future.

No more post office at Bessie after this week, the free delivery will
supply the office.

We are expecting to lose some of
our neighbors soon.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 24th day of August, 1903,
Miss Lella Howard, of this place,
was happily married to Mr. Perry Yeager, of Moore, and left her childhood's home with heart glowing with happiness, and bright anticipations of a joyous future,
stretching out through the long vista of years to come. Endowed
with a loving and amiable disposition, refined in nature, and cultivated in those graces that ennoble their
possessor, and having, like Mary,
"chosen that better part, which shall
not be taken away from her," it
would seem that here was a culmination of the highest ideal, for glo-
rifying the new sphere she was entering, and shedding a fragrant influence over all with whom she
came in contact. But alas! for the vanity of human hopes, even while
the hearts of this young couple
thrilled with the bright promise of
future happiness, the fell destroyer
was at the door, and his baleful
shadow gleamed across their path-
way. Ere the lapse of one month
the young wife was seized with
symptoms of the fatal illness that
terminated her life, and after a few
days of suffering, patiently endured,
her sweet spirit winged its flight to God, and on the 26th day of Sept.,
her body was brought back to her
parents home for burial.

On the morning of 16th Oct., Miss
Ada Howard, sister to Mrs. Yeager,
after months of languishing through
a painful illness, submitted to with unmurmuring fortitude, was called
from earth to her heavenly home.

It is difficult to speak of the death-
bed scene of this sweet young girl
without seeming exaggeration, intuitively recognizing that her end was
at hand, she declared her joyous
willingness "to depart and be with Christ." Her excellent spirit awakened with glowing love to God, and declared with radiant countenance,
and eyes glistening with supernal light that it was sweet to die, and she would soon be at home to dwell
forever with Jesus, and would joy-
ously greet her loved sister Lella,
who had preceded her only a few
days to the heavenly mansions above.

She earnestly exhorted her parents
and other friends gathered around
her dying couch to "love God, to
lead a christian life and meet her in heaven." Such a scene of ecstatic christian exaltation is rarely
witnessed on earth, and was an inspiration to those beholding it.
Thus within the brief period of 25
days, has passed from this mortal
to immortal life two sweet, gentle,
devoted and consecrated Christian
sisters. "Blessed are the dead in the Lord, from henceforth: yea
saith the Spirit, that they may rest
from their labors, and their works do
follow them." H. W. CAFFEY.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, October 27, 1903.

The coming Fall elections are
important as showing the drift of
public opinion on political issues,
and especially how the voters of the
states in which elections are held
view the erratic course of the Republican Administration. If the Republicans hold their own, it must
be taken for granted that the majority of the voters of the United States
are satisfied to continue the extortion through the protective tariff and
continued high prices of the cost of living. By endorsing the Republicans, the voters will sanction the
program that the leaders of their
party have agreed upon, of allowing congress to take no action other
than to pass the appropriation bills
and adjourn at the earliest day practicable.

That would mean the transcontinental railroads have sufficient influence with the Republican leaders
to prevent the building of the Panama or Nicaragua canal; That no
action will be taken upon treaties
which President McKinley so ardently
wished to see ratified, to ward off
the inevitable reform of the tariff,
which he foresaw must come unless
some relief from monopoly was
granted; That the much agitated
labor legislation is again to be postponed, and that the promises made
in the Republican platform are
again to be broken; That no investigation of the frauds in the departments is to be undertaken; That the financial legislation that has been declared so necessary to prevent a panic will not be attempted, and
that Secretary Shaw can continue
to loan the surplus, without interest,
to "favor banks and continue to disobey the law for the protection of the United States by receiving
doubtful security in place of United States bonds, which the law plainly
commands. Why is this Republican Administration afraid to legis-
late on these and other matters?
Being in league with the trusts and
combines, they dare not legislate
against them. They fear the people.

If the Democrats show gains in
the elections of this Fall, it will indicate that the voters are determined to turn out the Republicans,
with their numerous scandals, and inaugurate the reform that is so necessary
for the public welfare. "Equal rights to all and special privileges
to none" is the Democratic slogan,
and as the voters are beginning to
see that trust prosperity means the
piling up of millions in the pockets
of the favored few and no fair share
to the many, it is only reasonable to expect the voters will demand a change in political conditions. That
the Republican leaders are frightened to the point of desperation is plain enough or President Roosevelt
would not have authorized the
speaking members of his cabinet to
take the stump for Hanna in Ohio
and to bolster up the rotten Lodge machine in Massachusetts and to aid
the disreputable crew in Kentucky
that call themselves the Republican party in that state.

The disagreement between Russia
and Japan and the utter breakdown
of the much-heralded "open door"
in Manchuria has alarmed the export merchants of the United States,
and they have sounded a note of
warning to President Roosevelt and
the Republican leaders, that instead
of aiding the enlargement of our
business in Asia, they have virtually
closed the door that was at least partly open. That Russia will ever withdraw from Manchuria is not
within the realm of probability; she
owns the railroads and the banks
there; the Chinese authorities are
subservient to the Russian representatives; in a word, Manchuria is Russianized. The boast of the Administration that the treaty just concluded with China gives us two
open ports in that country is, therefore, worthless, unless Russia opens
their doors, for she has the key to both of them. Even if these two ports were open, are they of value?
Mookden, one of the two, is on a
small river a hundred miles from the sea, accessible by a scow, and Niu Chwang, at the mouth of the stream,
is occupied by the Russians. The
merchant who tries to get any trade
through these "open doors" will not
bless John Hay and the Republican party.

Mrs. C. was horrified to discover that her little seven-year-old daughter was acquiring the habit of alluding very
freely to the devil, and at last she told
her determinedly that a repetition of
the obnoxious word would bring severe punishment.

The child knew that her mother was

At last she seemed to have forgotten it, but one Sunday Mrs. C., who had been too ill to go to church, asked her
if she could tell what the minister had

"Oh, yes," she answered, "He
preached about our Lord going up into

EVERYBODY AN HEIR

Provided He Has the Price About Him.

Colonel D. M. Kaufman, alias Biggie, alias McElberry, wanted in Nashville and other cities, has been arrested at Sheffield, after having imposed on a number of Sheffield citizens by giving a number of bogus philanthropic checks. Kaufman, who claims to be an old confederate soldier, came to Sheffield for the purpose, as he said, of bringing a $500 legacy supposed to have been left to Grace Episcopal church by a Mrs. Maxey, of Roanoke, Va., and his story being very plausible, was taken in good faith. The man, who is elderly and of a refined, gentlemanly appearance, was introduced to many of the citizens of the town, and became popular, owing to the fact that he produced a legacy for any one who had the sum necessary to record it, which he politely pocketed. Checks were made out on different New York banks in a clean, business-like way. The marshal had seen a notice of just such a man and such tricks in a Nashville paper, and arrested him after he had tried to cash a check at the First National bank, when he was found to have papers of an intimidating nature on his person.

Literally Cut to Pieces.
Aurora, Brown county, at the cotton gin of James Buras, there occurred a frightful accident, in which the victim lives to tell the tale. Bud Nunn, a young white man about twenty-four years old, was literally cut to pieces from his head down to the hips, and yet lives. It seems that James Buras, who owns the gin runs it himself, but on Wednesday morning he was suddenly called home by the news of the death of his wife. Before leaving he told the other men that if they could find a man who could run the gin they could run it. Bud Nunn was near and he volunteered his services. The machinery started up and before a fourth of a bale was ginned the gin became choked with lint and Nunn used his hand to remedy it, when the saw caught his coat, jerking his hand and arms through. His body was drawn over the sixty sharp screws, which were running at full speed.

PILOT KILLS LUMBERMAN.

Tragedy Occurred in Limestone County, Opposite Decatur.
Early Sunday morning Will Newsom, a well known Tennessee river pilot, fatally shot John Burrell, a lumberman. The shooting took place at a house on the north side of the river in Limestone county. Several men were in the house at the time when Newsom and another man quarreled over a woman. Newsom heard Burrell, and thinking it was the other man, fired three shots. The first ball entered Burrell's left hand and the other two passed through the lower regions of the bowels. Burrell lived about twenty minutes. Newsom has fled, and his whereabouts are unknown. Decatur officers had no authority to make an arrest, as the killing took place in another county.

A Good Climber.
George Velberg, a convict sent up from Montgomery to Pratt Mines for burglary, made his escape from prison Friday night. The escape was effected from the mines through the air shaft, and was one of the most daring ever attempted. The distance from the bottom of the shaft to the surface is 150 feet. The prisoner climbed to the top by means of a water pipe eight inches in diameter, and after accomplishing this feat, clung to the pipe with one hand and with the other sawed a hole through the wooden covering through which he pulled himself to light and liberty. Velberg was serving a seven-year sentence and was wanted elsewhere at his expiration.

Not Growers Meet.
The second annual convention of the national nut growers' association will be held at New Orleans October 28, 29 and 30. The program is filled with papers relative to the culture of various nuts. The growing of the pecan will be discussed fully. Experienced men from various parts of the country are to take part in the meeting.

Fire in the Heart of Town.
Fire at midnight Saturday destroyed buildings in the heart of the business district of Columbus, Ga.

Stores occupied by John H. Brady, Everidge & Stockton, Misses Conit and the Peacock Tailoring company, and offices of A. J. Crawford and W. W. McKee, insurance agents. Most of the property was insured. Loss, $15,000. Fire started in the store of Everidge & Stockton. Origin unknown.

Another survey is talked about for a road over Big Bear hill, between Selma and Autaugaaville. It is reported that the survey is made by the proposed Atlanta air line.

Alabama coal is greatly in demand. Large quantities will be sent to points in Mississippi and Louisiana to make up for the losses from the Pittsburg districts. Huntsville expects another cotton harvest.

In Colombia.
Cable advices received from Bogota, Colombia, announce that the committee of examination of the Colombian congress has reported adversely the bill declaring invalid the extension of time granted the Panama Canal company. This committee also killed the resolution to demand from the United States $30,000,000, and from the Panama Canal company $10,000,000 additional.

A resolution has been enacted providing for the adjournment of the Colombian congress on November 14th. There is a possibility that a resolution of some kind will pass congress regarding the action to be taken by the Colombian government in canal matters, but the situation is complicated by the presidential election, which occurs in December, and the aspirations of the senatorial candidates.

NOT UNITED, BUT ADVANCED.
Motion for Negro Cases Turned Down by Supreme Court.

The supreme court of the United States has denied the motion made to unite the cases of Jackson W. Giles, attacking the validity of the suffrage provisions of the new Alabama constitution with the case of Dan Rogers, a murder case. The Giles cases were advanced to be heard on January 4th, and the Rogers case also coming from Alabama to be heard immediately after them.

The Cane Crop.
Last week closed with some rain that perhaps washed the dust off the slowly growing canes and did the crop some little good. The temperature has continued low and white frosts in some parts of the sugar country have been reported. The grinding season has been inaugurated and sugar house results are said to be good, the density of the cane juice 8 degrees that has seemed so depressing to some Beaumont, a good full record for the calendar month. The crop situation observers has not improved, but still better news filters through here and there.

Fell from Trestle.
Charles Wolfe, a young white man from Choctaw county, Alabama, died at Overt, Miss., on the new M. J. and K. C. road from the result of a fall sustained at work on a trestle. The young man made a misstep and was thrown to the ground fifteen feet below, sustaining internal injuries which resulted fatally.

Willsonville will have a free delivery route November 16th.

Thomas G. Bush, one of the receivers of the Southern Car and Foundry company, in his verbal report before the court Monday made charges against the management of the company. He says that there was a considerable looseness in the accounts and that large credits were misplaced. Governor Jelks has returned from New York.

Depot Burned.

The freight depot of the Louisville and Nashville railroad at Cullman was destroyed by fire Monday morning. Exactly how the fire originated is not known, but when discovered it had gained some headway in the corner of the freight house. The passenger end of the depot was saved. Two box cars standing near the depot were damaged. It is estimated that the entire damage done by the fire will amount to about $3,000. The Louisville and Nashville was going to build a new depot at Cullman, anyway, and the timber and hands are on the scene.

SIR HENRY DUNDAS.

The New British Ambassador to this Country.

The announcement is made of the appointment of Sir Henry DUNDAS, the British ambassador at Madrid, as British ambassador to the United States, to succeed the late Sir Michael Herbert.

Sir Henry left London Friday for Madrid, where at his own desire he will personally announce his promotion. The selection of Sir Henry to succeed Sir Michael Herbert was a surprise, chiefly because he has never had any official connection with Washington. In Spanish diplomatic circles surprise is expressed at Sir Henry's withdrawal from Madrid.

The new ambassador will speedily bid farewell to the Spanish court and proceed to the United States without delay.

Lady Dundas is not very strong, but it is hoped that the American climate will benefit her health and enable her to completely fulfill her duties as hostess of the British embassy. The daughter of Sir Henry and Lady Dundas is much liked in Madrid society. Their son is an officer in Lancashire regiment.

In addition to his diplomatic success in Persia, India and Afghanistan, Sir Henry is an expert shot, and has had many adventures with big game while hunting in India, where he was closely connected with General Lord Roberts, serving as his political secretary during the famous Cabul campaign.

The significant and important feature of the selection of Sir Henry as British ambassador at Madrid is the fact that it is the first time the British government has sent an ambassador directly to Washington. Heretofore Washington has been looked upon as a post ranking at the foot of the embassies, hence it has been the custom to promote a minister to the embassy to promote a minister to the embassy to the British government in this case marks a growing sense of appreciation of the importance of Washington as a diplomatic post.

SEVEN VESSELS SHORT.

Our Navy Handicapped, but Delays Explained.

Rear Admiral Bowles, chief of the bureau of construction and repair, in his annual report to the secretary of the navy, reviews at length the progress made by this government in naval construction during that period. It is shown that the following additions have been made to the effective force of the navy during the year. One battleship, four monitors, twelve torpedo boat destroyers, one torpedo boat and several submarine torpedo boats. The list should have been increased by two battleships and five cruisers, the report states, but owing to strikes and other causes their completion was delayed. The report states "that the rate of progress of vessels under construction at the present time, presents some very encouraging indications for completion of many of the most important contracts, but considered as a whole the progress made during the last fiscal year has been very unsatisfactory."

The following are under construction or authorized:

First class battleships, fourteen; armored cruisers, eight; protected cruisers, nine; gunboat for great lakes (not begun), one; composite gunboat, two; steel torpedo boats, six; training ships, two; training brig, one; tugs, two.

It is given out from Washington that President Roosevelt is in a quandary as to whether to give out to the public the report of the fourth assistant postmaster general relative to the scandal in that department. The report is in the president's hands, but it is said that he wants to hold it until after the election.

The cruiser Dixie left League Island Saturday under rush orders from the navy department with Commander W. B. Wadham in charge. Eighty-five picked men in command of Captain Lyman are among the four hundred marines aboard the cruiser. Admiral Sigbee received imperative orders from Washington to prepare the Dixie for sea. It was stated that the vessel would proceed to Guantanamo, Cuba, where she will remain during the winter for emergency calls.

FOR RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Memorial Adopted by Tennessee River Association.

At the convention of the Tennessee river improvement association, which met at Chattanooga last Thursday, the following officers were elected for 1904: President, Thomas R. Routhan, Sheffield, Ala.; secretary, C. W. Holbrook, Chattanooga, Tenn.; treasurer, J. A. Patton, Chattanooga, Tenn.; first vice president, General J. T. Winder, Knoxville, Tenn.; second vice president, A. W. White, Nashville, Tenn.; third vice president, Emmet O'Neal, Florence, Ala.; fourth vice president, General Joseph Wheeler, Wheeler, Ala.

The memorial to congress adopted says in part: "We respectfully urge your most honorable body to make such appropriations for the benefit of the completed improvement of the Tennessee river and all its navigable tributaries as will insure navigation from Paducah, Ky., to Leadville, above Knoxville, Tenn., for twelve months in the year."

Resolved, That we respectfully call your attention to the absolute necessity of the completion of the work as auspiciously begun at Colbert Shoals, and in confirmation of this call your attention to the report of Major Knight on this subject in the following language:

"To complete this canal an additional appropriation of $1,650,000 is necessary. As contracts amounting to $50,000 of this sum are now authorized, it is urged that authority be given to enter into contracts amounting to $1,600,000, the work contracted for to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time be made by law; also that one-third of the amount needed to complete this canal be appropriated during each of the next three sessions of congress."

"We ask that the entire river be improved in harmony with the Muscogee Shoals and the Colbert Shoals canals, through which all boats must pass at all stages of water."

"Especially do we ask that the mountain or 'suck' section below Chattanooga be placed on the continuous contract system at once, for such action is a step long needed and will, we believe, do much to expedite the objects we are all striving for, and ultimately result at an earlier day in placing other portions of the river under the same system."

SEA COAST AND HARBOR DEFENSES.

A Few Items from Report of Chief of Engineers.

The sea coast defenses of the United States are now somewhat more than 50 per cent completed. Twenty-five of the principal harbors of the United States have a sufficient number of heavy guns and mortars mounted to permit an effective defense against naval attack and during the past three years considerable progress has been made in the installation of an adequate rapid-fire armament, now the matter of first importance.

Projects for the defenses of San Juan, Porto Rico, Pearl Harbor, Honolulu harbor, Hawaii, San Luis A'Parr, Guam, Manila bay and Subic bay, have been approved by the secretary of war and actual construction will begin at an early day.

With few exceptions all harbors are now equipped with torpedo storehouses, cables, tanks and serviceable mining case material. Many of the latter are not of the latest type and are complained of by the artillery as insufficient in size. As funds become available they will be replaced by more convenient and commodious case material.

Tons of Armor Plats.

Secretary Moody has decided the long standing question of the awards for furnishing armor for the battleships Vermont, Minnesota, Kansas, Mississippi and Idaho. The Midvale Steel company gets the contract for supplying six thousand tons and the Carnegie and Bethlehem company a contract for supplying 5,000 tons each. The bids of the companies were identical, namely, $6,944,000; the delivery to begin in nine months, while the Midvale company's bid was $6,006,332, delivery to begin in twenty months.

The bureau of insular affairs of the war department has issued a statement showing the customs revenue in the Philippine archipelago for the first six months of 1903 to be $4,440,424; for the same period in 1902 the receipts were $4,323,467.

A DISCOURSE ENTITLED "AN OLD QUESTION FOR THE NEW AGE."

The Rev. C. C. McNally, pastor of the Baptist Church, Sunday morning, the pastor of the Rev. Charles E. McNally presented an "An Old Question for the New Age" His text was from John 8:12. "I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Mr. McNally said:

The new question asked this question was dead in earnest. They asked it because the answer was of vital import to them. That word "Christ" was laden with a wealth of meaning for these Jewish people. They asked it because it was the question of the Greek "Christos," which in its turn inhered in the meaning that the Hebrews embodied in their word "Messiah." Around this word for hundreds of years all Jewish thought, feeling and action had revolved. The Pharisees and the Sadducees, the priests and the people, all looked upon the Messiah as the one who would bring about the redemption of Israel. The Messiah was the one who would bring about the redemption of Israel. The Messiah was the one who would bring about the redemption of Israel.

The Jews as they thought of the Messiah may be divided into two classes. Those whose conception was predominantly religious and spiritual, and those whose conception was predominantly political and temporal. The former were the Pharisees and the latter the Sadducees. The Pharisees were the more numerous and the more influential. They were the ones who looked upon the Messiah as the one who would bring about the redemption of Israel. The Sadducees were the more exclusive and the more aristocratic. They were the ones who looked upon the Messiah as the one who would bring about the redemption of Israel.

you look for kindness in vain, there is no fault, not the shadow of a fault, in the brand we thought that differentiated Him from others. In Him you find him expressed. Let the heart once come with Jesus and it needs no other light to see the truth. Him it is to What would have, Jesus alone. In touch with Him the soul is freed, it would have its needs satisfied, its hunger life realized. Surely He has come into life's darkness and the aspirations of the heart made Christ. Oh, soul, have you this morning from need supplied, satisfied and heart satisfied, the answer to the Christ? Believe Him for He has been given. If not for Him for His work's sake. Wife Accuses Her Father and Brother of Murder.

The body of Sam Garner was found in his own home at Piquette City late Friday night covered with knife wounds. His father-in-law, Albert Tidwell, and his brother-in-law, Will Tidwell, were spending the night in the house, and both of them denied any knowledge of the crime.

Mrs. Garner, however, made a different statement. She said that her father and brother came to the house Friday night and that at the time her husband was not at home, but that she was expecting him back at any moment. She said that her father had been drinking and that when he came in he complained about having lost his pocket book.

She said further that her father accused Mr. Garner, her husband, of stealing his pocket book, and said that when Garner came home he was either going to have the pocket book or Garner's blood.

According to her testimony, her husband finally came in and her father seized him by the collar and drew a knife on him, demanding that he give up the purse. Garner tried to protect himself, but Will Tidwell, who was lying on the bed, jumped up and came to the old man's assistance, and they threw Garner and stabbed him to death. The little 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Garner and the deceased man corroborated her mother's account of the tragedy as she saw it.

The accused emphatically deny any knowledge of the affair, whatever. They admit that they were sleeping in the house and the older man says that he was awakened at one time by a noise but paid no attention to it. Albert Tidwell is an old man 67 years old and his son is 35 years of age.

Cooper got in two more shots and broke his pistol by hitting one of the other negroes. He immediately secured help, but the two negroes were not found.

Hotel Burned.
Fire broke out in the rear of the Arlington hotel at Florence Friday night and was well under headway when first discovered. The department responded promptly, but was unable to control the flames, which seemed to be all over the house at once. The entire building and its contents were gutted. The management was preparing to discontinue the hotel business after the first of the month, so no inconvenience will be experienced by the traveling public. The building had $3,000 insurance.

Cotton at Selma.
The unprecedented receipt of nearly 45,000 bales of cotton within six weeks of the season and the unusually free selling prevailing has given the compresses and ware houses in Selma more than they could conveniently handle. FIRE IN VATICAN.

Burns Part of Library With Rare and Ancient Books.

That portion of the Vatican containing the hall of the inscriptions, where the pope gives his audience, and which is adjacent to the famous and spacious phylactery, or gallery of pictures, was burned Sunday. The smoke and flames were seen from a mile distant.

The first indication of fire was heard when smoke was seen issuing from the apartment of M. Wini, which is located above that of Father Marti, the librarian, who lives over the library. M. Wini is a celebrated French restorer of ancient manuscripts and the minister of the Vatican. He has been engaged in copying work, and his first reproductions have been selected for part of the Vatican's exhibit at the St. Louis exposition. It is supposed that M. Wini forgot to take proper precautions with his kitchen fire, which probably blazed up and ignited some nearby hangings.

The entire museum of inscriptions, the rooms of Father Marti, part of the library and the printing houses were entirely flooded with water.

It is impossible to reach even an approximate idea of the extent of damage. Many articles were saved, including some ancient and very valuable arms which were recently moved to the library from the Borgias apartment in order to make room for the new residence of the papal secretary of state.

Many things that escaped the flames were injured by water, especially the precious private library of Pope Leo.

PUNISHED FOR AN INSULT.
Knocked Down Repeatedly for Trampling the Confederate Flag.

Andrew Oleson, a gunner in the United States navy, stationed at the shipyard at Newport News, offered a gratuitous insult to the confederate flag in the presence of a number of Sons of Confederate Veterans.

The party had just returned from the ball given in honor of the sponsors and maids of honor of the grand camp of Virginia, Confederate Veterans. Oleson threw a small confederate flag to the floor and trampled it under foot.

Mayor Tabor Jones, of Hampton, who was in the crowd, knocked Oleson down, repeating the punishment five times.

DESERTERS

Did Not Make Those Records, Says Moody

In the course of a speech in bridge, Mass., Mr. Moody referred to the high record in practice had been made by deserters from other navies who had been offered to the American service a high pay offered. Mr. Moody said: "These results have been published by American officials. Our officers are, of course, American and of the 20,000 enlisted men, 10 per cent are native born; 10 per cent are naturalized citizens, and 80 per cent are aliens. We may have deserters from other navies in ranks. I know of none, however, if I learned of one I would discharge him."

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis. Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham, I was married for several years and no children were born. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and that I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me but after experimenting for several months, my husband became dissatisfied and one night when we were in bed, he told me that he had heard of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used it for three and one half months, improving steadily in health. In twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and happiness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we are something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, Mrs. L. C. Glover, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis. Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n."

Women should not fail to profit by the experience of these two women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow a druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

An Indiana Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: It is a pleasure for me to write and tell what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was sick for three years with change of life, and my physician thought a cancerous condition of the womb. During these three years I suffered untold agony. 'I cannot find words in which to express my bad feelings. I did not expect to ever see another well day. I read some of the testimonials recommending your medicine and decided to write to you and give your treatment a trial. 'Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to sleep. I have taken now six bottles and am so well I can do all kinds of work.'—Mrs. LIZZIE HINKLE, Salem, Ind."

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience of treating female ills. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and always helpful.

The Baby's First Tooth. It is a funny craze that urges the giving of baby's first milk-teeth, but it is positively rampant among deep-seated Parisian mammas. The giving of the first tooth is most carefully watched for, and afterward the little trifle is handed over to the jeweler. He polishes and trims the little tooth until it has all the appearance of a gem, and in a ring it is the place of a jewel. BISON IN MONTANA.

Success in Building up a Herd From Small Beginnings.

The University of Montana, Missoula, maintains a biological station near Flathead Lake, in the northwestern part of the State. Professor Merton J. Elrod, director of the station, describes in "A Biological Reconnaissance," published last year by the university, the herd of 130 buffaloes on the Flathead Indian Reservation. The herd, derived from thirty-six animals purchased in 1884 by Charles Allard and Michael Pablo, has in twenty years increased to more than 250 or ten times the original number. Many of the animals have been sold to show enterprises and to Eastern cities for parks and zoological gardens. The conditions here are more favorable for buffalo than in Yellowstone Park. The animals are constantly attended by a herder, and therefore are not afraid of man, while the Yellowstone Park herd is rarely seen.

The park herd also ranges at a high altitude, over seven thousand feet, where snows are deep and winters are long and severe, but the Flathead herd ranges at an altitude below three thousand feet, where deep snows do not occur, or hay and grain may be taken to the animals in a few hours. Their range does not exceed seventy to one hundred square miles, and the animals might be maintained in a much smaller range. The cows do not bear calves until they are four or five years old, and about half of them produce every year. The fertility of the herd is not decreasing. The herder keeps note of the increase, looks after the calves, and in fact the animals are much more carefully attended than the range cattle among which they graze.

Professor Elrod is of opinion that the success of this private enterprise should stimulate Congress to increase its efforts to save the buffalo from extinction. An appropriation of $8,000 would buy as large a herd as Allard and Pablo purchased in the beginning. With the same care the herd should increase to between 400 and 500 in twenty years. If a tract of land containing from fifty to one hundred square miles were set apart for a buffalo range, with an appropriation at the start of $15,000 and an annual appropriation of $5,000, there would be no difficulty in developing a herd that would be a credit to the nation. The care of the herd should be placed under the jurisdiction of the Biological Survey Department of Agriculture. It is hardly to be expected that the animals will thrive in Yellowstone Park, where the winters are long and severe, the summers short, and protection is afforded to wild animals which prey upon the calves.—Bulletin of the American Geographical Society.

Modern Lake Dweller on Lake Constance.

M. Henneberg, a great silk manufacturer, who recently retired from business, has built for himself on Lake Constance a habitation exactly after the model of a prehistoric lake dwelling shown in the Zurich Museum. The building, which is about two hundred feet off the coast of the lake, rests upon piles of seven yards above the level of the water. It consists of only one room, and its framework is made from the wood of the yew tree. Around the room a gallery extends of a width of some five feet or seven feet. The walls consist of willow wickerwork and mud plaster, the floor of hard mud and platted willow, and the ceiling of pressed straw. The walls are ornamented with designs drawn with coal and bullock's blood.

How a Farmer was freed from Misery

WORTHY of a higher recommendation than I can find words to express. This is what Mr. J. H. Plangman (of Sherman, Tex.) says of Doan's Kidney Pills. He tells his experience in the following words: "I was taken with a dull aching pain across the small of my back, directly over the kidneys. I paid small attention to this at first, thinking it would pass off. But instead of getting better it became worse and in a short time the pain centered through my left hip and down my left leg as far as the knee. This is precisely what kidney trouble will do with the body. It does not always show itself at first, but appears just in this way, when some unusual movement or action brings sharp pains and exhaustive aches, telling of sick kidneys."

So Mr. Plangman bore this out. Continuing, he says, "I did not know the cause of the trouble, but I am led to believe now that it was first brought about by jumping in and out of the wagon and in some way I may have strained my back. 'I was constantly growing worse,' he continues, 'and I became very much alarmed about my condition. I knew that something had to be done or serious results were sure to follow. I went to a specialist here in Sherman, and underwent a rigid examination. Then he relates how the doctor told him that it was a serious case, but that he could cure him for fifty dollars.'"

However, necessity knows no law and Mr. Plangman paid half down and took the treatment and followed it faithfully for four weeks. Naturally, he thought that he would soon be rid of the trouble, but in spite of the doctoring he goes on to add, "I was in such misery that it was almost impossible for me to do my work."

"It was at this juncture that Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and I procured some from the drug store of C. E. Crockett. I used these pills according to directions and to my surprise I was considerably relieved on the second day and in a short time completely cured."

This is the universal experience of those who have been sufferers from kidney trouble and who have been fortunate enough to test the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills.

There is nothing wonderful or magical about this remedy, it simply does the work by direct action on the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only and this accounts for their speedy and certain action.

Early indications of kidney trouble come from two sources, the back and the bladder. The back becomes weak and lame because the kidneys are sick, and relief from backache can only be complete when the kidneys are set right.

CLANTON, ALA.

A New York physician has discovered that fifteen babies are born in that great city every hour. This will be a surprise to those who have read the New York confidence man's claim that a "sucker" was born in Gotham every minute.

Those who value fish for their "gamy" quality in the catching of them will never care for catfish. But those who prize them for their food value may well establish the catfish far and above many of its more showy and pretentious comrades.

A new regulation of the Missouri University board of curators has opened a new profession for women. Each society in Columbia living in a chapter house must have a chaperone. She must be a professional, and is to be paid a salary. In addition to this the girls under her charge must provide her with theatre tickets, free rides in liveries, and see that she has a good time. Her board at the chapter house has to be furnished free, and the girls are to be responsible to her for their conduct. This rule, which was adopted at a recent meeting of the curators, will be rigidly enforced.

Alaska is divided by nature and by lack of transportation facilities into three sections—southeast Alaska, central, and northwestern. Owing to the present lack of communication and transportation between the different sections of Alaska, a territorial organization could be formed and maintained only by considerable difficulty and at great expense. For that reason many citizens of the district are by no means enthusiastic over the idea, and yet it will probably be realized in the not far distant future.

The talking photograph is now promised—that is, the photograph, with a phonographic annex or attachment, as it were, to go on twaddling as in life, and only arbitrary and occasional intermissions. It opens a wearisome prospect for posterity to have the family portrait album full of talking pictures, all going on at the same time, with the united tediousness of all the originals bunched up together. The old style, non-conversational, even as the oyster, is the best kind to live with and bids fair to hold its place in popular esteem for a while, at any rate.

The two-minutes-for-a-mile trotting mare Lou Dillon was almost unknown and unheard of a few months ago. Now her name will go thundering down the ages along with the names of Flora Temple and Dexter, of Maud S. and Sunol, of Nancy Hanks and Alix, of Axtell and Arion, of The Abbott and Crescens. Lucky girl, that Lou Dillon! And she is not of the type of the Lou that lingers longer—"Linger longer, Lou," as the music hall ditty puts it. She is in the bloom of dainty, blossoming youth, and she has no notion of lingering at any time or place.

There is a singular lack of marriages between European noblemen and American girls without fortunes. Such matches are by no means unknown in Europe, comments the Louisville Courier-Journal. Cases are recalled where British noblemen married concert hall girls and the like, where the brides had neither fortune nor character. But when the titled suitors cross the sea for their brides they generally capture the daughters of millionaires. The constant recurrence of this feature renders the theory that the marriages are love matches extremely improbable.

Pittsburg is to have a George Junior Republic, as a result of efforts of the women composing the juvenile court department of the Permanent Civic Committee. Plans for the establishment of the republic were discussed at the meeting of the department this week. The first step, raising funds with which to carry on the new feature of juvenile court work, has already been arranged for. All women's clubs, philanthropic and benevolent societies and organizations interested in children's welfare will be asked to co-operate. According to the plans of the women who are working for the children reached through the Juvenile Court, the republic in Pittsburg will be established on the lines followed by Mr. George and others who have founded similar institutions in New York and elsewhere. The scheme is to take children from the courtroom to the little community, unless their cases are otherwise disposed of by the judge.

THE NEW BANKING LAWS.

No. 522.) AN ACT (R. 364.) To provide for the examination and regulation of the business of banking in the state of Alabama.

Be it enacted by the legislature of Alabama, that—

Section 1. All banks, persons, firms and corporations doing a banking business in this state shall make to the state treasurer not less than two reports during each year, according to the form which may be prescribed by him, verified by an oath or affirmation of the executive officer or agent thereof, and in case of corporations by the president or cashier or secretary, attested by the signature of at least three of the directors. Such report shall exhibit in detail and under appropriate heads the resources and liabilities of said bank at the close of business on any past day specified by the treasurer not more than three days prior to the issue of the treasurer's call, which day for reports shall be uniform throughout the state, and shall be transmitted to the treasurer within five days after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him, and the same shall be published once in a newspaper published in the city or county in which the bank is located, at the expense of the said bank; proof of such publication shall be furnished by said bank to the treasurer as may be required by him. The treasurer shall also have power to call for special reports from any particular bank, whenever in his judgment the same are necessary in order to a full and complete knowledge of the condition of such bank.

Sec. 2. Any bank failing to furnish a report when requested by the treasurer as specified in the foregoing section, without satisfactory reasons shown to the treasurer, shall forfeit fifty dollars to the state for each violation, to be recovered of such defaulting bank in such manner as is now directed by law for the collection of monies due the state.

Sec. 3. No bank doing business in this state shall have a capital actually paid and employed in the business of less than twenty-five thousand dollars in towns of more than twenty-five hundred inhabitants, nor less than ten thousand dollars in towns of less than twenty-five hundred inhabitants.

Sec. 4. No bank, persons, firm or corporation doing a banking business shall be allowed to reduce cash in hand below 15 per centum of demand deposits, providing that three-fifths of said 15 per centum may consist of the balances due by banks and bankers to said bank.

Sec. 5. Whenever it shall appear to the treasurer that any bank has permitted its reserve fund to fall below the amount prescribed in the foregoing section, the treasurer shall at once notify such bank to make good such reserve; and if the said bank shall fail for thirty days thereafter to make good such reserve, it shall forfeit to the state twenty-five dollars for each day in excess of the said thirty days, to be collected by the state in the manner allowed by law for the collection of monies due the state.

Sec. 6. No bank, person, firm or corporation doing a banking business shall lend to any salaried officer, agent or employee of the bank without good security.

Sec. 7. No bank, person, firm or corporation doing a banking business shall be allowed to lend to any one person, firm or corporation unless such loan is amply secured by good collateral, or shall be approved by a majority of its board of directors, more than 10 per centum of its capital stock, surplus and undivided profits.

Sec. 8. Whenever, by reason of losses, a bank's capital is impaired, the shrinkage in said capital represented by said losses shall be charged on the books of said bank to profit and loss, so that the notes and bills discounted and loans made shown a debt due the bank, shall be the live and collectible assets of said bank.

Sec. 9. The governor of the state shall appoint a state bank examiner, who shall be a competent and experienced accountant; and not interested directly or indirectly in any national bank, and he shall receive a salary not to exceed two thousand dollars per annum and actual necessary traveling expenses. His term of office shall be the same as that of the treasurer, and he shall be subject to removal for cause by the governor.

Sec. 10. The bank examiner, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe the oath of office prescribed by the constitution, which shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and he shall give bond in the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, which bond shall be apportioned and with legal effect as prescribed by the provision of sections provided by the state auditor, payable, 2007 of the code of 1896 relating to official bonds. Such bond shall be filed and recorded in the office of the secretary of state. If the bank examiner shall disclose any information acquired by him in the discharge of his duties to any person not connected with the bank to which such information relates, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 11. The state examiner, during his term of office, shall not be an officer, agent or employee of any bank in this state, state or national, and he shall not be a shareholder or owner of any pecuniary interest in any bank subject to the provisions of this chapter, or in any national bank. He shall not be allowed to receive any commission, fee or reward to himself from any officer, agent or employee of any bank, state or national, doing business in this state, and the receiving of any such benefit by him shall be felony, and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not less than one nor more than five years. Any person so offering or giving any such commission, fee or reward to the state bank examiner, shall be guilty of a felony and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than five years.

Sec. 12. The bank examiner shall visit every bank and corporation chartered by the laws of this state and doing a banking business, at least once in each year, and at least twice in each year if it shall be practicable for him to do so. He shall not visit at stated times, nor shall he permit any one to know at what time he will visit any such banks or corporations. He shall carefully and thoroughly examine into the affairs of every bank, and make report to the treasurer immediately. He shall cover in said report all the subject matter that the law requires banks to report upon, and upon such other subjects necessary for the protection of depositors, creditors and stockholders thereof, as may be required of him by the treasurer. In addition to such visits, the treasurer may require him to visit any such bank at any time when in the treasurer's opinion the public interest demands. He shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the affairs of every bank, or corporation, chartered under the laws of this state and doing a banking business, and doing so to examine any of the officers and agents thereof on oath. The information which shall be obtained by the bank examiner under the provisions of this statute shall be for the purpose of ascertaining the true condition of the affairs of said banks, and shall not be disclosed by him to any person other than the state treasurer.

It shall be unlawful for the bank examiner to make or report any list of the names of the depositors in any bank or to disclose to any one information as to who are depositors or the amounts of the several deposits. The bank examiner making or reporting such list or disclosing such information shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine of not exceeding one thousand dollars, and shall also be liable to the person, firm or corporation whose affairs are so disclosed in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, which sum shall be recoverable against the bank examiner and the sureties on his official bond in any court having jurisdiction.

Sec. 13. The salary and necessary traveling expenses of the bank examiner shall be audited by the auditor and paid monthly by a warrant drawn by the auditor on the treasurer in favor of said bank examiner.

Sec. 14. The state bank examiner shall make, from his reports during the year, an annual report, which shall be published by the treasurer as a part of his annual report to the governor. The treasurer shall also procure a well bound book in which he shall record such report made to the governor, and also his annual report; which book shall remain in the office of the treasurer and be subject at all times to the inspection of the public.

Sec. 15. If any annual report of the state bank examiner is deemed of sufficient importance to the public by the governor, he may require the same published one time in one or more of the leading daily papers of the state.

Sec. 16. Whenever the treasurer finds that a bank or corporation chartered by the laws of this state and doing a banking business, is not in a solvent condition, he shall immediately report the condition of the bank to the governor, and it shall be the duty of the governor to direct the attorney general to institute proceedings in a court having jurisdiction in the county where the bank or parent bank is located, to put the bank in the hands of some competent person, who shall give bond in an amount to be fixed by the judge for the faithful discharge of his duties, and said person so appointed shall immediately take charge of the business of the said bank, collecting its assets and paying off its liabilities under the law and the rules of such court.

Sec. 17. The provisions of this chapter shall apply to all banks, except national banks, and to all trust companies and individuals doing a banking business, whether incorporated or not.

Sec. 18. The provisions of this act shall take effect January 1, 1904.

Sec. 19. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Morgan Will Inquire.

Senator Morgan says that soon after congress convenes in extra session he will introduce a resolution calling on the foreign relations committee of the senate to obtain from the state department a detailed report of the relations between the United States and Colombia under the treaty of 1846. According to Senator Morgan, the attitude of this country is not justified by a careful construction of the provisions of the treaty, and is at variance with precedents laid down by the United States. He says:

"This is the fourth time the United States has landed troops on the isthmus under cloak of the treaty. Heretofore it has been for the suppression of rioting and for the protection of Colombia."

ANNUAL REPORT

Made by the Railroad Commission to the Governor.

The annual report of the Alabama railroad commission has been filed with the governor. It covers not only the work done by the commission, but sets forth the important changes in the law regulating the work. With the new law giving the commission power to enforce its orders, much more interest centers in the action it may take on matters presented for adjustment.

In May of this year the commission heard an application filed in writing, signed by a very large number of citizens, praying for a general reduction of all the freight tariffs in Alabama. In the course of this hearing much evidence was introduced and the law covering the question involved was discussed at great length. The supreme court of the United States held, "That in fixing interstate rates the earnings on interstate business or the profits derived therefrom, could not be considered by the railroad commission."

The law of Alabama also provides that in revising the tariffs, the railroads must be allowed to yield a fair and just return upon the value of the road, its appurtenances and equipments. Following these rules, the commission denied the relief prayed for.

A rule was established that 10 per cent should be deducted from the sum of two local rates, which will result in a very material saving on all shipments passing over two or more railroads in Alabama.

The supreme court of Alabama has handed down an opinion in the case of J. L. Burke et al. vs. the N. C. & St. L. railway, in which it was held that while the commission had the power to order the removal of the depot for Guntersville from West City to Guntersville, yet the law did not provide any remedy for the enforcement of said order, and the application was therefore denied. The recent act of the legislature provides a remedy in such cases, and the commission has made a new order in the case, and upon the refusal of the railroad company to comply, the commission filed with the attorney general a certified copy of said order, and failure to comply therewith, and the matter will again be placed in the courts for adjudication.

The last legislature passed an act to provide for the manner of constructing and maintaining an union depot for the city of Mobile, by the different railroads entering the city. Under the terms of this act, should the railroads fail or refuse to comply with the requirements thereof, it is made the duty of the commission to take the necessary steps to enforce a compliance, but the time has not yet expired within which the railroads may comply.

In the United States court at Aniston Dee Ponder, counterfeiting, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years and to pay a fine of $500; James Shambles, counterfeiting, also pleaded guilty and was sentenced to fifteen months and $500 fine; Lee Williams, clerked, counterfeiting, pleaded not guilty. Iron Goes Through Pensacola.

Alabama foundries have contracted to export 50,000 tons of pig iron to European ports within the next three months, the shipments to be handled by the Louisville and Nashville, and made on the steamers of that company at Pensacola. The iron will be shipped on vessels taking cargoes of cotton, as ballast, and as a consequence a cheap rate will be made. Up to two years ago large quantities of pig iron were shipped through there to foreign countries, but it has since ceased, and six months ago an import cargo arrived for Birmingham foundries. It was stated at that time that the same iron which had been exported was eventually sent back to this country.

At Selma there is being erected a three-story office building and a plant for the manufacture of brick is being fitted out at a cost of $30,000.

A FALLING OFF

In the Cotton Crop as Shown by the Ginning Report.

A bulletin issued by the cotton ginners on the cotton ginned from the growth of the present year up to October 18th places the amount of 329,627 commercial bales as against 5,925,872 bales ginned up to the same date last year.

The complete returns on cotton production showed that 3.1 per cent of the total had been ginned prior to October 18th of that year but the percentage of the ginners prior to October 18th of this year cannot be known until the final report for the year is made. The statistics for the present year were collected by the ginners who found that 17,722 ginneries had been operated prior to October 18th, while at the corresponding date last year 21,000 ginneries had been operated. The comment made in the bulletin on the falling off of this year's production is the following:

"In comparing the statistics of the two years due allowance must be made for the different seasons of the two seasons."

"The following shows the production ginned in the same six weeks of the present year up to October 18th: Alabama, 4,000; Florida, 2,426; Georgia, 2,004; Kentucky, 211; Louisiana, 1,000; Mississippi, 479; Tennessee, 745; Texas, 1,000."

Henry Trost, a member of one of the oldest and most prominent of Jewish families, took his own life Sunday afternoon by leaping from the river bridge. He removed his coat and glasses before he leaped and left his name and address on his clothing. His body was recovered 15 minutes later and his clothes were found. Many restoratives were applied to revive him, but each attempt proved useless.

Mr. Trost was the oldest son of the late Colonel Joseph Trost, a brother to the members of the large white sale liquor house of Trost Brothers in Louisville. No reason is known for the deed.

TO QUIT THE CABINET.

Payne Wants to Leave and Shaw Is Not a Favorite.

There is talk just now of two men going out of the cabinet before the end of the president's term. They are Postmaster General Payne and Secretary of the Treasury Shaw. The former intimated his desire to quit some time ago, even before the postal investigation began, but he was said, was dissuaded by the president and agreed to remain where he was until the investigation affecting his department should be completed. People who pose as posted on inside secrets of high official life say that the talk of Shaw's retirement was a wish father-to-the-thought resultant; that Mr. Roosevelt has yearned to be rid of Shaw and the rest of the cabinet would be pleased to see him go.

Congressional Proceedings.

The fifty-ninth congress convened at its extraordinary session at noon Monday in accordance with the provisions of President Roosevelt for the purpose of enacting legislation to make effective the Cuban reciprocity treaty.

The formal proclamation of the congress in extraordinary session was read.

All the roll call assembly members were present and President Pro Tem Mr. Bacon, of Georgia, presented the election certificate of Senator Sherman H. Mallory, of Florida, who took the oath.

The senate was called to order by President Pro Tem Mr. Bacon and the session was opened by Clerk McDonald. The day was devoted simply to preliminary business and organization.

The old officers were re-elected and the rules of the fifty-ninth congress were adopted for the fifty-ninth congress. During the morning session, during which the minutes were read, an increase in the number of democratic representatives of the congress was noted.

More than two hours before the session was called to order the galleries were filled. Senator Hanna, who was elected to the senate in 1902, was one of the most prominent floral designs ever seen in the senate, a shield 11 by 12 inches. The offering bore the inscription: "Senator Mark Hanna from his friends, the Irish democrats of Cleveland."

Senator Gorman's triumph in the Maryland election was recognized by another large floral piece, a hand some wreath more than two feet in diameter.

Mr. Hitt, Illinois, who has been the chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the house, offered the following resolution:

"Resolved by the house of representatives, that the president be requested to communicate to the house, and to be incommunicable with the interest of the public service, all correspondence and other official documents relating to the recent revolt in the isthmus of Panama."

It was agreed to.

House.—A call of the roll by states presented a quorum, 350 having answered.

The clerk called for nomination for speaker. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the republican caucus, formally nominated Mr. Cannon.

Mr. Hay, of Virginia, chairman of the democratic caucus, nominated Mr. Williams, of Mississippi. No speeches were made in making the nominations.

The mention of Mr. Cannon's name was received with applause on the republican side, and the naming of Mr. Williams was greeted by the democrats. It was just seven minutes before Mr. Cannon announced the vote, showing Mr. Cannon to have received 193 votes and Mr. Williams, 106. Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, and Mr. Grosvenor, of Ohio, were appointed of a committee to notify Mr. Cannon of his election and to escort him to the speaker's chair.

Several hundred bills were introduced in the house. A statehood bill for New Mexico, introduced by DeLoe Roddy, has the distinction of being the first house bill of the fifty-ninth congress, and will be No. 1.

A bill giving congress the right to regulate trusts, to increase the postal free delivery carriers, to induce favorable employment of American ships, providing for a territorial form of government for Alaska, to abolish government by injunction, to elect senators by popular vote.

Representative Brownlow, the republican member from Tennessee, has introduced a bill appropriating a sufficient amount to erect a home here for aged and infirm colored people.

Alabama representatives drew very poor seats in the house. Barnett has a good one and Wiley has Mayor-elect McChesney, of New York, as seat mate. The others are away back.

All Alabama members were present except Representative Thompson.

Colombia Enters Protest.

The United States of Colombia has lodged a protest with the state department against the action of the United States in connection with the events which have occurred on the isthmus of Panama. The state department has the protest under consideration, but the nature of its reply, if any, or the time when it will be made is not known.

SECRETARY Wilson, of the department of agriculture, who has recently returned from a tour of Texas, says the boll weevil can only be eradicated by planting cotton early.

THE United States has determined not to allow troops to be embarked from any Columbian port for the new republic of Panama, and war ships will be stationed to prevent such embarkation.

In Congress the Democrats will not take action in regard to Panama until all the facts are known.
There are many ugly rumors about in Washington, but the Democrats will wait until these rumors are verified; they do not propose to delay the canal but will not condone wrong-doing.

STAR ROUTES IN CHILTON.

An advertisement has been issued by the Post Office Department inviting proposals for carrying the mails on all star routes in Alabama for the contract term of four years, commencing July 1, 1904. No proposal substituted under this advertisement will be considered unless the bidder will agree to live on or contiguous to the route and give the service his personal attention; this will place the routes in the hands of local bidders to the exclusion of outside or speculative contractors. Bids and full information can be obtained from any postmaster. Bids will be received at the office of the Second Assistant Post Master General,
Washington, D. C., until four p.m.
December 1, 1903.

The following is a list of routes in Chilton county: Maplesville to Verbena; Verbena to Tus; Hubbard to Jemison; Flixico to Verbena; Clanton to Jumbo; Burwell to Verbena.

TO COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS AND TEACHERS.

There seems to have been created, in some way, a mistaken idea as to the meaning and force of a law passed by the last Legislature relative to the teaching of Agriculture in the public schools of the state. The law is plain and easily understood. It provides that the elementary principles of agriculture shall be taught as regularly as other branches are taught, and makes no requirement as to the grade in which the subject shall be taught or the time it shall be introduced into the course of study. The teacher or other proper school officer is the judge as to what pupils shall study the subject and at what time of the term the class shall be organized. Towns of five hundred inhabitants or more are specifically exempted from the provisions of the law. The attention of teachers should be directed to the provisions of the law which requires that after October 1st, 1904, all teachers shall be examined on this subject;
the first examination on the elementary principles of agriculture will be given in January, 1905.

Yours very truly,
ISAAC W. HILL,
Superintendent of Education.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The Fall term of circuit court commenced Monday, Judge John G. Winter, the judge appointed for the new circuit, presiding. He was welcomed on his arrival in town by the members of the Clanton bar and others, and at once proceeded to open court.

The grand and petit juries were empanelled, and the Judge addressed the grand jury, making a very interesting and effective charge to them.

W. A. Mims was chosen foreman of the grand jury, and Robert Jones bailiff. At the conclusion of the Judge's charge, the grand jury retired to their room, with Mr. F.
Lloyd Tate, the new solicitor, and at this writing, Wednesday 5 p.m., are still in session.

Following are the juries empan-nelled:

GRAND JURY.

W. A. Huckabee, J. N. Outcopper, R.
T. Robinson, J. M. Askles, J. G. Smitherman, Dolly Atkinson, W. A. Mims, H. B. Rodgers, J. R. Thomas, R. W.
Gandy, W. H. Cox, B. G. Foster, Jr., John M. Gotthard, W. L. Nix, T. J. Martin, John Edwards, J. M. Baker.

PETIT JURIES.

No. 1—W. F. Teel, J. E. Bearden, James Smitherman, Marion Marcus, S.
S. Scott, Isaiah Friday, Walter Foster,
J. M. Friday, G. W. Hill, T. L. Killings-worth, E. W. Honeycutt, F. M. Halley, No. 2—John Killingsworth, H. C. Latham, W. T. Mahan, J. M. Benn, Ed Willie, N. J. Maddox, G. W. Sorrell, Bowen
Jones, Ella Mims, L. O. Burnett, G. W.
Lawery, J. H. Popwell.

No. 3—Reuben Price, John B. Moore,
Rush Baker, D. C. Cooley, George Gotthard, Hugh Williams, John Mims.

The cases on the docket were not of any great public interest, and the following were the principle disposed of:

Mrs. Josie Lee Henry vs. L. & N.
R. R., suit for $10,000 damages;
verdict for defendant.

Miss Flossie May Henry vs. L. & N. R. R., suit for $5,000 damages;
verdict for defendant.

In the case of I. B. Edwards vs.
Thomas Driver, damage suit for $5, 000, the plaintiff failed to appear and the case was dismissed on application of the defendant.

By Wednesday morning all the cases set for that day having been disposed of on Tuesday, the Judge adjourned court until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. There is only seven cases left on the docket:

It appears probable, from the number of witnesses summoned, that the grand jury may not adjourn until late Friday or possibly Saturday and we are unable to publish their report this week, as is our usual custom.

PRESIDENT Roosevelt's referees held a meeting and conference at Montgomery Tuesday and passed the following resolution:

Resolved, in the election of delegates to the national republican convention it is declared the policy and intention of the president's referees and his friends in Alabama to send to the national convention a delegation composed of white and colored republicans and to place upon the various executive committees of the party in Alabama some colored republicans.

How does this suit our friends who have been declaring that the colored man is no longer to have any part in Republican affairs?

Woodmen of the World.

A Lodge of Woodmen of the World was organized at Clanton Monday night with twenty-one members, and J. O. Middleton as Grand Consul Commander. Messrs.
Cunningham and Walker came down from Birmingham to assist in the organization.

Death of an Estimable Lady.

The death of Mrs. Mary Reinhardt which occurred on Sunday, Nov. 1, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Potts, Clanton, was rather unexpected, the good lady succumbing to an attack of paralysis. She was born in Germany 66 years ago, and for forty years has lived in the United States, several years having been spent in Cullman. For about four years she has lived here with her son-in-law Mr. J. M. Potts. The remains were carried to Cullman for interment.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Nov. 9, 1903.
The election is over and the democracy has much to congratulate itself for. This is a time for democratic jubilation and elation. In every state where the democrats made the attempt they either defeated the republicans or cut down the majority in such a manner as to give encouragement to every democrat in the land. Only in the single state of Ohio were we defeated worse than we expected to be. No democrat in the country expected rom L. Johnson to be elected governor. He did not expect it himself. He was fighting for the legislature to defeat Mark Hanna for the United States Senate. He made a gallant fight and with right principle. He preached the gospel of humanity to the people of his state, the gospel of the people's rights as against the rights of the corporation, and it is a gospel that must in the end prevail or the people not alone of his state but of the entire nation will have sacrificed their birthright on the altar of corporate greed. His defeat and the defeat of the ticket and the principles he represented must be attributed to the defection in the ranks of the democratic party in Ohio and to the lavish use of money at the polls and before the election. Some day those people in the State of Ohio will see and know the truth and it will be a democratic state. In the meantime the only thing those patriot in Ohio can do is to pick their flints and keep their powder
dry. There will be another battle next year and the indications from the battle of the 3rd of this month presage a glorious victory.

It is the consensus of democratic opinion here among the clans of gathering democrats who come to the assembling of the Fifty-eighth Congress, that the democrats have much in the election at which to rejoice. We more than held our own in the state of Massachusetts, we kept our own in the little state of Rhode Island by re-electing our governor; we carried the state of Maryland not only for the state ticket but for the United States Senator; we carried Kentucky by an increased majority which eternally puts the kibosh on republican assassination in that state; we reduced the majority in the rockrib-bed republican state of Iowa by at least 20,000, and we made a clean sweep of the great city of New York. The latter was a great victory for more than one reason. It was a victory for the great common people, for home rule, for democratic methods, and a defeat for hypocrisy, false pretense, the rule of the corporation and the aristocrat, a cold bath for the bootlicks and sycophants who whine about the knees of predatory wealth.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs.
Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.
Be sure that this picture is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

COTTON WAREHOUSES.

The movement that has been started this season to establish warehouses throughout the south in which the cotton can be stored and to issue warehouse receipts upon which the owner of the cotton can borrow the money he may need, may in time work a complete revolution in the handling of the American cotton crop. Some time ago the Commercial told something of the plans of the warehouse company that is already establishing fine warehouses in a number of southern cities, and since then there have been all sorts of ideas expressed about what some have been pleased to term the new cotton trust.

"It would not only benefit the southern cotton raisers if there were proper warehouses in the south, conducted on the up-to-date business methods of the warehouses of today," said one well posted cotton man, "but it would benefit the millions of New England to have the cotton stored in the south until they get ready to use it than to have it in Liverpool where they can get it.
It would be a splendid thing for the southern manufacturer, and you must recognize the establishment of great vested interests in the manufacture of cotton goods along the foot hills of the Allegheny mountains during the past few years.
Ten years ago the southern cotton manufacture was a very small factor in the price equation while today the southern manufactures consume about 20 per cent of the American growth.

"The whole method of handling cotton will be changed in a few years," he continued. "There will be warehouses all over the south, and the farmer will not haul his cotton into town the day it is picked and accept whatever price he can get for it. The men who have been charging the farmer a dollar or two a bale commission for handling his cotton may kick, but the change will come. To try any object to improve business methods is just as important as to object to the introduction of improved machinery.
The present system of handling cotton is an outgrowth of a poverty in the south that does not exist today.
The farmer could get cash for his cotton, but he could not put it away and borrow money on it, and had to sell for whatever he could get.

"There is not better security in the world today than cotton well warehoused, and the grower will be able to borrow very close to the full value of his cotton; then he can hold it until the spindles of the world want it, and get what it is worth. "No speculator would ever be strong enough to secure control of the 4,- 500,000 or 5,000,000 bales that should be held in this country. "I look to see within a very few years warehouses all over the south, on whose certificate the great trust companies will loan all the money the south needs and as a result I expect to see the cotton grower reaping profits that have always gone to some one else."—N.Y.Commercial.

HAPPY WOMEN.
Mrs. Pare, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent resident of Glasgow, Kentucky, says: "I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides a bad back, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal, and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound, and I feel much better in every way."

Before and above all things, however, what is wanted is a clean gastrointestinal canal, and his claim is that water, properly used, is the best agent to effect that cleansing. On a part with this canal in importance are the eliminative tissues and organs of the system, the kidneys, mucous membrane and skin. What therapeutic agent, properly used, is better than water? After all the assimilative and eliminative organs and tissues have been thoroughly rinsed with pure soft water, then, if it be still necessary to administer a chemical agent, one may be selected that will, with these organs and tissues in better condition work wonders. If you are so foolish as to allow yourself to become foul from head to foot, cleanse yourself with water before resorting to chemical aids.

How will your cough be tonight? Worse, probably. For it's first a cold, then a cough, then bronchitis or pneumonia, and at last consumption. Coughs always tend downward. Stop this downward tendency by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

HAPPY WOMEN.
Mrs. Pare, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent resident of Glasgow, Kentucky, says: "I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides a bad back, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal, and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound, and I feel much better in every way."

Water for the Stomach.
The alimentary receptacle, the stomach or vat in which foods and liquids are received and mixed, says Health, is habitually converted by many persons into a chemical retort for all sorts of drugs and remedies, with the view of reaching and relieving the ills of various organs of the body, from dandruff to corns.

Before and above all things, however, what is wanted is a clean gastrointestinal canal, and his claim is that water, properly used, is the best agent to effect that cleansing. On a part with this canal in importance are the eliminative tissues and organs of the system, the kidneys, mucous membrane and skin. What therapeutic agent, properly used, is better than water? After all the assimilative and eliminative organs and tissues have been thoroughly rinsed with pure soft water, then, if it be still necessary to administer a chemical agent, one may be selected that will, with these organs and tissues in better condition work wonders. If you are so foolish as to allow yourself to become foul from head to foot, cleanse yourself with water before resorting to chemical aids.

MARSHALL FIELD AND CO.'S WAREHOUSE MANAGER
Cured of Catarrh of Kidneys by Peruna.

HON. JOHN T. SHEAHAN, OF CHICAGO.
Hon. John T. Sheahan, who has been for seventeen years manager of Marshall Field & Co.'s wholesale warehouse, and is corporal 2d Regiment Infantry, 1 N. G., writes the following letter from 3753 Indiana Avenue, Flat Six, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Last summer I caught a cold which seemed to settle in my kidneys and affected them badly. I tried a couple of kidney remedies largely advertised, but they did not help me any. One of my foremen told me of the great help he had received in using Peruna in a similar case, and I at once procured some.

"It was indeed a blessing to me, as I am on my feet a large part of the day, and trouble such as I had affected me seriously, but four bottles of Peruna cured me entirely and I would not be without it for three months' salary."—JOHN T. SHEAHAN.

Mr. Jacob Fleg writes from 44 Summer Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I am now a new man at the age of seventy-five years, thanks to your wonderful remedy Peruna."

Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous lining of the kidneys, also called "Bright's disease," may be either acute or chronic. The acute form produces symptoms of such prominence that the serious nature of the disease is at once suspected, but the chronic variety may come on so gradually and insidiously that its presence is not suspected until after it has fastened itself thoroughly upon its victims.

At the appearance of the first symptom Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once at the very root of the disease.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

(From the Aftonian, Kan., Daily Globe.)

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awoken in the middle of the night by a whooping from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burgars. There used to be an old fashioned remedy for croup, known as have syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Clanton, Drug Co. and A. Horn Thorsby.

She Will Keep Her Word.

When Grandmother Pettigill makes up her mind, she is as firm as a rock. Nothing can move her. Perhaps it was on this account that when she returned from the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Shrubville and made such a determined declaration nobody attempted to influence her.

"I've been there, and it's over with," she said. "and now I'm home safe after all the noise and hands and scared horses and crying children and men making speeches. I want to tell you one thing. I shan't ever go to another centennial in Shrubville, no matter what the circumstances are and no matter who asks me. You children may as well bear that in mind."

A Serious Matter.

"So he's trying to live on other people's brains," said the publisher indignantly.

"What's the trouble? Has some one been stealing the ideas from your books?"

"I suppose so. But that's a minor matter. They're trying to coax away the man who writes my advertisements."—Washington Star.

His Conscience.

First Bohemian (to second ditto)—I can't for the life of me think why you wasted all that time haggling with that tailor chap and beating him down when you know, old chap, you won't be able to pay him at all.

Second Bohemian—Ah, that's it! I have a conscience. I want the poor chap to lose as little as possible.

"Address as Above."

There is one lawyer in Brooklyn who will never again make use of Latin phrases in writing business letters. A short time ago he had to write a letter to a client in a neighboring city regarding an important lawsuit that was to come up before the court in the course of a few days. The information he solicited was highly essential to his case. In writing this epistle he made use of a letter head with his printed address at the top. In closing his letter he signed himself thus, "John Langdon, address as supra."

After waiting several days for the reply, which did not come, he again wrote his procrastinating client and asked why he had not sooner answered his first letter. The next day he received a reply in which the client said that he had answered the letter and addressed it to "John Langdon, 'Ut Supra, N. Y.'"

Grapes.

"Grapes dissolve and dislodge gravel and calculi," says the doctor. They bring the stomach and bowels to a healthy condition. Even the consumptive finds new life in them and should take grape juice by the tumblerful daily, as it makes new, rich blood. It builds up the tissues and feeds starved nerves. It is also cleansing.

Lightning Rapidity.

It is absolutely impossible for us to conceive of the rapidity and brilliancy of lightning. It has been estimated that a flash occupies less than a one-millionth part of a second. As one-tenth of a second is needed for the full effect of any light upon the eye, we get only a very faint idea of the brilliancy of the flash.

Case for the Condition.

"You don't shine so brilliantly as of yore," remarked the oil.

"No," said the wick; "I have been turned down by Miss Maude because that young simpleton is coming."—Town and Country.

LIVER TROUBLES

"I find Theford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my liver after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly you to your druggist and secure a package of Theford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Theford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims as many victims as consumption. A 25-cent package of Theford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

"I used Theford's Black-Draught for liver and kidney complaints and found nothing to equal it."—WILLIAM COFFMAN, Marshall, Ill.

Burial Alive.

Though it is possible that cases of burial of living persons may still occur, fortunately they are more rare than in former times. Even the doctor's orders against interment were not always obeyed, for the Gentleman's Magazine of 1751 relates the case of Richard Carson of Hay, Herefordshire, England, who was supposed to have died, but a doctor declared that Carson still lived and ordered that he was not to be buried. His relatives paid no heed to the injunction, and the body was committed to the grave next day. A person passing through the churchyard heard a noise and prevailed on the supposed corpse was found in a profuse sweat and bleeding at the nose. Unfortunately the man was beyond recovery and soon died.

A change in the weather, a week, and a pleasant change. The usually warm weather of this season of the year we have been having for the last few weeks. The months human nature has a change and gladly welcome cooler weather and the advent of Jack Frost. The bracing today (Wednesday) is invigorating people on the streets move pretty lively, and the jurors feel its influence, it braces up to mete out justice in a more impartial manner. I believe the weather has a great influence on jurors as well as all other everyday people.

Clerks of the Chilton County Association are requested to send to the Banner office the supply of minutes for their minutes, they are already. The minutes will be finished next. The Weogufka Association were finished a couple of days ago and are all delivered.

This has been a very quiet court everything has moved along nicely. Perhaps the social of court time is the most enjoyable part of it. From all parts of the county we meet old friends, ever old times, enquire after long companions and find "some gone to lands far distant" and have made the last long journey which knows no ending.

Judge Winter has made a most pleasant impression upon the members of the bar and the public generally, and it is a safe prediction that the new circuit will be a good thing and we hope Judge Winter will long live to make his biennial visits and make strict justice to all. Mr. Lloyd Tate, the circuit solicitor, a pleasant gentleman who adheres strictly to the business of the law, gives all information demanded and is affable and agreeable all the time.

To win his first case in court is a distinction not gained by every lawyer, and I am pleased to know that Osmond Middleton gained that distinction to day. It augurs well for his future. Osmond is a young lawyer who has studied diligently and is now making good use of the knowledge he has acquired. There is a bright future in store for Osmond Middleton.

Albert Headley's new store house getting up and will be a great improvement to the depot corner now completed. Mrs. McKee is building a four roomed residence on her property and a new one will be opened up in that direction.

They do not malady no matter how severe and irrespective of old age, rheumatism, Jaundice, Fever, Constipation, all yield to this perfect Pill. Write to Clanton Drug Co., Hopkins.

Lockhart.

If you will pardon an intrusion of your valued columns, to an old Chiltonian, I will give you a brief description of Lockhart. Of course the big mill here is owned by the Jackson Lumber co, and is a sister mill to the one at Riderville, the cut is 145,000 feet per day of 11 hours, and the men that manage it are members of the firm Mr Harlay, the general manager, is a man of sound judgment, liberal in his ideas, and very ambitious to make the mill a success. Under his able management he has transformed a tract of pine wood into a snug town and the end is not yet in sight; the office buildings are well equipped for the transaction of business; the store is large and commodious the various departments of the plant are built with an eye for the convenience and proper transaction of the business to be done, and on the whole are artistically arranged.

John B Rider, the secretary, stays here a great deal of his time, and to himself and the able superintendent, Fred Hughes, Mr Harlay may give credit for carrying out his plans. Mr Ingersoll, of Riderville, superintendent pro tem, has endeavored himself to all the employees with whom he has come in contact; he is a hustler, as we say in mill parlance, the smallest detail cannot escape his watchful eye, and the writer is indebted to him for several lessons on "How to keep a happy home properly," in fact several of us would like to see him stay. McGee of the mill, Ruff of the planer, Bearden of the dry kiln, Hamilton of the store, are all men with fine attainments, kind and considerate in their ways, but movers in their different works, and it is no wonder why everything moves so smoothly.

E H Blacklock, a Maplesville boy, is master mechanic and superintendent of motive power, well equipped in his profession for any kind of power work, he is a valued employee, surrounded by a corps of well trained mechanics, nothing is left undone; the vast machinery is carefully looked after by his assistant, Dock Cunningham, of Riderville, who is looked for engineer of the new locomotive, so you see the Chiltonians are even in this remote corner of Alabama working out their destiny, in a paper next week I will give for a description, the workings of the mill from an employees standpoint.

New Machine Installed.
The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Ry. Company are having a mixing machine placed in their plant with which, it is estimated, the company will be enabled to double the capacity of the steel plant with the same force that is now employed.

Raw pig iron will be carried from the furnaces into this machine, which has a capacity of nine or ten tons, where the iron is thoroughly mixed. From the machine it is carried to the open hearth furnaces, where it is made into steel. In addition to the labor and time that will be saved by this machine it is said that the amount of scrap iron used in manufacturing steel will be greatly diminished.

Oscar Scott was the victim of an accident in East Florence Thursday morning. Just before a switch engine on the Louisville and Nashville railroad reached the coal bin of the Ashcraft cotton mills he swung on the engine, but his foot slipped and he was caught between the engine and the coal bin and rolled the entire distance, receiving injuries from which he died five hours later. One arm was broken twice, his hip bones were broken and torn loose from the spinal column, four ribs were broken, his face cut and he received internal injuries. He was conscious after the accident and stated that he had boarded the engine to go to Sheffield.

The 50,000 barrels, it is estimated, cost about $100,000.

PAY ROLL STATISTICS.

Compilation of Census Bureau Made Public.

The census bureau promulgated a report on wages of employees in manufacturing establishments. From the actual pay rolls of 120 manufacturing establishments employing in 1900 about 230,000 employees, 204 different occupations in 54 industries, have been tabulated. In the cotton manufacturing industry between 1890 and 1900 wages of both men and women increased 1 in the New England states, but showed little change in the south. For females there was little change. Wages in carpet and knitting mills show little change. In the agricultural implement occupations, involving mainly the central states, increases of wages have occurred with few exceptions.

Slight increases are reported in the lumber and planing mills in the central and Pacific states. Rates in car shops fell. In the foundries and metal working industry there appears to have been little variation in rates. Wages are highest in the Pacific and lowest in the southern states.

The report gives returns from blast furnaces, puddling furnaces, rolling mills, Bessemer converters and open hearth furnaces. Owing to the prevalence of turn or tour duty in this industry, the rates given are for two weeks' work, instead of a single week. In the middle states, the middle half were paid at rates of from $15 to $27 in 1900, and from $15 to $28 in 1890 for the two weeks' work. In the southern states the middle range at both periods is from $13 to $26; and in the central states at both periods the rates are about the same, the middle half ranging from $21 to $30 in 1900, and from $21 to $31 in 1890. Cigar factory wages are practically unchanged.

NOT BINDING.

New York Judge Says This of the Anthracite Commission Findings.

Judge Auten, of Sunburn, Pa., has rendered an opinion in which he decides that in the eyes of the law the decision of the anthracite strike commission is not binding on either the miners or the operators. This is the first legal decision on the subject.

The matter was brought to court by the Llewellyn Mining Company. The company refused the back wages allotted by the strike commission and the miners of the Royal Oak colliery brought suit before Justice of the Peace Lloyd for the wages. The justice gave judgment in favor of the miners. The company then began mandamus proceedings against Judge Lloyd and the higher court decided in favor of the company.

Found the Old Letter.

The historic letter of General Grant accepting the nomination to the presidency, and ending with "Let us have peace," has been found among some waste papers at Hartford, Conn.

The letter was addressed to General Joseph R. Hawley, president of the national union republican convention. After General Hawley went to Washington as senator the letter disappeared and was believed to have been lost.

Workmen taking waste paper from the cellar of the Courant building to send to the rag man tossed out a bulky envelope, which was picked up by the man in charge and taken to the office. It proved to contain the long-lost epistle, the last paragraph of which reads:

"Peace and universal prosperity, its consequence, with economy of the administration, will lift the burden of taxation while it constantly reduces the national debt. Let us have peace."

The letter is dated May 29, 1868.

The Mississippi insane hospital is the only eleemosynary institution in the state that annually turns back into the state treasury a portion of its support appropriation made by the legislature. Superintendent Mitchell announces that the institution will turn over to the treasury a balance of $38,000 remaining from the appropriation for the biennial period just ended.

Hurt in a Mine.

W. G. Vail, a young engineer, who is a member of one of the engineering corps of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Company, was seriously injured while riding in one of the cars coming out of the mines near Pratt City. He was riding in one of the hauling cars and was rolling up a tape line. He was so intent on his work that he did not bend over as the car was nearing a low place in the roof of the shaft. The wheels of the car hit something on the track and the young man was caught between the car and the roof and his spinal cord sprained.

Lost Both Legs.

Robert Wilson, a white carpenter, was run over by a switch engine in the Southern railroad shops at Selma Wednesday and had both of his legs mashed off close to his body, and will very probably die from the effects of the injuries.

Wilson was walking with a long plank on his shoulder and stepped over on the track where the engine was, when the front car hit him and knocked down and ran over his legs.

BOTH EXPECTED TROUBLE.

And When They Met Armour Shot and Killed Little.

At Morris Saturday morning Thomas K. Armour shot and killed Baby L. Little with a double-barreled shotgun. The Armour brothers and Little brothers have been on bad terms for some time and were going armed with shotguns.

The crisis came as Little walked by a store with his gun and Armour shot. Armour escaped and has not been arrested yet.

The Armour brothers were together at the time. There has been a feud between Little and one of the Armours for about a year. About six weeks ago Armour accused Little of stealing some moccasins from him. Both men were drinking and a fight ensued in which Little seriously wounded his antagonist. It is understood that Armour vowed vengeance and this affair is the result. S. M. Miller, an old man of sixty, who is supposed to have had a hand in the affair, is under arrest.

France's Population.

Is rapidly decreasing, not by emigration, but because the death rate is greater than the birth rate. People are dying faster than they are born. According to the returns of the bureau of vital statistics there were 25,888 more deaths than births in France last year, and 20,000 fewer births than during the previous year, while the increase in the number of deaths was 27,062. The record shows only 227,297 births for a population of more than 39,000,000. There was a slight increase in the number of marriages and a slight decrease in the number of divorces, which fell off from 7,179 to 7,157. There were 16,815 more boys born than girls. Among the various remedies to arrest the decay of France it is proposed to offer prizes for large families, the remission of taxes to people who have a number of sons, the extra taxation of childless families and bachelors, and one interesting plan is to make bachelors ineligible for official positions under the government and the municipalities. Another ingenious gentleman suggests that married men and fathers of children be exempt from military service.

GONE TO AFRICA.

For Families of Little People for St. Louis Fair.

Rev. S. P. Vermer, of Tuscaloosa, has started to secure an exhibit for the world's fair at St. Louis. Mr. Vermer was a missionary to Africa for several years. It is desired that he secure a number of dwarfs who are aborigines of Africa and are the size of a 12-year-old child.

They speak a language of their own with which Mr. Vermer became acquainted, and live a hidden life in their villages in the depths of the forest. They are the least known of all aboriginal tribes and are extraordinarily shy. Four of these pigmy families are to be brought over by Mr. Vermer, together with their families and houses, and they are to live on the exposition grounds. Mr. Vermer expects to return about the middle of April.

Centennial of Church.

The "Church of the Presidents," as the New York Avenue Presbyterian church is known, because of the large number of presidents who have worshipped there, will observe its one hundredth anniversary during this week.

John Quincy Adams was identified with the Second Presbyterian church and once rescued it from bankruptcy. President Andrew Jackson attended the Second church. Among the other presidents who attended the two oldest churches and the New York Avenue church were James K. Polk, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson.

Among the distinguished men who now worship at the New York Presbyterian church are Associate Justice John M. Harlan, of the supreme court, Secretary Wilson of the agricultural department, Senator Gorman of Maryland, Senators Burrows and Alger of Michigan, Senator Blackburn of Kentucky and other members of congress and government officials.

Dead on the Track.

Lying by the side of the Louisville and Nashville railroad track at New Decatur Sunday was the body of a man. The body was on one side of the track and the head on the other. The man was Milford Schlegelshar, a mechanic in the Louisville and Nashville railroad shops. The train had passed over his body, cutting his head off. By some it is thought that he was killed by footpads and placed on the track to cover up the crime.

Louisiana legislature may make laws against the boll weevil.

A mysterious robbery of jewels at Jarrow has been traced to a Jew. She had a predilection for gold and pearl collar and cuff buttons.

A railroad agent lost a package containing $1,000 near Pineapple. Two negro men were later found and two brand new ten dollar bills were found on them. Authorities are investigating.

Senator a Suicide.

Early Thursday F. B. Neal, assistant cashier of the Merchants' bank of Jackson, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He had been ill for some weeks and sent his wife down stairs for some water, and while she was gone shot himself.

He was one of the wealthiest citizens of the city and was state senator from Hinds and Warren counties and prominent in state politics.

The nomination of Robert Shaw.

Oliver, of New York, to be assistant secretary of war was ordered to be favorably reported on by the senate committee on military affairs. No action was taken on the nomination of Brigadier Leonard Wood to be major general, in accordance with the request made in executive session by Senator Teller that he be given an opportunity to make inquiries regarding General Wood's military record.

Fatally Scalded.

Hardy, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Palmer, of Bessemer, was fatally scalded Thursday afternoon by falling backward into a tub of hot water. The little fellow was out in the yard when the accident occurred, and Mrs. Palmer had just stepped into the house, and the screams of the child attracted her.

Our Daily Life.

He live their lives like a novel. Every chapter has a bearing on the next. But most of us live as if we thought them a series of disconnected episodes, which have no connection with each other.

For this sign is respected among the hunters as sacredly as marks and brands are among stockmen. Playing 'Possum.
That certain insects, birds, mammals and reptiles habitually pretend to be dead when danger threatens them is a well-known fact, but it is generally believed that this stratagem is resorted to only by animals. In South America, however, there is a plant—a species of mimosa—which resorts to death-feigning, evidently for the purpose of preventing grass-eating animals from eating it. In its natural state this plant has a vivid green hue; but directly it is touched by a human finger, or by any live animal, it collapses into a tangle of apparently dead and withered stems. Sensitiveness to touch is, of course, the cause of this remarkable behavior.

Ingenious Scheme.
The French railway companies have issued to all stations an album which contains pictures of every possible article that a traveler is likely to have about him. Owing to the great number of passengers who are unable to speak French, it is often found difficult to trace lost articles from the description given. Now all that a passenger has to do is to point to the missing articles in the album.

There are no frills, no bows, no fringes, no tassels, no marbled mantelpieces are strictly forbidden; but some fine old houses have a few of these mantels, which their owners are proud to show. They are, slightly, are too handsome to be common.

THE BANNER

LET THE PEOPLE RULE

CLANTON, ALA. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1903

NO. 6

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

After the bustle and whirl of one would expect Clanton to be pretty quiet, but that has not been the case this week. Business has been quite lively and lots of people in town all the time. Clanton is getting to be quite metropolitan, and some of these days you will be seeing electric cars on our streets, and all sorts of things going on, perhaps.

Mr. Clerks of the Chilton County and the Unity Baptist Associations, your minutes are ready waiting for you at the Banner office, and you will be obliging us by mailing or sending for them at our earliest convenience. You are not coming to town your- selves, but some of your neighbors will be traveling this way, and if you ask them to call for your minutes, of course they will cheerfully do so. For Chilton county folks are the most accommodating people in the world. The Clerks of the Associations very properly insist upon minutes being printed as soon as practicable after the Associations meet, and it remains with you to have them distributed among your people.

This is Thanksgiving Day and we may all pause from our busy time enough to return thanks to Him who doeth all things well. A plentiful harvest and a prosperous year. Clanton merchants, most of them, have agreed to have a special service at the Baptist church to "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Concord.

Everything is still flourishing, as there is no more fever in our community. Mrs. R. F. Wyatt, we hope, is improving. Quite a number of our Sunday school visited the burial of Mr. Maddox Sunday at the cemetery at Walnut Creek church. Sympathy and prayers are for the bereaved family.

Mrs. Armstrong gave Mrs. Wyatt a visit Saturday afternoon. W. W. Robinson and wife were home visitors to relatives, Mr. T. G. Wyatt, last Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wyatt visited her mother and sister Saturday and Sunday, near Providence.

Some of the young boys are having a jolly time now going to school.

Well, Christmas is drawing near and people are making ready for the other—the devil or the Lord. Just think, dear reader, for a moment, if you knew that death was near which would you make ready for. I can say for you, it would be the Lord. God in His great mercy lets us live and blesses us with more blessings than we can count, then we will go on in rioting and drunkenness and oh, what a time it is for us if we do. I would like to see God my all and all in heaven and earth that everyone would say, while in pain and suffering, health and happiness, take away from me wine and strong drink, it ruins everyone who tastes it. It breaks mother and father's hearts and it makes many loving wives sad and children cry. Oh, who would partake of such rotten stuff. So I will say no more. I hope everyone may consider the ruin of strong drink, and this may be read by many.

Stanton, Nov. 23, 1903
It has been several years since I saw the town of Clanton. I was there court week, and Clanton has improved wonderfully. Brick business houses quite a number, and new ones going up, it ought to please any citizen to note the improvement, not only in Clanton, but all over the county. The people in Chilton are coming and coming right fast. I heard the new Judge Winter say that the court house and the offices were neat and clean, and that the officers were polite and courteous, and there is but one thing lacking now and that is for the people to line up with the Democratic party in order that we may be recognized in State politics and in matters of legislation. We have virtually been left out for twelve years, had no influence in the State, and I know no good reason why this State of things should continue, certainly it should not continue just to keep the fires of prejudice burning and to elect a few men to office. I feel confident that if the people will lay down prejudice, and think seriously of their interests, and how necessary it is to be in line with the government of the State that the majority will come into the Democratic primary. Why not? Is there a single reason why? The people can express their will in a Democratic primary just as well as they can in any other, and when it is expressed it will have a hundred times more weight than if it was expressed in opposition. Then, as an humble citizen, I wish to urge this all important matter for the sober and serious consideration of the people. Let us come together and stand shoulder to shoulder for the greatest good to the greatest number, and honestly I can see no other way by which the people can unite. Our people will not be Republicans, and no man that is informed can have the cheek to argue that there is any Populist party in this State, so let us think now of the matters and come together on the ground in the party in which we can accomplish most.

ACCIDENT AT POPWELL'S GIN.

Monday afternoon, Henry Dobbs, who had taken some cotton to Popwell's gin, near Kincheon, got caught by some means in the machinery, and his left arm and side were badly cut. He is in a bad way, says Dr. Matthews, who is looking after him.

Oak Grove.

Well, we have missed a few times but we have not been asleep. Our Sunday school at this place is getting along very well, but we hope to see it improve more in its glorious work.

Misses Bessie Cobb, May Elison and Esther Dubarn visited Ocampo Sunday and report a very nice time.

Messrs. C. H. Cobb and J. P. Cobb visited their uncle, D. W. Cobb Sunday and report a good time.

We especially invite Every body to come to our singing next Sunday, bring your baskets of dinner and your Christian Harmony song book and spend the day with us. We welcome one and all to come and make yourselves at home. Many good wishes to the Banner and its readers. SUNDAY SCHOOL BOY.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, O., had the piles for 40 years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package—all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. Sold by Hopkins Drug Co.

Cross Roads.

Our Sabbath school at this place is progressing. Rev. J. W. Thomas preached a noble sermon Sunday last which was interesting to all. Brother Thomas is a new beginner in the work but nevertheless he can preach; we never get tired of hearing him; come and hear him.

Mr. A. K. Dupree left this morning for Anniston.

Mr. Jim Jones and his brother Lim have been visiting their brother George, in Coosa and report a nice time.

Mr. J. M. Dupree and wife have moved to Clanton, we miss them very much.

We are sorry to say that Miss Annie May Hucklebee is on the sick list now, we hope she will soon recover.

A large number of our playmates gathered themselves together Sunday evening and had a big time.

ONE OF THE GIRLS.

Shoults.

Mr. Osmond Kelly of Tuskafoosa has returned home for a few days visit.

People seem to have about completed their gathering and are now more in the timber business than ever before.

The debate at the Primary School last Friday evening on the relative merits of the cat and dog was a splendid success. All good and bad points seem to have been brought out. All the scholars spoke off hand, even the girls. Some extra fine speeches were made.

The honor roll was as follows: Fay Hicks, 99½, highest average; Ida Crenner, 99½, highest average; Lena Walker, 98½, second highest; Rosa Ellis, Fanny Hicks, John Hicks, Eddy Ellis, Geo. Woolley, Gertrude Woolley, A. C. Maness, Vergel Kelly, Grover Merchant, Sam Johnson.

The society appointed Miss Fanny Hicks as Secretary and George Woolley as Banner correspondent for the school and community.

The school is now doing extra fine work, many applicants have been turned away for lack of room. X RAY.

Bessie.

We are having very pleasant weather now.

Mr. Charlie Langston attended court at Clanton the past week.

One of our Randolph charming young men, Mr. Allen Mahan, was in town Thursday and Saturday.

We are glad to say that Mr. C. W. Langston's little boy, who has been on the sick list, is improving.

Mr. Annie Gentry, of Jemison, has been visiting here; he also attended the fair at Selma.

The girls are not visiting very much this week, I suppose the weather is most too cold for them. LONG HEEL.

Not A Sick Day Since.

"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since. Neighbors of mine have been cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney troubles and General Debility." This is what B. F. Bass, of Fremont, N. C. writes. Oil Sprinkled Roads in France.

Experiments in sprinkling roads with crude petroleum in France have so far been attended with excellent results and are being continued. The longest stretch of road over which oil has been sprinkled is near St. Germain, where the surface has been hardened and made dustless, while the gray color is restful to the eyes. The road can be swept as easily as an asphalted street.

Disastrous Wrecks

Carelessness is responsible for many a railway wreck and the same causes are making human wrecks of sufferers from Throat and Lung troubles. But since the advent of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, even the worst cases can be cured, and hopeless resignation is no longer necessary. "There!" gasped Teddy, who was out of breath, "girls always have places to put things, save that. A gentleman from Greenville gave it to me for holding his horse."

"What are you going to save it for?" asked Nelly.

"For a Thanksgiving turkey," replied Teddy. "The gentleman whose horse I held said to a friend that he had not met him since last Thanksgiving, and that set me to thinking. Mother couldn't afford to buy a turkey last Thanksgiving, and there is no use talking, chicken ain't Thanksgiving and neither are pumpkin pies. Nothing is Thanksgiving excepting turkey, and I'm going to save my money and buy a 'whopping' big one."

"That's so, it doesn't seem like Thanksgiving without turkey," said Nelly. "Mother gives me a penny and sometimes a nickel for helping her with sewing and I'll put that in, too."

"All right," said Teddy, "we'll be partners." Teddy was twelve years old and Nelly ten. They lived in a New England village, where the opportunities for a small boy to earn pennies, let alone dimes and nickels, were few; but somehow whenever anyone wanted to send a letter to the postoffice or wanted a parcel carried or a message sent, Teddy was around. He kept adding a few dimes, a good many nickels and any number of pennies to his savings. As the pile increased the children counted the money so often that it was a wonder they did not wear it out.

The Monday before Thanksgiving, count it as much as they pleased, Teddy and Nelly had exactly $2.10. Neither of them knew the price of a big turkey, but they felt sure they had enough to pay for a big turkey and some other things, too.

Tuesday their mother said that Thanksgiving without a turkey was not Thanksgiving, and that the next day she would go and purchase a small

When she said this the children glanced at each other in such a knowing way that their mother asked them what they were blinking about, and

Nelly replied that it was because they were going to have turkey for Thanksgiving.

There was a man at the edge of the village who raised the finest turkeys in the State. It was even said that "once upon a time" one of his turkeys had been selected for the President's dinner at the White House.

The turkey man was an old bachelor and awfully crabbed; but the children didn't care for that; they were going to get the best turkey money could buy. He was very busy shipping turkeys when Teddy and Nelly arrived, but he took time to inquire what they wanted. Teddy said they wanted to know the price of his biggest turkey.

The turkey man smiled grimly and said: "Teddy, my big turkeys cost money, and your mother don't want to buy one."

"It's not for mother," Teddy answered. "It's for Nelly and me. Mother couldn't afford to buy a turkey last Thanksgiving, so Nelly and I have been saving our money to buy one and we want a big one."

The turkey man looked interested and asked: "About how long have you been saving your money?" "Since July," answered Teddy.

The turkey man looked serious and said: "That's a long time. Now, about how much have you saved?" "Two dollars and sixteen cents," answered Teddy proudly.

"Hum! Hum!" said the turkey man. "I can't sell you my largest turkey because it is promised to Judge Joy, but I'll sell you the next largest one for a dollar. Come and look at it."

He led the way to where there were any number of turkeys hanging up, and taking an enormous one from a hook, said to Teddy: "Heft it."

The turkey man said he was going to drive by their house at 5 o'clock, and that he would deliver the turkey. Teddy wanted to carry the turkey himself, but after admiring it from every side and feeling its weight again, concluded it was too big a job.

Just then a loud knocking sounded at the door, and when Teddy opened it, the turkey man was there, and he said: "Here, Teddy, is your turkey. All paid for in good money."

When Teddy's mother saw the enormous size of the turkey she said: "It is impossible. Teddy could never have paid the price of that turkey."

"Don't bother about the price, ma'am," the turkey man said. "I sold Teddy that turkey at cost, and there is nothing in the law, ma'am, against selling things at cost."

Teddy's mother looked perplexed, and then she smiled and said: "You have no women folks at your house, and if you will come over and eat Thanksgiving dinner with us I am sure, if you can be persuaded to carry the turkey will taste much better."

"An invitation given so polite, I can't refuse," replied the turkey man.

The turkey man was not crabbed at all. He was the jolliest among a jolly crowd, and told more funny stories than any of them. After they had done more than justice to the turkey and the pies and cakes, and while they were cracking nuts, the turkey man said: "This has been a prosperous year for me, but I am more thankful for being in the midst of the happy faces which surround me now than I am for anything else."

Each one around the table, excepting Teddy, mentioned something they were thankful for, and Teddy's mother said she was thankful for having two such children.

"Now, Teddy," said the turkey man, "every one has told what they are thankful for excepting you. What are you thankful for?"

"Thanksgiving Wigwag!"

Mountain and Prairie settlers who celebrated the anniversary of Thanksgiving with a wigwag, and the rest in the city did not disdain to copy one of his institutions. In short, the native American wigwag. We are told many tales of the architecture of the "Long House," and see examples of types and other Indian things in their reservations. We do not know what tribe furnished the pattern for the wigwags.

Take one pound of butter, and make a custard of the same, and pour it into a long, narrow dish, and bake it in a slow oven. When you have used up all your lady fingers cover the structure, interior and all, with a rich custard, and place on top a meringue made of the best whites of the eggs whose yolks were used in the custard, stiffened with a little fine white sugar.

Thanksgiving Day sometimes brings the first light fall of winter's snow. The meringue top of our wigwag may be supposed to represent new fallen snow on a rural American landscape.

Made His Heels Save His Head

"But where is that beautiful tail you had the day before Thanksgiving?" "The farmer said, 'Heads I win, tails you lose.' Well, I lost my tail, but he didn't win my head."

His Fate.

There was excitement in the hen-house. The turkey on the top roost gobbled himself hoarse with frenzy, and every other hen in the establishment cackled like a punctured tire.

"Young Fatten Fluffy was monkeying around in the yard," exclaimed the messenger who had just arrived, "and met the boss with a large hatchet."

"And how did he behave himself?" asked the hurried chorus.

"Oh," said the messenger, "he lost his head completely."—Judge.

Thanksgiving Dinner.

When autumn winds again blow keen, And frost is biting in the air, Then eager appetites, I ween, Turn to Thanksgiving fare.

The toothsome viands, as of yore, Spread out before us piping hot, Our hearts make fresh and young once more—Alas! Our stomachs, not.

And so the meal we eat with zest, Nor rock of indigestion's planks—The sorry way will have its jest, And shrivel up our thighs.

The Farmer Who Was Hired to Please.

A boy drove a load of hay up a terrace in front of a farmer's house, and the load tipped over. The boy, after some difficulty, managed to unhitch the horses and to tie them to a fence; then he went and rapped at the farmer's door, and asked him to come out and help him to pitch on the load.

"We are just sitting down to dinner, my boy," the farmer replied. "Won't you come in and join us?"

"I'd like to," said the boy, "but I am afraid father wouldn't like it."

"Oh, he won't mind; you can work better after dinner." So the boy went in. After dinner a cup of tea was served.

"Won't you have a cup of tea, my boy?" asked the farmer.

"I'd like one, but I am afraid father wouldn't like it."

"Oh, come on, take a cup of tea; it won't hurt you." So the boy finally drank the tea.

"Sit down now," said the farmer. "We will read the newspaper for a few minutes; we don't want to go to work directly after dinner."

"I'd like to," said the boy, "but I am afraid father won't like it."

"Afraid your father won't like it?" asked the farmer. "You must have an awfully particular father; he don't seem to like anything. I'd like to see him. Where is he?"

Businesslike Pope.

The Pope, having learned that there has been mismanagement in the matter of Peter's pence, which is the chief source of revenue of the papacy, has reorganized that department and cashiered several of the employees. He has also appointed a lay director from the Italian band to replace the aged Cardinal Mocenni, who hitherto has had charge of the fund. The Pope, who is considered very easy-going, is displaying unexpected energy in straightening out matters at the Vatican, and the Vatican clique finds it most unpleasant.

Fishes and Sound.

The sense of hearing in fishes is still a matter of uncertainty. They have no ears resembling those of the higher animals, but they are sensitive to sound in some degree, although it is doubtful if this can be called hearing. Late experiments by Dr. Zenneck, of Strasburg, show something of the degree of sensitiveness. The sound of a bell in the water caused roach, dace and bleak to dart away if within ten feet, or to show signs of disturbance if within twenty-five feet. When the bell was muffled and in a pall the fish were slightly disturbed.

The Alderney breed, closely related and so much appearance that the description for Jersey will apply to them, but bearing the name of the home. The main difference in the Alderneys are smaller and delicate, and for this reason are so much in favor.

The above passage was printed in a book which I judge is in the hands of many farmers throughout the country. When Channel Island cattle first imported to the United States, and for a long time thereafter, Jersey and Guernsey, and especially the former, were called by many the Alderney cattle. The Alderney is one of the Channel Islands, and although the third in size is small to export any cattle. It is a very fine breed of cattle, and has no cattle except a few family use, and so far as I know none were ever exported. There the name may have originated from the fact that Alderney, a good harbor and being nearer land all the vessels carrying produce from Guernsey and Jersey cleared from the Alderney before leaving the islands. This may have given impression to early English immigrants that they were Alderney cattle. The name so came to this country, the fact is that there is nothing as an Alderney breed of cattle.

The Monkey Counted to Three. But as regards animals being counted, a case once came under notice where it was proved that a monkey could count up to three, but not four. A Colonel Bowker, one of the most enlightened and capable naturalists, was once staying at a hotel near Durban, close to the oblong patch cleared in the bush and planted with molasses cane. The stalks were higher than the monkey's head. Monkeys were the proprietor by making signs from the bush into the air and throwing down about fifty or many cobs as they tickled his head. Colonel Bowker, who firmly believed that monkeys could count up to a certain number, took his friends with him into the field, and, openly, naturally the monkeys were not taking any lead just then. A short while later a monkey came over his shoulder and straight for the hotel; a second and then a third. Then the monkeys went for that molasses path, of course, the inevitable result of some of them did not leave the path.

W. W. Ashe, forester of the North Carolina geological survey, has spent several days with Professor C. L. Brubaker of the normal school faculty, Kutztown, Pa., and they have found and described 30 new species of hawthorn, which, they claim, are new to botanists.

Regarding the main channel of infection in the case of tuberculosis, medical men are now divided into two camps, one holding that the greatest danger comes from dried sputum, the other that there is more potency for harm in the droplets thrown off by a consumptive patient during coughing.

It has been noticed that dust has a tendency to collect on electric light fittings and wires, and on walls and ceilings near them. The cause is believed to be two-fold—partly the influence of air-currents induced by local heating, and partly the electrification of the dust particles.

The Paris correspondent of a London journal states that particulars of a New anti-tuberculosis serum were shortly be communicated to the Academy of Medicine by the discoverer, Dr. Marmorek, of the Pasteur Institute. The new serum is said to have been tried in the Paris hospitals and to have cured several comparatively advanced cases of tuberculosis.

Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce, who, with Dr. Nabarro, was dispatched from London in February last on behalf of the government and the Royal Society to study the sleeping sickness in Uganda, has left Mombasa for England on the conclusion of his mission. Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce is reported to have stated that the ravages of the disease are unabated.

A London journal states that Major Powell-Cotton, who has been exploring in Africa for the past year, arrived safely at Wadai on the Upper Nile, in the middle of July, from Mount Elgon, where he had been studying the cave dwellers. Major Powell-Cotton had had satisfactory interviews with the Congo officials and was then preparing to start on an expedition in search of Okapi.

MUNICIPAL REPAIR PLANT.

A New Department of City Government Suggested for Brooklyn. George W. Tilton, chief engineer of the city of Brooklyn, has made the suggestion to establish a municipal asphalt repair plant to do the city work instead of giving it out to contractors. He has gone into the matter very thoroughly, and says the work could be done for 62 cents per cubic foot of material laid, whereas the price now paid to contractors is 95 cents. There are about a million yards of asphalt pavements out of guaranty now and the area is increasing annually. During the present year about 70,000 cubic feet of material will be used. This will require for its production a plant with a capacity of about 450 cubic feet per day now, which should be capable of extension to 1000 cubic feet. The city owns land on which it can be located advantageously and the total cost, with two steam rollers and other plant, is estimated at $20,000. Interest at 5-1/2 percent and depreciation and repairs at 10 percent produce a fixed charge of $2700, or 4 cents per cubic foot of output at the present requirements.

New Rubber Producing Plant. In the French Congo territory of Africa has been found a new plant, which may in the future be looked to as another source from which to obtain rubber to meet our ever increasing demands. Whether this plant will produce any change in the price of this commodity is as yet difficult to determine, though it will probably be found in English West Africa, and samples have been sent to Nigeria for the purpose of ascertaining if it grows there also. The plant grows under ground, and if its bark is broken the rubber keeps the pieces together, and is of extraordinary elasticity and unvarnished quality. Ordinarily the roots when about a month old contain from six to six and one-half percent of rubber, which lies directly beneath the surface of the bark. If the latter is removed the percentage is raised from 12 to 18.

Some Cause for Gratitude. A Park orator, having spoken for two and a half hours upon the subject of charity and the great work done by institutions that are supported entirely by contributions, concluded his oration by saying that, with the permission of the crowd, he would send his hat round, and would be grateful for some little encouragement. His hat was passed all round, but returned to him empty; when he exclaimed: "Well, now I come to look at what I've been talking to, all I can say is 'Thank goodness, I've got my hat back!'"—New York News.

Dish Washing in Winter. Housekeepers naturally dread dish washing in winter, owing to the fact that it chaps the hands and renders them hard and rough. Beware of Quackery for Catarrh That Contains Mercury. As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. FIRST KIDNEY PILL MADE. THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERY. THE ONLY GENUINE.

Wm. H. NEIGHBORS, the well-known jeweler of West Main Street, Wytheville, Va., says: "Some four years ago an attack of grip settled in my back, and I have suffered off and on ever since with a dull, heavy dragging across the small of my back, always more severe in the morning. It was difficult for me to stoop or straighten, and if I sat down for any length of time it was hard for me to arise. I took two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and the dull, disagreeable aching left me."

Mrs. GEORGE WALLACE, Jr., of Elmira, N. Y., wife of George Wallace, broker, of West Water Street, and living at 687 Baldwin Street, says: "In March, 1897, I was cured of kidney and bladder troubles by Doan's Kidney Pills. My physician said at that time that my life could be saved only by an operation. Night after night I had been kept awake for hours at a time with terrible pain in my back, and the secretions from the kidneys were in as bad a state as possible. I suffered with hemorrhages frequently and was in a weak state. Four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, and I now gladly recommend the remedy, because during the time which has since elapsed, nearly seven years, I have never had the slightest sign of a return of the trouble."

NO. 7

of the Rights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Last Thursday was generally observed in Clanton as a holiday and as being the first time Thanksgiving Day has been kept here as a day of rest and recreation. Some little inconvenience was caused to ladies coming from the country to trade, and in bringing cotton to market, but on the whole Thanksgiving was a success.

It is doubtful if most of us are as thankful as we ought to be, we have too much for granted as being only what is due to our merits and that we are entitled to as the reward of our own exertions: "Life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are the three cardinal points of existence, and a little reflection shows much to be thankful for.

For life we are indebted to Him who gave it, and who in His own time will remove us to another sphere. Life includes health, the possession of good health should never cease to be thankful for such an inestimable blessing, without good health much of enjoyment of life is marred. The poorly and weakly have always cause for thankfulness—to the Lord, who tempers their sufferings to their capacities, and to kindly friends who minister to their needs to alleviate their condition.

Liberty is a priceless boon which this country is enjoyed by all. It is so natural for us to transgress not the law of God and man. It is so natural for us to enjoy liberty that we seldom remember to be thankful for our freedom of government which renders enjoyment possible. Liberty of the right to go whenever and wherever we will; liberty of speech—the right to say whatever we please; liberty of thought—the right to give our minds full play to decide for ourselves that which we believe to be correct. But this liberty must not be abused, we must not trespass upon the rights of others; we must not say anything to create ill-will or bad feeling; we must not let our thoughts dwell upon ungodly things that will lead to strife and discord. Liberty is not license, and only be appreciated when properly controlled.

The pursuit of happiness is the long chase of each individual in his own particular way. We live to be happy, and happiness is a quality that each defines for himself. That which is happiness for one may be misery for another. We strive for the unattainable and we get only certain things they will happen, then they will be happy. Some strive for power, and as they rise by step, ambition leads them further then they will be happy. The great bulk of mankind find happiness in a contented life, and there is no truer happiness to be found in this world than which exists in the bosom of a contented family.

Lomax, Nov 26, 1903
Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to return my thanks to the many friends I have made since I have been superintendent of the county farm or poor house, more especially to my friends J. W. Sorrell and S. M. Adams for their kind advice. I am almost ready to return to my home to enjoy its pleasures again.

November 24 was the day to place a new man in charge of the county farm and they all with one accord began to make excuse, saying "I have never been here before, etc." We believe that Lowery endorses the stand taken by Judge Adams, and we don't want him any more. We care nothing for what his neighbors say. Now, Mr. Editor, if you will allow me I will give you more in regards to myself next time. Yours in Christ, Rev. C. H. Lowery.

San Domingo, Nov 12, 1903
Editor Banner—The U. S. ship Baltimore was ordered by the navy department to make up one of the largest crews of any ship in the navy. She first went to Boston, Mass., on a trial trip, then returned to Norfolk, Va., and was then ordered to sail for San Domingo without delay to protect property of Americans there. We are now lying at San Domingo, expecting several other ships to come in, for we are expecting war, although I do not think this little trouble will amount to much, I hope not anyway.

When this ship was ordered to make up such a large crew, we were all highly pleased, hoping to see much of the world. I think if we are delayed here any time, some other ship will be ordered to the eastern station with the torpedo fleet. From the way things are going here I think this ship will be here some time if this little trouble is not settled soon.

With best wishes to the Banner.
W. J. WILLOUGHBY.

[The Baltimore, which went from San Domingo to San Juan for coal, will probably not return to San Domingo, but will come north to Newport News to be inspected before joining the Asiatic squadron, according to the original plan.—Editor.]

A Mammoth Holiday Issue.

The December Delineator (Christmas Number) represents the high-water mark of beauty and utility and possibly of circulation also. In a woman's magazine, having a first edition of more than a million copies. It contains 240 pages. To produce this mammoth edition 278 tons of paper and 49 presses working 25 days were required. In addition to exquisite color work, clever fiction and strikingly illustrated articles, the number includes a display of charming Winter fashions covering forty-two pages, letters from the foreign fashion centres and illustrated articles on the fashionable fabrics and trimmings, millinery, etc. Among the noble contributors are: Richard Le Gallienne, with a delicate romance, A Wedding Ring in the Garden, containing lyrics in the author's best vein; W. A. Frazer, with an Indian tale, The Net of Leo; Albert Bigelow Paine, with a delightful sketch founded on the folios of the collector; Harriett Prescott Spofford, with a love story of unusual interest; Andrew Lang, with a clever travesty on the usual fairy tale; and Gustav Kobbé, with an interesting paper describing the life of Mme Emma Eames, in her Italian home, with her portrait in colors. There is also the third installment of the Evolution of a Club Woman, the piquant narrative of clubdom by Agnes Surbridge, and a remarkable photographic article by J. C. Hemment. There are many beautiful art features, among them four pages in colors representing Babyhood, Childhood, Girlhood, and Motherhood—the work of Bernard J. Rosenmeyer. For the children there are entertaining games and stories, and for the housewife many practical suggestions in cookery and other departments of the home, for the Christmas season.

DEATH OF Mr. C. T. McGUIRE.

After three weeks' illness of typhoid and pneumonia, owing to heart trouble, Mr. Charles T. McGuire died at his home in Ridgely Nov. 23, 1903.

He had been married just one month and one day, and the entire community sympathize with his young widow and relatives. It is one of the mysteries, not given mortal to know, "till the silver cord is loosed and the golden bowl broken," why such things have to be.

Mr. McGuire was a Georgian, but had lived among us for the last eleven years, and so he was one of us. So young too, only thirty, to pass away from us.

"God tempests the wind to the storm lamb," so we know, He alone can heal the wound in our hearts. We trust Him always.

No capacities has the borrowing maw of the trusts recently become that it has reversed many of the notable precedents in finance, and even Kansas, for nearly half a century a most persistent borrower, is lending heavily to the big Eastern combines.

Nature seems to have intended that the densest agricultural population in the world should live in the United States. No country of equal size is intersected by so many brooks, creeks and small and great rivers whose waters are available for irrigating. We may be sure that when the time comes for the American people to take advantage of these immense natural resources they will not be slow to do so.

The English army is, as the war of the disclosures show, in a precarious condition. But the English army cannot be greatly improved until the whole system of choosing officers is changed; until a poor but hard working young fellow can become an officer, keep his self respect, and live on his pay; until caste distinctions are done away with; until the army ceases to be an amusement and becomes a profession. In fact, we think we can respectfully submit West Point as an ideal example of the way officers should be made for armies.

A report has been made by the commission appointed to investigate sites for the federal capital of the Commonwealth of Australia recommending the location of the same at Tumut, a little town in a beautiful and fertile valley midway between Sydney and Melbourne. Tumut is not a sweet name, but the tobacco grown in its vicinity is noted for its fragrance, which is a compensation. Moreover Tumut may be spelled either backward or forward without change of sound or sense—a consideration worth bearing in mind when it comes to selecting a capital for the land of upsidedown and kangaroo.

The American young man who is worth counting in anything more important than a census table is not and probably never will be, content to lose his identity and his individuality in a weapon of defense clothed in khaki. If there is any fighting to do, he is the first in line, ready, and anxious to offer his strength and his life to the service of his country, but when the fighting is ended he wants to get back into the greater army of life, energetic, restless, tireless private citizens who do things. So long as American men are distinguished by these characteristics there will be difficulty in reducing the ratio of desertions in the regular army.

A writer in the current Harper's Weekly, discussing M. Urbain Gohair's recent book, "The People of the Twentieth Century," wonders if "American energy" is not a large reserve of energy, because we spend so little of it? Europeans, on the contrary, are constantly called upon to spend it. They know the difficulties of life, and are steeped in strife, struggling continuously against such obstacles as family tyranny, tyranny of social prejudices, bureaucratic tyranny. But here in America, he says, there are no prejudices, no irksome traditions; and the American genius consists in sparing the expense of energy; everything is made to work as in a fairy palace—mechanism and electricity perform prodigious things, that man may take his ease. "It is the triumph of human genius; it is not energy."

The bicycle this season has had a poorer time of it, here and abroad, than it has had in years. The decline, moreover, has been constant, and there are no signs of a revival, declares Collier's Weekly. When a new instrument of sport is introduced, its fate is affected as much by fashion as by utility. The automobile may see some disastrous seasons before it settles down to its established economic place. The bicycle is now used almost wholly for utility, which cuts the demand down to a fraction of what fashion was able to produce. A few independent persons are able to choose exercise and modes of locomotion to suit themselves, but many more are enslaved by the hour's caprice. The bicycle, when in fashion, brought happiness and health to thousands, who are now deprived of the stimulation and rest of their country rides merely because it is no longer "the thing" to take pleasure in the wheel.

ORDNANCE BOARD

The board of ordnance and fortification, in its annual report, says that the results of tests made with the three-inch rapid fire gun recommended by the board for adoption for the army "show that when equipped with these guns and carriages the field artillery of our army will have a weapon equal, if not superior, to that of any nation."

Relative to the tests conducted in Pensacola harbor, the report says they have resulted in the adoption of a system of fire control and direction for coast artillery which, when installed with such modifications as experience may suggest as a part of the coast defense, will render it more than effective.

The sum of $100,000 is estimated as the amount needed to carry on the work of the board during the next fiscal year. The board renews former recommendations that appropriations by congress should be sufficient to provide a reserve specially of ammunition of at least 100 rounds for each large caliber gun and mortar and at least 25 rounds for each rapid fire gun as soon as mounted, saying, "as without an adequate supply of ammunition it is needless to say that the armament of the coast defense is useless."

The North Mississippi conference of the Methodist church is in annual session at Holly Springs, presided over by Bishop Smith, of Virginia. On Wednesday, December 9th, the Mississippi conference, sometimes called the south Mississippi conference, will be convened at Meridian and will be presided over by Bishop Key, of Texas.

A letter from Washington says: "There seems to be little doubt that the resolution introduced by Senator Carmack and approved by the democratic members of congress, providing for a congressional investigation of the postoffice department scandals, will not be allowed to pass. Senator Carmack said that the democrats would press the resolution, but he did not believe that it would ever get out of committee."

Bridge Burned.
The Louisville and Nashville draw bridge across Escambia bay, eight miles east of Pensacola, Fla., was badly damaged by fire Sunday, about 300 feet on the eastern end being destroyed. Switch engines and tow boats were sent out and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze after five hours of fighting.
It is supposed that the sleepers of the bridge were ignited by a passenger train.

LOST IN THE WOODS

Limestone County Physician Loses Mind and Life.

Dr. W. J. Dupree, one of the most prominent physicians in north Alabama, was found wandering near Lenoirville, several miles from his home. He could give no account of himself and seemed in great pain and in a very bad condition mentally. Late Friday afternoon he died, having never fully recovered so that he might tell anything of himself. His horse and buggy were found some distance from the home to which he went. His family stated that he started to see a patient in that neighborhood late in the afternoon of the day before and when he left home he was in his usual robust health. They are at a loss to account for his unfortunate condition. He was about forty-eight years of age and temperate. He leaves two sons, who are young physicians, a wife and other children.

Russian-American Line.
A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the inauguration of the new steamship service Russian and American has taken place. Cargo has been booked from south Russian ports and a satisfactory complement of emigrants has been secured at Naples. The service will be maintained by several ships having a minimum speed of fourteen knots. This is the first long distance Russian steamship line, except that between Russian ports and the far east.

Don't Want to Pay.
The state is having considerable trouble in the collection of the special tax on illuminating oils, which was imposed by special act of the last legislature. Practically all of the companies doing business in the state have failed to comply with the tax requirement, and as a result the state will immediately institute both criminal and civil proceedings against many dealers for selling oils without the required tax.

Treasury Loss.
The combination of a decrease in receipts and an increase in expenditures for the current year leaves the treasury, compared with the same period of 1902, with a net loss of $15,367,200. The loss in revenue this year was entirely in customs, the figures showing in comparison with last year a falling off of $12,000,000, while the internal revenue receipts increased $3,000,000.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

In a Saloon Row in Huntsville, Ala.—Accident Also Shot.
While in a state of crazy drunkenness Bud Bell, an employee of the Huntsville, Ala., cotton mill, walked into a saloon and opened fire upon everybody in sight. An unknown young man was in the act of taking a drink and received the first bullet from Bell's pistol in his neck. The shot killed him instantly.

Bell shot John Nolen through the arm and was reloading his pistol, when Henry Bailey, barkeeper, brought him down with a bullet in the head.

The man who was killed has been identified as Frank Stewart, of North Carolina, a "walking boss."

MORE RAILROAD FACILITIES

Are Promised for Pensacola if Plans Mature.

The Inland and Harbor company, which was recently incorporated in Pensacola, Fla., under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $5,000,000, has purchased the entire plant, land and log road of the Skinner Manufacturing company, ten miles east of Pensacola. The property includes more than 100,000 acres of the best tract remaining in this section of the state.

It is said that the land company contemplates an extension of the log road to Andalusia, Ala., connecting with the Central of Georgia, and bringing the latter into Pensacola. Only about forty miles of road bed is necessary to form this connecting link. Plans of this extension already have been drawn.

It is also stated the company will build from Pensacola to Mobile, leaving the road to the Central of Georgia.

May Re-establish Department.
Owing to the surplus general officers of the rank of major general and brigadier general, the secretary of war is considering an increase in the number of military departments in order to provide additional stations for them.

The present plan is to re-establish the department of the gulf, formerly known as the department of the south, with headquarters at Atlanta. This department may include Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

There is one lieutenant general, six major generals and fifteen brigadier generals, while there are only twelve military departments. Four of them belong in the Philippines. The proposition before the secretary is to divide the United States into three military divisions and then divide the divisions into departments.

DECATURS, FARRAGUTS AND DEWEYS.

The largest class that ever entered the naval academy at Annapolis is just beginning its first year's work. There are 329 "middies," ranging in age from 15 to 20 years. All but one are from the United States. He is a native Hawaiian. The territories of Porto Rico and the Philippines have no representation. There are no negroes in the class. Two colored applicants attempted the examination, but failed to attain the required grade. The last negro who succeeded in passing the entrance tests was taken from bed in the night and deposited on a red iron buoy in the bay, where he remained until morning. The following day he took the hint and resigned.

Labor has been plentiful and the weather has been favorable for the movement of the crop. The yield of lint cotton is fifteen per cent lower per acre than last year, but the crop is slightly larger by an increased acreage. Very few of the planters are holding their cotton. All of them are showing a disposition to sell around 11 cents.

ABBEVILLE'S CHIEF

In Jail Charged with Murder of Citizen Saturday.

Tiller made no effort to escape, claiming that he shot to save his son's life. Howerton's friends insist that the shooting was uncalculated, as young Tiller was the aggressor.

10,000 TONS OF COKE

Will Go to Mexico from Alabama as Soon as It Can Be Made.

A big order has just been booked by the Virginia-Alabama Coal and Iron company for old Mexico. It consists of 10,000 tons of coke for immediate shipment. In connection with the affairs of this company it is stated as a rumor that orders have been issued to rush all orders now on the books of the concern and accept no additional ones. The headquarters of the company are at Bristol, Tenn. This means that the furnaces of the company will go out of blast as soon as the present lot of orders are filled and shipped.

Demand for Alabama Coal.

The demand for Alabama coal has been so great that it has been almost impossible to meet it and the fact that the railroads are refusing to allow their cars to leave their respective tracks is impeding transportation. It is stated that only about 55,000 tons have gone down the river to New Orleans and that amount is not nearly adequate to meet the demand there.

Thirteen hundred stone sledge hammers have been taken out of the mines made by prehistoric men in the mountains at Lehigh, Mo. They are made of black hematite and have no other mark than a groove about the middle of each.

By paying $125 a year and buying a house or private individual, a business may now become a subscriber to the electric distance printer, as it is called; an arrangement for sending telegraphic messages with an apparatus resembling a typewriter in its construction, where it is printed and no one is present.

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says the scientific demand for radium is making a new industry in Germany and France, where radium is being supplied at the rate of $60,000 per ounce. In spite of the enormous price, however, it is a fact that the makers now have on hand orders for many ounces. Indeed, the correspondent, at the present moment the commercial demand for radium for therapeutic purposes exceeds the supply.

Photographic surveys are now made with success in cases where other methods would be too slow or too costly. A recent plan employs exposures taken from different points. The resulting photographs are placed in a stereoscopic measuring machine which combines them and enables the exact position of any point to be easily calculated. The effective range of the instrument is given as about 10 miles, and it is especially recommended for mapping large areas of mountainous country.

In the new fire alarm system of Emilio Guarini of Brussels, automatic signals are sent to the engine house by wireless telegraphy. The mercury in a thermometer is upon a relay, and when the mercury wheel which makes and breaks the electric circuit by a series of contacts. A series of impulses is sent through an induction coil and the signal transmitting apparatus. The receiver at the central station or engine house includes air and earth connections. The same receiver can receive the number of transmitters in different places, and as the contacts of the wheels can be varied, the exact location of the fire can be indicated.

Novel Advertising.

In the advertising race running over sidewalk signs, street car blank walls there is, it seems, nothing equivalent in a way to the "prize" prize. For instance, an advertisement such as this appeared lately in a basement in West Twenty-third street: "Ladies' fine and also men's," is apt to attract considerable more attention than had it been correctly worded. Whether the advertiser appreciated its humor would be as well the quota of its patron as another matter.

Then another, this time in the neighborhood of Eighth street. Blank pants are art' articles in the store. "Ladies' faces make beautiful fifteen minutes" under the second story windows or an old Sixth street building interests one from an entirely different point of view, but is nonetheless unique in its way. "Yarns operate sixty stories" and take as do a certain Bowery factory downtown pawnshop, reference to something like a (not in the) and of every rainbow has the owner has only this one statement in the city, aim alike to arrest the attention of the indifferent.

Then there are those who play "trump cards" and "the first of the kind" or other direction who insist "we before you were born," "the grandmother bought," etc. All it seems, goes in the advertisement and everything catches on and so the great grinds on and the tomer often that not comes out of a trit, no matter what the other alone are labeled.

The Transvaal Gold Output.

The Witwatersrand gold field has a handsome gain in August over previous month's output, the mining of the Boer war, and the greatest of all gold regions in the far from the rate of production it maintained in 1899 it seemed certain to take the foremost among the gold fields in 1904. The Rand mines last month nearly $5,500,000, which is about $65,000,000 a year. August almost half a million exceeded the June output of $700,000. Such gain points to a yield of $7,000,000 or more early part of next year, and is not surprising to see the Transvaal the world $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 in gold in 1904. No other field is likely to reach the latter figure.

Most reptiles are notorious except crocodones and crocodones are absolutely so.

REVENUES DECREASE

There Was a Falling Off of $41,000,000 in 1903.

John W. Yerkes, commissioner of internal revenue, in his annual report to the secretary of the treasury, shows that the total receipts of his bureau for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1903, were $230,760,327 at a cost of collection of 1.07 per cent. The receipts for the last fiscal year are about $41,000,000 less than for the year 1902.

"This decrease," says the commissioner, "is not due to a diminution in the business movements and commercial transactions of the country, but entirely to reduction of internal revenue taxes."

"Under recent congressional enactments providing for the refunding of taxes collected upon business or legal fees for uses of a religious, literary, charitable or educational character, $257,322 have been refunded. Various other refunds have been made under remedial statutes. Payments of draw backs or rebates on a variety of broken factory packages of smoking and manufactured tobacco and cigars held by manufacturers or dealers at the time the decrease in the rate of taxation on these articles became effective, amounted on November 1, 1901, to $1,100,000."

AT THANKSGIVING PRAYER

Her Clothes Were Fired and She Died From Burns.

Mrs. O. B. Merrill, of Tusculum, Ala., was fatally burned Thanksgiving morning. She was kneeling in front of the fireplace at her residence, in prayer, when her clothing took fire. She rushed frantically from the room out into the open air, screaming for assistance, but before her cries were heard and the neighbors could reach her, her clothing had burned almost entirely from her body and she was found unconscious.

Mrs. Merrill lived alone, her son being in business in Savannah, Tenn. She was a woman of brilliant mental attainments, and had enjoyed much literary distinction, having contributed to magazines, periodicals and newspapers.

Want Their Lands.

Joseph Naganah, a Chippewa Indian of Minnesota and chief of a band that formerly occupied the Pon Du Lac reservation, instituted equity proceedings against Secretary Hitchcock, alleging the unconstitutionality of the forestry act of June 27, 1902. The suit alleges that the Chippewas had a vested right in the lands there set aside for forestry purposes under that act, and that the act is in violation of both that trust and of the constitution. It is alleged that as the matter now stands, the Indians get nothing for the lands already sold for them, and lose those remaining, which are to be taken for forest reserves. This proceeding involves nearly four million acres of lands worth more than $10,000,000.

Killed by a Train.

Lambertus Rhuander, one of the oldest citizens of Culman, Ala., met a tragic death at the depot Saturday by being struck by a train. According to reports, Mr. Rhuander was attempting to cross the track in front of the train by a dash, but missed his calculation and was struck by the rapidly moving engine. His injuries were so severe that he died in a few minutes after he was struck.

Depot Burned.

The Atlantic Coast Line railroad depot, with seven box cars and six flat cars, was burned at Nocatee. The flames reached the Wells & Co. saw mill plant, destroying it with more than 1,000,000 feet of lumber. There was no insurance on the saw mill. Loss is not stated.

A justice in Terre Haute, Ind., fined a farmer recently for gathering corn on Sunday. The farmer pleaded that he gathered the corn to prevent his horses from going hungry, as he was under prosecution on the charge of cruelty to animals. But this "necessity" plea availed him nothing.

New Patent Office.

Senator Daniel, of Virginia, introduced a bill appropriating $5,000,000 for a patent office in Washington to be erected east of the capitol, the site cost $600,000.

The Southern Pacific cut off over 100,000 tons of lumber. The Big Lake is finished. The Seale Lumber Company, which has been running a big saw mill at Big Flat, Ala., has moved its plant to Madison.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Clanton Drug Co., A. Horn Thorsby.

Should Last For Ages.

There is no reason in the world why a road should not last for ages if it is built of good material and kept in proper repair. If this is not done, the money spent is more than wasted. It is more economical, as a rule, to bring good materials a long distance by rail or water than to employ inferior ones procured close at hand.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Thank Pe-ru-na for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Miss Muriel Armistead, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me."

"I suffered for five years with extreme irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the last I could do, and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armistead.

Peruna cures catarrh of the pelvic organs with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the head. Peruna has become renowned as a positive cure for female catarrh simply because the ailments are mostly due to catarrh. Catarrh is the cause of the trouble. Peruna cures the catarrh. The symptoms disappear.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Half Sick Are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh of the pelvic organs is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand. What is a distressing sight as a poor, black, nervous woman, suffering from many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight, and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured. Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Clay P. O., May 19, 1908.

Messrs. Doster-Northington Drug Co. Dear Sirs—I want every one to know about your great medicine, V. V. V. My son, Collier, a boy of sixteen years old, was so badly afflicted with blood poison that his hands and face were covered with sores and he was unable to work on account of his affliction. In fact, I believe his poisoned condition produced the spasm with which he suffered so much. He took eight bottles of your great medicine and is entirely well and making a good hand in the field—plowing every day. He is entirely restored. (Signed) M. T. WEAR.

One single bottle will demonstrate its true worth. Don't continue in your suffering when relief is so near easy at hand.

A Dog's Fidelity. In the upper part of the famous Sequatchie Valley, in east Tennessee, a man and his wife settled where the country was new and wild. One of the first crops that they raised was a considerable field of cotton. When it was ready to be picked they went out together, prepared to make a holiday out of this pleasant labor. Their one baby was left in a cradle at the edge of the field and the faithful old dog was instructed to watch the tiny sleeper.

After a considerable time they looked toward the cradle to see if all was well there. They were startled by the discovery that the little couch had been turned completely over. The dog was making queer dives underneath and yelping as if in anger. As they hastened to the place they were horrified to find the animal's jaws covered with blood, and instantly came to the conclusion that he had been rending the child with his teeth.

The angry father hit the animal a death blow with a cudgel and then hastily turned the cradle right side up. There was the baby all unharmed and there in the bedding was an enormous rattlesnake, killed by the faithful dog after a fierce fight, in which both combatants had received many wounds.—Springfield Republican.

Nothing Doing. A physician in this town worked up a practice by hiring a small boy to go to the church Sunday and call him out hastily. The boy received fifteen cents. Two Sundays ago he struck for a quarter, and now the physician is permitted to slumber until the close of the service, as he formerly did.—Kearney Clipper.

WORRIED BY TOO MANY DEER.

Droves of Them Interfere With Railroad Building in Mexico.

Captain William Scott, who is building the new line of the National Railroad Company of Mexico from Monterrey to San Miguel, says that the construction work is being badly interfered with by droves of deer.

According to Captain Scott's statement, the deer make raids on the construction camps and eat up the forage intended for the mules of the graders. These attacks have become so frequent and bold that it has been found necessary to keep guards posted around the camps both day and night to prevent the raids of the herds of deer.

The statement of Captain Scott is confirmed in a letter just received at Austin, Texas, from Frank Poul, who has a sub-contract on the road. He says:

"The country through which this new road will pass is simply a hunters' paradise. I never saw so many deer in all my life, and I have been something of a deer hunter in my time."

"The animals overrun our camps, eat up our grub, stampede our mules and play havoc generally. They are in such great numbers that there is no sport in shooting them."

"I and most of the other sub-contractors have issued orders for our foremen to carry rifles at all times in order to keep the animals from interfering with the men's work. The other night a bunch of deer, in which there were several big bucks, entered our camp and when fired upon by the guards broke and ran right through our tents."

"Some of them got tangled up in the tent ropes, and before they could get away we had captured five of the animals alive. We still have them here in camp, and if it was not for the expense of getting them to you I would ship them up to Austin."

"On another occasion a drove of the animals upset our meal tent and nearly scared our Mexican cook to death. The biggest nuisance we have to contend with down here is the wild deer."

"I never before knew that these animals have so much curiosity. They beat an old maid in that respect. There are very few settlements in this part of the country, and no deer hunting has ever been done. I suppose that this accounts for the boldness of the animals."

"It seems a shame to kill them under these circumstances, but we have to do it for our own protection. When this road gets finished to Matamoras, situated opposite Brownsville, Tex., it will open up a country which will be the mecca of hunters. But it will not take long to kill off the deer, although they are apparently here by countless thousands."

Map Making. Map making has kept pace with the progress of other arts, though its steps are not so loud and are heard oftener in the schoolroom. It is really an art to make a map, and has always been so. From the time of the earliest crude affairs to the elaborate and exact pictures of today, a great degree of skill has always been necessary to give a perfect representation. Map making is now at the height of its excellence and popularity. The man with land to cultivate, houses to build or land to sell must have everything set down on his map for reference. Nobody thinks of traveling any great distance without consulting a map; indeed, it is almost impossible to escape it, for the obliging ticket agent thrusts it into one's hand with thoughtful kindness, mindful of the advertisement within the pages as well as of the convenience to the tourist. Maps are so common now that there are no more little boys who think the soil of one State is green, another brown, another red, because that is the way it is colored in the geography.—Worcester Spy.

A Canadian Ship Canal. The ship canal from Lake Huron, in Georgian Bay, almost due south to Lake Ontario, near Toronto, upon which work has been in progress for several years, will shorten the lake route 250 miles. The highest point is 600 feet higher than Lake Ontario, and a drop of sixty-six feet in four miles, at Peterboro, made necessary the building of the largest locks of the kind in the world. They are now completed.

King Edward's horses will not appear at the St. Louis world's fair.

ANOTHER LIFE SAVED. Mrs. G. W. Fooks, of Salisbury, Md., wife of G. W. Fooks, Sheriff of Wicomico County, says: "I suffered with kidney complaint for eight years. It came on me gradually. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath and was troubled with bloating after eating, and my limbs were badly swollen. One doctor told me it would finally turn to Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I had not taken Doan's Kidney Pills more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared, and I was now entirely cured."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

On Friday night next there is to be an entertainment at the court house for the benefit of the Clanton public school, and if for no other reason that one should be sufficient to go, it gives employment and entertainment to the performers, and pleasure to the audience. I believe this piece will be well worth seeing—let everybody go. Don't forget, Friday night this week.

It has been said that office holders never resign, but here's an exception. Our county solicitor, A. C. Smith, has resigned that office, and a new man will have to be appointed. Mr. Smith, it may be assumed, found his duties as county solicitor interfered with his private practice, hence his resignation. After his experience in that office, he should be a good man for criminal business.

I was sorry to see Jim Hester go for two reasons—first on account of his wife's health, and I sincerely hope the change will prove beneficial to her. The other reason is, he made an excellent clerk in the probate office, and the neat manner in which he kept the records, and the pleasant way he treated all comers made him a decided acquisition to the office. Miss Ellen Hester, who is now in the office, is a gleam of sunshine, and getting thoroughly acquainted with the work.

Teachers' Examination

The next State examination for teachers of Chilton county will be held at Clanton, in the court house, on the first Monday in January, 1904. The examination will open at 10 a. m. sharp. All who are present at that time cannot be admitted.

Thorsby

The Baptist Ladies Aid supper at Cosmopolitan was so well patronized there's rumor of a repetition in the near future. Misses Howard and Cumber are making the millinery stock for Mrs. Selma Fors. Miss Willie Black has returned from her home. "Painter" Anderson comes back to Thorsby and wishes to make it his home. Mrs. McNeil and Miss Annie Graham returned to their homes last week. Mrs. Robinson and family left last week for a visit to Nashville, Tenn.

It is with regret Thorsby loses Misses Simpson for the winter. Mr. Fred Thorson has come to visit his friends in Thorsby. Miss Katie Camba visited at the dormitory last week. Madames Colby and Stone and their families are removing nearer town for the winter. The Howard home is made happy by the arrival of Mrs. M. Williams. Mr. and Mrs. Franzen drove to Montevallo last Sunday. Thorsby Dramatic Company will give Clanton people a treat Friday night.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your paper to say a few words about a gentleman from Thorsby who has been drilling a well on my place. He has succeeded in getting water which is flowing well. I wish him much success in his employment, and I think when a man wants a well he cannot do better than get Mr. Barber, of Thorsby. Yours respectfully, Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words. People are about done gathering cotton and we are glad to see a nice shower of rain falling to day and are going to try to tell the truth in our few remarks. Truth when taken all alone is firm as walls of solid stone, and justice says unto everyone I meet I deal out justice as I should to both the bad and good.

Yes, more good news, Mr. Walter Henley fired into a drove of blackbirds last Thursday evening and killed 66 blackbirds at one fire. M. A. Turnup visited Mr. Happy a few weeks ago; sorry to see him leave at the time he did for he missed a nice blackbird pie, but I think meat will be cheaper while blackbirds hold out if you all can do that well.

We take the Banner and would not do without it for anything. As this is my first time I will not worry your patience.

Editor Banner—As I can't give you any dots now from Wadsworth or from where the four foot collards grow, but hope they are all well and keeping in the middle of the road; I will give you some dots from the low grounds of sorrow to me. Crops are all about gathered and sold, cotton selling at eleven cents; cotton seed $12.00 per ton; corn 75c; ribbon cane syrup 50c. There are but few who have to buy any provisions at all, they have it at home, and pretty plentiful through here.

I attended church yesterday, could not get in, so spent my time counting how many vehicles were on the ground and found 92 buggies, 3 hacks, 6 plantation wagons and 3 easy wagons—a total of 103 conveyances. Since my stop at Capps station I attended the funeral services of an old man, 94 years of age, and it is a fact, he died with his third set of teeth in his mouth, and they were not false ones either, two of his third set were just coming through. Mr. Henry Latham is building himself a new residence. Mr. J. H. Shoultz is working for the Twin Tree Lumber company. Our debate Friday evening was a most enjoyable affair, the visitors declaring that the scholars acquitted themselves well. The subject discussed was: "Resolved, that fire is of more service to mankind than water." The judges decided in favor of water, although they highly complimented the other side.

We were pleased to note some visitors from a distance, viz. Mr. Ben Griffin and Ed J. Littlejohn. Second honor pupils for the week were posted as follows: Fay Hicks 99; highest; Gertrude Woolly 98; second; John Hicks, Ida Clenner, Fanny Hicks, Geo. Woolley, Eddy Ellis, Rosa Ellis, Armour Woolley, Molly Clenner, Beulah Bearden, Grover Merchant, Vergel Kelly, Fanny Johnson.

You ask why nobody gets first honor. Well, come and try it. Be present every day strictly on time. Be punctual to a "ty." Never whisper in the schoolroom, nor make an ugly face, nor look out the window and many other de-

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Washington, Dec. 7.—The president's message has been transmitted to congress. Its principal features are as follows:

The country is to be congratulated on the amount of substantial achievement which has marked the past year both as regards our foreign and as regards our domestic policy.

With a nation as with a man the most important things are those of the household, and therefore the country is especially to be congratulated on what has been accomplished in the direction of providing for the exercise of supervision over the great corporations and combinations of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The congress has created the department of commerce and labor, including the bureau of corporations, with for the first time authority to secure proper publicity of such proceedings of these great corporations as the public has a right to know. It has provided for the expediting of suits for the enforcement of the federal antitrust law, and by another law it has secured equal treatment to all producers in the transportation of their goods, thus taking a long stride forward in making effective the work of the interstate commerce commission.

The preliminary work of the bureau of corporations in the department of labor has shown the wisdom of its creation. Publicity in corporate affairs will tend to do away with ignorance and will afford facts upon which intelligent action may be taken. Systematic intelligent investigation is already revealing facts the knowledge of which is essential to a right understanding of the needs and duties of the business world. The corporation which is honestly and fairly organized, whose managers in the conduct of its business recognize their obligation to deal squarely with their stockholders, their competitors and the public, has nothing to fear from such supervision. The purpose of this bureau is not to embarrass or assail legitimate business, but to aid in bringing about a better industrial condition—a condition under which there shall be obedience to law and recognition of public obligation by all corporations, great or small. The department of commerce and labor will be not only the clearing house for information regarding the business transactions of the nation, but the executive arm of the government to aid in strengthening our domestic and foreign markets, in perfecting our transportation facilities, in building up our merchant marine, in preventing the entrance of undesirable immigrants, in improving commercial and industrial conditions and in bringing together on common ground those necessary partners in industrial progress—capital and labor.

Capital and Labor.
The consistent policy of the national government, so far as it has the power, is to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employee, but to refuse to weaken individual initiative or to hamper or cramp the industrial development of the country. We recognize that this is an era of federation and combination, in which great capitalistic corporations and labor unions have become factors of tremendous importance in all industrial centers. Heavy recognition is given the far-reaching, beneficent work which has been accomplished through both corporations and unions, and the line as between different corporations, as between different unions, is drawn as it is between different individuals—that is, it is drawn on conduct, the effort being to treat both organized capital and organized labor alike, asking nothing save that the interest of each shall be brought into harmony with the interest of the general public and that the conduct of each shall conform to the fundamental rules of obedience to law, of individual freedom and of justice and fair dealing toward all. Whenever either corporation, labor union or individual disregards the law or acts in a spirit of arbitrary and tyrannous interference with the rights of others, whether corporations or individuals, when where the federal government has jurisdiction it will see to it that the misconduct is stopped, paying not the slightest heed to the position or power of the corporation, the union or the individual, but only to one vital fact—that is, the question whether or not the conduct of the individual or aggregate of individuals is in accordance with the law of the land. Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor so long as he does not infringe the rights of others.

Government Receipts and Expenditures.
From all sources, exclusive of the postal service, the receipts of the government for the last fiscal year aggregated $500,896,674. The expenditures for the same period were $506,000,007, the surplus for the fiscal year being $64,247,067. The indications are that the surplus for the present fiscal year will be very small, if indeed there be any surplus. From July to November the receipts from customs were, approximately, $9,000,000 less than the receipts from the same source for a corresponding portion last year. Should this decrease continue at the same rate throughout the fiscal year the surplus would be reduced by, approximately, $90,000,000. Should the revenue from customs suffer much further decrease during the fiscal year the surplus would vanish. A large surplus is certainly undesirable. Two years ago the war taxes were taken off with the express intention of equalizing the governmental receipts and expenditures, and, though the first year thereafter still showed a surplus, it now seems likely that a substantial equality of revenue and expenditures will be attained. Such being the case, it is of great moment both to exercise care and economy in appropriations and to use sharply any change in our fiscal revenue system which may reduce our income. The need of strict economy in our expenditures is emphasized by the fact that we cannot afford to be parsimonious in providing for what is essential to our national well being.

Needs of Financial Situation.
The integrity of our currency is beyond question, and under present conditions it would be unwise and unnecessary to attempt a reconstruction of our entire monetary system. The same liberty should be granted the secretary of the treasury to deposit customs receipts as is granted him in the deposit of receipts from other sources. In my message of Dec. 2, 1902, I called attention to certain needs of the financial situation, and I again ask for consideration of the congress for these questions.

[The president commends the work of the international monetary conference and advises its continuance.]

A majority of our people desire that steps be taken in the interests of American shipping, so that we may once more resume our former position in the ocean carrying trade. But hitherto the difference of opinion as to the proper method of reaching this end have been so wide that it has proved impossible to secure the adoption of any particular scheme. Having in view these facts, I recommend that the congress direct the secretary of the navy, the postmaster general and the secretary of commerce and labor, associated with such a representation from the senate and house of representatives as the congress in its wisdom may designate, to serve as a commission for the purpose of investigating and reporting to the congress at its next session what legislation is desirable or necessary for the development of the American merchant marine and American commerce and incidentally of a national ocean mail service of adequate auxiliary naval cruisers and naval reserves. While such a measure is desirable in any event, it is especially desirable at this time, in view of the fact that our present governmental contract for ocean mail with the American line will expire in 1905. The establishment of new lines of cargo ships to South America, to Asia and elsewhere would be much in the interest of our commercial expansion.

Immigration.
We cannot have too much immigration of the right kind, and we should have none at all of the wrong kind. The need is to devise some system by which undesirable immigrants shall be kept out entirely, while desirable immigrants are properly distributed throughout the country. At present some districts which need immigrants have none, and in others, where the population is already congested, immigrants come in such numbers as to depress the conditions of life for those already there. During the last two years the immigration service at New York has been greatly improved and the corruption and inefficiency which formerly obtained there have been eradicated. This service has just been investigated by a committee of New York citizens of high standing, Messrs. Arthur v. Briesen, Lee K. Frankel, Eugene A. Philbin, Thomas W. Hynes and Ralph Trautman. Their report deals with the whole situation at length and concludes with certain recommendations for administrative and legislative action. It is now receiving the attention of the secretary of commerce and labor.

Naturalization Frauds.
The special investigation of the subject of naturalization under the direction of the attorney general and the consequent prosecutions reveal a condition of affairs calling for the immediate attention of the congress. Forgeries and perjuries of shameless and flagrant character have been perpetrated not only in the dense centers of population, but throughout the country, and it is established beyond doubt that very many so called citizens of the United States have no title whatever to that right and are asserting and enjoying the benefits of the same through the grossest frauds. It is never to be forgotten that citizenship is, to quote the words recently used by the supreme court of the United States, an "inestimable heritage," whether it proceeds from birth within the country or is obtained by naturalization, and we poison the sources of our national character and strength at the fountain if the privilege is claimed and exercised without right and by means of fraud and corruption.

The federal grand jury lately in session in New York city dealt with this subject and made a presentment which states the situation briefly and forcibly and contains important suggestions for the consideration of the congress. This presentment is included as an appendix to the report of the attorney general.

Public Land and Postal Funds.
In my last annual message, in connection with the subject of the due regulation of combinations of capital which are or may become injurious to the public, I recommended a special appropriation for the better enforcement of the antitrust law as it now stands, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general. Accordingly (by the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation act of Feb. 23, 1903, 32 Stat., 554, 904), the congress appropriated for the purpose of enforcing the various federal trust and interstate commerce laws the sum of $300,000, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general in the employment of special counsel and agents in the department of justice to conduct proceedings and prosecutions under said laws in the courts of the United States. I now recommend, as a matter of the utmost importance and urgency, the extension of the purpose of this appropriation, so that it may be available under the direction of the attorney general and used, for the due enforcement of the laws of the United States in general and especially of the civil and criminal laws relating to public lands and the laws relating to postal crimes and offenses and the subject of naturalization. Recent investigations have shown a deplorable state of affairs in these three matters of vital concern. By various frauds and by forgeries and perjuries thousands of acres of the public domain, embracing lands of different character and extending through various sections of the country, have been dishonestly acquired. It is hardly necessary to urge the importance of recovering these dishonest acquisitions, stolen from the people, and of promptly and duly punishing the offenders.

Through frauds, forgeries and perjuries and by shameless bribes the laws relating to the proper conduct of the public service in general and to the due administration of the postoffice department have been notoriously violated, and many indictments have been found, and the consequent prosecutions are in course of hearing or on the eve thereof. For the reasons thus indicated and so that the government may be prepared to enforce promptly and with the greatest effect the due penalties for such violations of law, and to this end may be furnished with sufficient instrumentalities and competent legal assistance for the investigations and trials which will be necessary at many different points of the country, I urge upon the congress the necessity of making the said appropriation available for immediate use for all such purposes, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general.

Need For Treaties Making Bribery Extraditable.

Steps have been taken by the state department looking to the making of bribery an extraditable offense with foreign powers. The need of more effective treaties covering this crime is manifest. The exposures and prosecutions of official corruption in St. Louis, Mo., and other cities and states have resulted in a number of givers and takers of bribes becoming fugitives in foreign lands. Bribery has not been included in extradition treaties heretofore, as the necessity for it has not arisen. While there may have been as much official corruption in former years, there has been more developed and brought to light in the immediate past than in the preceding century of our country's history. It should be the policy of the United States to leave no place on earth where a corrupt man fleeing from this country can rest in peace.

Alaskan Boundary.

After unavailing attempts to reach an understanding on the Alaskan boundary question through a joint high commission, followed by prolonged negotiations, conducted in an amicable spirit, a convention between the United States and Great Britain was signed Jan. 24, 1903, providing for an examination of the subject by a mixed tribunal of six members, three on a side, with a view to its final disposition. Ratifications were exchanged on March 3 last, whereupon the two governments appointed their respective members. Those on behalf of the United States were Elihu Root, secretary of war; Henry Cabot Lodge, a senator of the United States, and George Turner, an ex-senator of the United States, while Great Britain named the Right Hon. Lord Alverstone, lord chief justice of England; Sir Louis Amable Jette, K. C. M. G., retired judge of the supreme court of Quebec, and A. B. Aylesworth, K. C., of Toronto. This tribunal met in London on Sept. 3 under the presidency of Lord Alverstone. On the 20th of October a majority of the tribunal reached and signed an agreement on all the questions submitted by the terms of the convention. By this award the right of the United States to the control of a continuous strip or border of the mainland shore, skirting all the tidewater inlets and sinuosities of the coast, is confirmed; the entrance to Portland canal concerning which legitimate doubt appeared, is defined as passing by Tongass inlet and to the northward of Wales and Pearse islands; a line is drawn from the head of Portland canal to the fifty-sixth degree of north latitude, and the interior border line of the strip is fixed by lines connecting certain mountain summits lying between Portland canal and Mount St. Elias and running along the crest of the divide separating the coast slope from the inland watershed at the only part of the frontier where the drainage ridge approaches the coast within the distance of ten marine leagues, stipulated by the treaty as the extreme width of the strip around the heads of Lynn canal and its branches.

While the line so traced follows the provisional demarcation of 1878 at the crossing of the Stikine river and that of 1890 at the summit of the White and Chilkoot passes, it runs much farther inland from the Kluhn than the temporary line of the later modus vivendi and leaves the entire mining district of the Porcupine river and Glacier creek within the jurisdiction of the United States.

[The president here recapitulates the details of the imbroglio between European powers and Venezuela and the reference of certain points of the controversy to The Hague tribunal through the influence of the United States. This he calls a victory for American diplomacy and a triumph for international arbitration. He advocates an extension of international law to exempt all private property at sea from capture or destruction by forces of belligerent powers.]

International Arbitration.
Last year the interparliamentary union for international arbitration met at Vienna, 600 members of the different legislatures of civilized countries attending. It was provided that the next meeting should be in 1904 at St. Louis, subject to our congress extending an invitation. Like The Hague tribunal, this interparliamentary union is one of the forces tending toward peace among the nations of the earth, and it is entitled to our support. I trust the invitation can be extended.

Early in July, having received intelligence, which happily turned out to be erroneous, of the assassination of our vice consul at Beirut, I dispatched a small squadron to that port for such service as might be found necessary on arrival. Although the attempt on the life of our vice consul had not been successful, yet the outrage was symptomatic of a state of excitement and disorder which demanded immediate attention. The arrival of the vessels had the happiest result. A feeling of security at once took the place of the former alarm and disquiet. Our officers were cordially welcomed by the consular body and the leading merchants, and ordinary business resumed its activity. The government of the sultan gave a considerable hearing to the representations of our minister; the official who was regarded as responsible for the disturbed condition of affairs was removed. Our relations with the Turkish government remain friendly. Our claims founded on inequitable treatment of some of our schools and missions appear to be in process of amicable adjustment.

Relations With China.

The signing of a new commercial treaty with China, which took place at Shanghai on the 8th of October, is a cause for satisfaction. This act, the result of long discussion and negotiation, places our commercial relations with the great oriental empire on a more satisfactory footing than they have ever heretofore enjoyed. It provides not only for the ordinary rights and privileges of diplomatic and consular officers, but also for an important extension of our commerce by increased facility of access to Chinese ports and for the relief of trade by the removal of some of the obstacles which have embarrassed it in the past.

I trust that the congress will continue to favor in all proper ways the Louisiana Purchase exposition. This exposition commemorates the Louisiana purchase, which was the first great step in the expansion which made us a continental nation. The expedition of Lewis and Clark across the continent followed thereon and marked the beginning of the process of exploration and colonization which thrust our national boundaries to the Pacific.

The acquisition of the Oregon country, including the present states of Oregon and Washington, was a fact of immense importance in our history, first giving us our place on the Pacific seaboard and making ready the way for our ascendancy in the commerce of the greatest of the oceans. The centennial of our establishment upon the western coast by the expedition of Lewis and Clark is to be celebrated at Portland, Ore., by an exposition in the summer of 1905, and this event should receive recognition and support from the national government.

Development of Alaska.

I call your special attention to the territory of Alaska. The country is developing rapidly, and it has an assured future. The mineral wealth is great and has as yet hardly been tapped. The fisheries, if wisely handled and kept under national control, will be a business as permanent as any other and of the utmost importance to the people. The forests, if properly guarded, will form another great source of wealth. Portions of Alaska are fitted for farming and stock raising, although the methods must be adapted to the peculiar conditions of the country. Proper land laws should be enacted and the survey of the public lands immediately begun. Coal land laws should be provided whereby the coal land entryman may make his location and secure patent under methods kindred to those now prescribed for homestead and mineral entrymen. Salmon hatcheries, exclusively under government control, should be established. The cable should be extended from Sitka westward. Wagon roads and trails should be built and the building of railroads promoted in all legitimate ways. Lighthouses should be built along the coast. Attention should be paid to the needs of the Alaska Indians. Provision should be made for an officer, with deputies, to study their needs, relieve their immediate wants and help them adapt themselves to the new conditions.

I recommend that an appropriation be made for building lighthouses in Hawaii and taking possession of those already built. The territory should be reimbursed for whatever amounts it has already expended for lighthouses. The governor should be empowered to suspend or remove any official appointed by him, without submitting the matter to the legislature.

The Philippines and Porto Rico.

Of our insular possessions, the Philippines and Porto Rico, it is gratifying to say that their steady progress has been such as to make it unnecessary to spend much time in discussing them. Yet the congress should ever keep in mind that a peculiar obligation rests upon us to further in every way the welfare of these communities. The Philippines should be kept closer to us by tariff arrangements. It would, of course, be impossible suddenly to raise the people of the islands to the high pitch of industrial prosperity and of governmental efficiency to which they will in the end by degrees attain, and the caution and moderation shown in developing them have been among the main reasons why this development has hitherto gone on so smoothly. Scrupulous care has been taken in the choice of governmental agents and the entire elimination of partisan politics from the public service. The condition of the islands is in material things no better than ever before, while their governmental, intellectual and moral advance has kept pace with their material advance. No one people ever benefited another people more than we have benefited the Filipinos by taking possession of the islands.

Preservation of Forests.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the west is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the law setting aside the proceeds from the disposal of public lands.

The study of the opportunities of reclamation of the vast extent of arid land shows that whether this reclamation is done by individuals, corporations or the state, the sources of water supply must be effectively protected and the reservoirs guarded by the preservation of the forests at the headwaters of the streams. The necessity for perpetuating our forest resources, whether in public or private hands, is recognized now as never before. It is recommended that all matters pertaining to forest reserves, except those involving or pertaining to land titles, be consolidated in the bureau of forestry of the department of agriculture.

The cotton growing states have recently been invaded by a weevil that has done much damage and threatens the entire cotton industry. I suggest to the congress the prompt enactment of such remedial legislation as its judgment may approve.

No other class of our citizens deserves so well of the nation as those to whom the nation owes its very being, the veterans of the civil war. Special attention is asked to the excellent work of the pension bureau in expediting and disposing of pension claims. During the fiscal year ending July 1, 1903, the bureau settled 251,982 claims, an average of 825 claims for each working day of the year. The number of settlements since July 1, 1903, has been in excess of last year's average, approaching 1,000 claims for each working day, and it is believed that the work of the bureau will be current at the close of the present fiscal year.

Extension of Civil Service Rules.

During the year ended June 30 last 25,566 persons were appointed through competitive examinations under the civil service rules. This was 12,672 more than during the preceding year and 40 per cent of those who passed the examinations. This abnormal growth was largely occasioned by the extension of classification to the rural free delivery service and the appointment last year of over 9,000 rural carriers. A revision of the civil service rules took effect on April 15 last, which has greatly improved their operation. The completion of the reform of the civil service is recognized by good citizens everywhere as a matter of the highest public importance, and the success of the merit system largely depends upon the effectiveness of the rules and the machinery provided for their enforcement. A very gratifying spirit of friendly co-operation exists in all the departments of the government in the enforcement and uniform observance of both the letter and spirit of the civil service act.

The Army and Navy.

The effect of the laws providing a general staff for the army and for the more effective use of the national guard has been excellent. Great improvement has been made in the efficiency of our army in recent years. Such schools as those erected at Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley and the institution of full maneuver work accomplish satisfactory results. The good effect of these maneuvers upon the national guard is marked, and ample appropriation should be made to enable the guardsmen of the several states to share in the benefit. The government should as soon as possible secure suitable permanent camp sites for military maneuvers in the various sections of the country.

I heartily congratulate the congress upon the steady progress in building up the American navy. We cannot afford a let-up in this great work. To stand still means to go back. There should be no cessation in adding to the effective units of the fighting strength of the fleet. Meanwhile the navy department and the officers of the navy are doing well their part by providing constant service at sea under conditions akin to those of actual warfare. Our officers and enlisted men are learning to handle the battleships, cruisers and torpedo boats with high efficiency in fleet and squadron formations, and the standard of marksmanship is being steadily raised. The best work ashore is indispensable, but the highest duty of a naval officer is to exercise command at sea. It is eminently desirable that a naval general staff should be established.

Isthmian Canal.

By the act of June 28, 1902, the congress authorized the president to enter into treaty with Colombia for the building of the canal across the isthmus of Panama, it being provided that in the event of failure to secure such treaty after the lapse of a reasonable time recourse should be had to building a canal through Nicaragua. It has not been necessary to consider this alternative, as I am enabled to lay before the senate a treaty providing for the building of the canal across the isthmus of Panama. This was the route which commended itself to the deliberate judgment of the congress, and we can now acquire by treaty the right to construct the canal over this route. The question now, therefore, is not by which route the isthmian canal shall be built, for that question has been definitely and irrevocably decided. The question is simply whether or not we shall have an isthmian canal.

When the congress directed that we should take the Panama route under treaty with Colombia the course of the condition, of course, referred not to the government which controlled that route, but to the route itself; to the territory across which the route lay, but to the route which the government of Colombia controlled. The purpose of the law was to authorize the president to enter into treaty with the power in actual control of the isthmus of Panama. This purpose has been fulfilled.

For 400 years, ever since the discovery of the isthmus, the canal across the isthmus has been planned. For thousands of years it has been worked at. When made it is to last for the ages. It is to alter the geography of a continent and the trade routes of the world. We have shown by every treaty we have negotiated or attempted to negotiate with the people in control of the isthmus and with foreign nations in reference thereto our consistent good faith in observing our obligations, on the one hand to the people of the isthmus and on the other hand to the civilized world, whose commercial rights we are safeguarding and guaranteeing by our action. We have done our duty to others in letter and in spirit, and we have shown the utmost forbearance in exacting our own rights.

Repetition of Treaty by Colombia.

Last spring a treaty concluded between the representatives of the republic of Colombia and of our government was ratified by the senate. This treaty was entered into at the urgent solicitation of the people of Colombia and after a body of experts appointed by our government especially to go into the matter of the route across the isthmus had pronounced unanimously in favor of the Panama route. In drawing up this treaty every concession was made to the people and to the government of Colombia. We were more than just in dealing with them. Our generosity was such as to make it a serious question whether we had not gone too far in their interest at the expense of our own, for in our scrupulous desire to pay all possible heed not merely to the real but even to the fancied rights of our weaker neighbor, who already owed so much to our protection and forbearance, we yielded in all possible ways to her desires in drawing up the treaty. Nevertheless the government of Colombia not merely repudiated the treaty, but repudiated it in such manner as to make it evident by the time the Colombian congress adjourned that not the scantiest hope remained of ever getting a satisfactory treaty from them.

Revolution in Panama.

The people of Panama had long been discontented with the republic of Colombia, and they had been kept quiet only by the prospect of the conclusion of the canal treaty, which was to them a matter of vital concern. When it became evident that the treaty was hopelessly lost the people of Panama rose literally as one man. Not a shot was fired by a single man on the isthmus in the interest of the Colombian government. Not a life was lost in the accomplishment of the revolution. The Colombian troops stationed on the isthmus, who had long been unpaid, made common cause with the people of Panama, and with astonishing unanimity the new republic was started. The duty of the United States in the premises was clear. In strict accordance with the principles laid down by Secretaries Cass and Seward, the United States gave notice that it would permit the landing of no expeditionary force, the arrival of which would mean chaos and destruction along the line of the railroad and of the proposed canal and an interruption of transit as an inevitable consequence. The de facto government of Panama was recognized.

Under such circumstances the government of the United States would have been guilty of folly and weakness, amounting in their sum to a crime against the nation, had it acted otherwise than it did when the revolution of Nov. 3 last took place in Panama. This great enterprise of building the inter-oceanic canal cannot be held up to gratify the whims or out of respect to the governmental impotence or to the even more sinister and evil political peculiarities of people who, though they dwell afar off, yet, against the wish of the actual dwellers on the isthmus, assert an unreal supremacy over the territory. The possession of a territory fraught with such peculiar capacities as the isthmus in question carries with it obligations to mankind. The course of events has shown that this canal cannot be built by private enterprise or by any other nation than our own; therefore it must be built by the United States.

New Treaty With Panama.

Every effort has been made by the government of the United States to persuade Colombia to follow a course which was essentially not only to our interests and to the interests of the world, but to the interests of Colombia itself. These efforts have failed, and Colombia, by her persistence in repudiating the advances that have been made, has forced us for the sake of our own honor and of the interest and well being, not merely of our own people, but of the people of the isthmus of Panama and the people of the civilized countries of the world, to take decisive steps to bring to an end a condition of affairs which had become intolerable. The new republic of Panama immediately offered to negotiate a treaty with us. This treaty I herewith submit. By it our interests are better safeguarded than in the treaty with Colombia which was ratified by the senate at its last session. It is better in its terms than the treaties offered to us by the republics of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. At last the right to begin this great undertaking is made available. Panama has done her part. All that remains is for the American congress to do its part, and forthwith this republic will enter upon the execution of a project colossal in its size and of vast high incalculable possibilities for the good of this country and the nations of mankind.

Congress convened Monday in regular session and listened to the reading of the president's annual message.

STEADILY The Banner marches forward, and we are proud to say that we are now issuing over eleven hundred papers every week.

THE three new Registrars, R. H.
Gaines, P. M. Moore and Wiley Ramsey have lots of work before them, when they start.

A rumor is in circulation at Colon to the effect that 3,000 soldiers have left Cartagena for the purpose of invading the isthmus. No details are known and the rumor cannot be confirmed. The only possible means of approaching Panama is by narrow and difficult mountain passes through the Indian country.
The United States cruiser Atlanta is now off the Indian coast.

It is understood that President Roosevelt will, in his annual message to congress, recommend some form of legislation designed to check the ravages of the boll weevil, which has worked its way from Mexico into Texas, and which is moving forward at the rate of fifty miles a year.

Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture urges the appointment of a commission which would visit the scene of the weevil's operations and make experiments looking to the extermination of the pest. He suggests that congress appropriate $500,000 for this purpose, and it is hoped our national legislators will act on this line without delay. If the boll weevil is allowed to continue its ravages the yield of the south's great staple will be reduced 25 per cent or more within the next three or four years.
To avert such a calamity congress can well afford to be liberal in its appropriations.

The old cry "plant less cotton," has not been in order since the United States got a good footing in China. "Plant more cotton" is obviously the thing to do, for the world's demand for the fleecy staple is steadily increasing and a 15,000,000 bale crop will not be too large. Kill out the boll weevil and by 1905 or 1906 at the furthest the south will make 15,000,000 bales, the season permitting.—Age-Herald.

A Bill to establish a fish-hatching and fish station in the State of Alabama. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, that the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the establishment of a fish-cultural station in the State of Alabama, including purchase of site, construction of buildings and ponds, and equipment, at some suitable point to be selected by the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, December 6, 1903
There is going to be a whole lot of fun here on or about the 11th and 12th of the present month when the Republican National committee meets for the purpose of selecting the time and place for the holding of the next Republican National convention. There is going to be an attempt made at that meeting to elect the Hon. Perry S. Heath, Secretary of the Republican National committee. The late report of Hon.
Jo. Hristow, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, has thrown the harpoon into Mr. Heath with all the energy of a man who wanted to get even for some things, and that report has stirred up the President to the sticking stage, and he says that Mr. Heath must go. Senator Has-na, the chairman of the committee, is the friend of Heath, and he is as insistent that Mr. Heath must not be disturbed. This presents an issue at once between the President and the Senator from Ohio, who is the real leader of the republican party. The President apparently forgets that he did not make up the present National committee of the republican party, which wields the influence and controls things until its successor is elected at the next national republican convention, but that it was made up by McKinley and Hanna, and therefore is under the control of Hanna. This being the case, the committee will accept the dictum of Hanna and refuse to "fire" Heath.
That will discredit Roosevelt and at the same time place the republican party in the attitude of working in the interest of a man who practically has been indicted for boodling in the Post Office Department; there is going to be a warm time and much republican dirty linen will be washed for the delectation of the general public. It will be a straight fight between Hanna and Roosevelt and Hanna is going to win. Watch the game.

The letter of Grover Cleveland absolutely declining to be considered as a candidate for the Presidential nomination on the democratic ticket is causing much comment here, and the attempt of the people who were touting Cleveland to make Judge Parker, of New York, the residualy legatee of Cleveland, has had exactly the opposite effect on the leaders of the democratic party here, that they expected and hoped it would. It has shown up those people as opposed to the true principles of the party. As was stated in this correspondence some months ago, the attempt to tout Cleveland was simply an effort on the part of the organizing element of the party in the east to feel the pulse of the people. They had no idea that Mr.
Cleveland would stand for renomi-nation, but they wanted to see how far the people would stand for the idea. After they had worked it as far as they desired, they would bring out the real man behind the movement, a man who is entirely satisfactory to Wall Street interests. It seems that Judge Parker is the man.
The democratic leaders in congress are laughing at the efforts of these people to stamper the democratic party who is the choice of the men who manipulate stocks and bonds and all the new-fangled get-rich-quick games that originate in the Maelstrom of Money. They say that if that is the game of those people, they will have none of Judge Parker in theirs. They see no difference in a republican and a man who is acceptable to the Wall Street gang in the democratic party. They say we may as well have a republican in the White House as a man who has to go to the Wall Street interests and get the money with which to elect him, and who must make ante-election promises in order to get it.

The Panama deal is still a topic of political discussion here, and the democrats are as determined as ever to make it an issue in the next campaign. If they do they will show up one of the most stupendous outrages ever attempted by this government.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful house-

In almost every instance a severe first indication of the cold appears.

There is no danger in giving it to

COUNTERFEITERS CAUGHT TORPEDO BOAT SAVED

New England Towns Flooded With Spurious Notes.

HAD PAPER TO PRINT $1,000,000

When Men Taken by Secret Service Agents in a Town Near Boston—John Smith, One of the Prisoners, Known Since and Abroad for His Work—The Biggest Raid in Years.

Boston, Mass.—What is considered by the United States Government Secret Service officials to be one of the most important raids that has ever taken place in the vicinity of Boston was successfully carried out in the little town of Revere. Three men, all said to be well-known counterfeiters, were arrested and an extensive plant, with an enormous supply of paper for printing notes was confiscated.

The Government officials said that there was paper enough in the house to print more than a million dollars' worth of notes, while the plates and hand presses were of the finest workmanship.

The men arrested were John Davis, Joseph Bonaparte and John Novak. Davis is also known as Philip Schwartz, Henry Smith, Henry Lieberman and J. Weissman, while Novak has one alias, that of H. Frankel.

Davis is thirty-three years old, and is believed to be the head of the gang, and, according to the Secret Service officials, he is well known not only in this country but in Europe.

It is believed, however, that New York persons were behind the plot which was exposed in Revere. The counterfeiting is said to have been carried on either in that city or in Newark, N. J., or in Philadelphia, Pa.

Novak, or Frankel, as he is known in Revere, came from New York about two months ago, accompanied by a woman said to be his wife. He hired a house at 131 Prospect avenue in the town.

Soon after he took possession the authorities at Washington began to receive numerous complaints that counterfeit money was being freely circulated in New England. From the larger New England cities and from New York came the report that numerous $20 Garfield head gold certificates, $10 Indian head silver certificates and $5 Indian head certificates were being circulated in that city.

The smaller towns and cities were also flooded with counterfeit notes of the Cape Cod National Bank, of Haverhill, Mass., the Fourth National Bank of Boston, and the National Bank of Waltham, Lynn and New Bedford.

FARMERS JOINING UNION.

Movement in Texas Spreading Rapidly—40,000 Members Already.

Dallas, Texas.—The farmers of Texas are being unionized at a rapid rate. There are more than 30,000 unions in Texas, with a total membership of 40,000, and the organization is spreading like wildfire. It began at Emory, Texas County, under the name of the "Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America," and is now established in nearly every populous county in the State.

About the middle of February next a meeting is to be held for completing a State organization, and it is believed that the movement will spread to other States, as the Farmers' Alliance did.

Former Governor Hogg has favored political action, and it seems as if the farmers are taking his advice. The purpose of the union is to buy and sell in bulk, to form along agricultural lines, to study politics and to run a Texas political economy. Several north Texas lodges during the last few days have made extensive purchases of supplies in carload lots and are encouraged by their savings.

Active Work to Secure an Anglo-American Treaty Begun.

Washington, D. C.—The awakening throughout the United States of a popular sentiment which it is hoped will develop into a national demand for an arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain was the object of a gathering at the home of John W. Foster, formerly Secretary of State. It is understood that the movement has the hearty approval of the President.

Among those present were Admiral Dewey, General Nelson A. Miles, Wayne MacVeagh, Thomas Nelson Page, Gifford Pinchot, John R. Proctor, General H. V. Boynton, D. C. Gilman, Charles C. Glover, District Commissioner, MacFarland and West. John Joy Edson, Charles J. Bell, William J. Boardman and W. V. Cox. Monaghan D. J. O'Connell was unable to be present, but telegraphed to General Foster his sympathy with the movement. The men named constitute the local committee, and will arrange for a meeting of the National Arbitration Committee in this city on January 12.

Our Budget of Humor

The Address, in Grip of Storm, Rescued by Heroic Sailor.

Masterpiece of the Tug Peoria Rescued in Call For Volunteers and Brought His Life in Splendid Feat.

Norfolk, Va.—The submarine torpedo boat Adder and Moccasin, which broke loose from the tug Peoria during a storm, have both been saved, the former by the heroism of Boatswain Deery, of the Peoria, who swam 100 yards in a raging sea to fasten a line to the little craft, and the latter by the very waves which threatened her destruction, for she was cast high and dry and uninjured upon a bar off Currituck, N. C.

He responded to a call for volunteers to swim to the Adder, though a thirty-four-mile gale was blowing and mountainous seas were crashing over the Peoria and burying the drifting submarine boats beneath tons of water. Putting on a life-preserver and fastening a slender line about his waist he plunged into the ocean and battled with wind and tide for a full 100 yards, finally reaching the Adder and gaining her deck. There he hauled a thick hawser aboard by means of the life line and made it fast.

All this time the Adder was being tossed about like a cork one minute and down beneath the surface the next, rolling and yawing in such a manner as to make it almost impossible to retain a position upon her scaly decking, but Deery held on and accomplished his work. Then he went back to the tug hand over hand on the hawser.

OTTAWA UNIVERSITY BURNED

Well-Known Canadian College Destroyed by Fire.

Ottawa, Canada.—Ottawa University, one of the largest educational institutions in Canada, was totally destroyed by fire in two hours. Sections of the walls are the only remains of the magnificent stone building which was one of the sights of the city. The loss is estimated at $300,000, and the insurance amounts to $200,000.

The university is a Roman Catholic institution under the direction of the Oblate Fathers. It will take two years before it can be rebuilt. There were 450 students, more than 300 of whom come from the New England States.

Some had to jump from the fourth and fifth stories. All the students, however, escaped with very slight injuries.

The fire is supposed to have resulted from a burning cigarette which was thrown away after the play in the Academy Hall. A library of 30,000 volumes was destroyed.

HOBSON'S BIG NAVY SCHEME.

Would Spend $2,750,000,000 For Warships Before 1925.

Washington, D. C.—Richard Pearson Hobson, ex-commander in the Navy, has presented a bill which he has requested Representative Wiley, of Alabama, to introduce in the House. Its purpose, he says, is to make the United States the first naval power of the world.

The bill makes a total appropriation of $2,750,000,000, a certain portion of which is to be used each year for new ships.

Fifty million dollars is made available for the present fiscal year, $30,000,000 for the next, and so on, increasing by $10,000,000 each year up to 1915, when a lump sum of $1,500,000,000 is made to carry on the program to 1925.

HUNTINGTON ESTATE IS SUE

Claim For $300,000 Damages, Result of Railway Bargain.

Galveston, Texas.—Suit for $300,000 damages was begun in the District Court here against the Collis P. Huntington estate. The petitioners are David B. Henderson and Walter Gresham, of Galveston. The defendants are Arabella D. Huntington and other executors of the will of Collis P. Huntington.

It is held in the petition that in 1890 Huntington agreed to purchase from the petitioners the stock of the Galveston and Western Railway, after certain provisions had been complied with. The executors declined to carry out the agreement. The Galveston and Western is a terminal road.

CRUDE OIL DEAREST IN YEARS.

Sale at $1.95 in Oil City Follows Report of Failing Production.

Oil City, Pa.—A bid of $2 for 10,000 barrels of crude oil represented by National Transit certificates was made in the floor of the exchange here. There was a sale of 5000 barrels at $1.95. With the exception of the year 1895, when certificates sold as high as $2.65 a barrel, the bid and sale to-day is the highest quotation in twenty-five years, or since the opening and development of the prolific Brazos field. The advance is caused by the pipe-line reports for November, which show a decrease in production and a heavy draft on the reserve stocks, especially of Pennsylvania oil.

A BEAUTIFUL DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. HOWARD DUFFIELD.

Subject: Heart's Hand. The Iron Heart. Entered the Soul of Those Who Know Happiness to Be a Master of Personal Character.

NEW YORK CITY.—"Heart's Hand" was the subject of the sermon Sunday morning in the Old First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Twelfth Street, by the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, pastor. The text was from John, xiv, 1 (King's Version): "Let not your heart be troubled. To believe in God, believe also in Me." Duffield said:

"Let not your heart be troubled." How could they help it? They were not men who knew the world and they were going out to face the world alone. They were not men versed in the wisdom of the schools, and they were to be the teachers of men, profound and revolutionary truths. They were impulsive, undisciplined and without social influence. He is in every hour of difficulty a divine friend had stood and they were to stand upon the shield of His love. They were to be launched at these. Now they must address themselves unfettered to the task of saving the world from a broken heart and a broken faith.

As Usual.

"How much did you expect to spend for your wife's birthday present?" "About half as much as I shall," judge.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Christmas is nearly upon us, and the signs of the times are evident. The stores are busy all the time, people have money to spend and bent upon having a good time in their lives. This has been a prosperous year and it is well we should celebrate it and be happy. "Christmas comes but once a year, and when it comes it brings good cheer." May it bring good cheer to you and a real good time.

I do not believe that our stores have ever been so well stocked before. There seems to be no end to the good things in sight, while the windows are stored with oranges and apples, candies and toys, to delight the girls and please the boys, inside is to be found all those things which go to make life pleasant and comfortable for the older folks. Then we notice new buggies being driven home, and wonder if a present for mama or young miss—of course, papa wouldn't think of buying it for himself. What a blessing it is to be able to make presents to those we love—only it is more blessed to give than to receive, and Xmas time, above all others, is the time for tasting this pleasure.

On next Thursday night, Xmas Eve, there will be a union Christmas tree at the court house, and everyone is invited.

It is not every day that I have the good luck to dine with a pretty bride and a gallant groom, but that was my luck Tuesday. Judge Adams married them at the court house, and I dined with them at the Smith house—that's where I got the best of the Judge. The bride looked charming, and so did the bridegroom. The groom was happy and contented, and well he might be, and the best man looked as if he was wishing for his own home to come. I did some wishing for my own account, and I heartily wish Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ramsey a long and happy life together, with every day as bright as the day they were married. O, the lovely bride was Miss Alice M. Kendrick, of Fletcher.

"Better than gold" at the court house last Friday night afforded us every pleasant evening's entertainment. The performance through was marked by the thorough manner in which it was carried out, and every actor had learned well his part—"that's where the honor lies." There was not a hitch from start to finish. M. P. Johnson made a good lawyer; Prof. C. M. Brewer must be commended for his excellent representation of the new; George Phelin gave a capital rendition of the "blunderer"; A. A. Thorson was an excellent villain who turned out better than was to have been expected; Sam Collins made a good colored servant; Miss Maud Gerald represented a lady-like housekeeper, whose charming daughter was delightfully represented by Miss Annie Shivers; Miss Anna Howard performed her part to perfection, and Miss Della Wambem made a charming young lady. The whole performance was good.

Isn't it about time the patriotic citizens of Clanton were thinking about doing something about the municipal election. On the second Monday in January a mayor and councilmen have to be elected, and while the woods may be full of candidates none of them have yet struck town. Better organize a club and shell 'em out.

A Christmas Letter.

The custom now of each family trying to have a little better Christmas for their children than their neighbors, of the little fellows who have no loved ones to provide for them being left out, brings us up suddenly to the question what is Christmas for? Who started it? We are told it was started by a humble carpenter, born in a manger of a stable, and that this day was set apart to commemorate his birth. We are told that he was a King, the God of Heaven, and that He chose this humble birth to show His love and fellowship for the poor whom He says "Ye have always with you." He also says "Lo, I am with you always, and inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me." He loved them so much He gave as a proof of His Messiahship "The poor have the gospel preached to them." Now, what kind of Christmas present did He bring to the world. "He gave Himself for us." Gave up a jeweled crown for a crown of thorns, a throne for a cross of agony, dominion for a manger that He might prove "He was not ashamed to call them brethren." "The disciple is not above his master, but every one that is perfect shall be as his master." Luke 6:40. What kind of Christmas presents are you giving to celebrate such a birth-day? Do you know why He came? "To give us an example that we should follow in His steps." 1 Pet. 2:21. John says "If we say we know Him we ought to walk even as He walked." Die for people? Yes. "We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." 1 John 3:16. How can we follow in His steps? By giving ourselves and lives as a sacrifice for others. "For even Christ pleased not Himself." The example of humility reaches to the lowest. I wonder if the early saints would have had a Christmas tree where all the richer parents could vie with one another as to who made the greatest show and had their names called most? I wonder how the child of the manger would have fared at such a tree? I wonder if the early church would have told their children about a Santa Claus called a "saint" who on Christmas birth-day gave valuable and fine toys to the rich children and left the poor little ragged fellow across the street without or with little cheap things the others would not have. I wonder how the charity committee of the Christmas tree would have condescendingly dealt with the child Christ or His "brethren" the poor. How did the early church live? "Neither was there any among them that lacked. For as many as were possessed of lands or houses sold them and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them down at the apostle's feet and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." Acts 4:34. How did the rich people like this and how about social distributions? Let the rich brother rejoice in that he is made low and the brother of low degree in that he is exalted. Jas. 1:9-10. We claim to be a Christian nation celebrating Christ's birthday, but if He should come back as He promised to do soon, how would He find us celebrating this sacred day?

JUDGE ADAMS WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE.

Clanton, Dec. 16, 1903
To Whom it May Concern:
I have been for months undecided as to the question of becoming a candidate for re-election to the office of Judge of Probate of this, Chilton County, and after due consideration I have, without the aid or counsel of friend or foe, reached the conclusion that I will not ask for the office. I have been urged by some of the best men in the county to make the race, and I appreciate the many complimentary expressions from the people as to myself as an officer, and I can never forget the men who voted for me in 1898. I desire to extend to these men my deepest gratitude for their support, and I feel confident that none of them can have any just right to regret their support given me in that election, except it might be on the ground of a difference of opinion in politics, but I believe that any man who knows me, knows full well that I have always been a Democrat in principle, and any fair minded man who is informed will admit that the issue that existed when I fought the Democratic party are things of the past, and that in this State, and especially in Chilton County, there is no issue between the people.

But I am forever done with politics and I will not discuss it further. I know that some good men misunderstood me, and therefore misjudged me, and life is too short for me to spend it in strife among my neighbors, and in view of the fact that I am tired of strife, and knowing how exceedingly sensitive I am of having credited to me wrong motives, and believing in my heart that I want to do right and live for the good of my fellow-men and the glory of God, I beg the pardon of any and all men, and will say to them that if I have said or done anything that has wounded the feelings of the most humble citizen, I beg that one—for the sake of the high and imperfect temper that nature has endowed me with, and for the further and nobler reason that our Saviour forgave all men—to forgive me, because, for the sake of peace on earth and among men, I want to, and am determined to, live in peace to the end of my days on earth.

I pen these lines with a heart full of joy that I can, and have, reached this conclusion, and may Heaven's richest blessings rest on every individual in Chilton County, and peace abound in every home is my prayer and so may it be.

On the seventh night, after the mission service, he groped his way through the darkness to an old board fence near the house where his wife lived, and there behind that fence there he flung himself down, hoping to find a resting place. He crawled through the cracks and saw at the window ponder his little child, whom he was no longer permitted to visit. As the eastern sky began to dawn with promise of the dawn, weary and hungry and lonely and heart-sick, he crept up to the foot of the old "Chinaman's" and there he lay, "Chinaman" said to him, "How are you?"

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

One of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Once more Christmas is here and I wish you in all sincerity a Merry Christmas, tempered with hope, gladness with joy, and time generally and no sad effects. It is a time for feasting and merriment, a time for the reunion of friends, a time to forgive all those who have sinned against us. It is the close of the year and consequently a time to look back and all ill feelings which may have against another, so that with clean hearts we may enter the new year. It is the anniversary of the birth of Him who proclaimed peace on earth, good will to men, and what better can we do than follow in His steps.

Really, Clanton has had quite a metropolitan aspect this week, streets and stores crowded with a crowd all bent on buying presents. Our merchants must have a fine trade. Amongst other signs of a glad Christmas I notice that Judge Adams has issued fifteen marriage licenses this week, and broke the record Tuesday by giving six in one day. I hope they will all be married and have a merry Xmas, and as year after year rolls by may each and every one have a still happier Christmas.

Maplesville

Another refreshing rain, water has risen in well, our colored friends tell us.

Our Sunday school has greatly improved; have been fortunate in securing T. U. Crumpton as Bible teacher.

Our school has greatly improved under the management of Miss Florence Adair, who graduated from Montevallo under the supervision of our gifted country woman, Miss Julia Tutwiler.

Her entertainment given the 18th at the close of her school drew a packed house and was greatly enjoyed. The commencement was Alabama, sung by school, our national song composed by Miss Julia Tutwiler, of whom every true Alabamian is justly proud. The program was as follows:

The typical politician by Layton Farnell.

The daisy's secret by Blossom Crumpton.

Naughty Zelle by Lillian Gore.

Budger version of the flood by Ella Dunn.

So was I by Kelly Martin.

The daisy chorus was most delightfully rendered.

Dialogue: Fast friends by Misses Rickett and Adair.

Duet by Misses Rickett and Dunn.

Xmas dialogue: A comedy in two acts—Not a man in the house. Tableau—Mead's burglar.

Tableau—Cinderella by Isabel Supportas.

Tableau—Little Miss Muffet up to date by Clemmings Sherwood and Eula Davenport.

Tableau—Gypsy queen, by Ella Dunn.

Tableau—Rock of ages by Edna Rickett.

We were all delighted with the reading of the program by Henry Damsky in a most manly and intelligent way. All performed their parts so well that it would be invidious to speak of any.

This being planned and executed by Miss Adair reflects highly on her as a teacher.

Mr. Ensign is fortunate in having the services of Miss Branch of Montgomery as stenographer.

Mrs. Plant and family have gone to Birmingham to spend Xmas with her mother, Mrs. Brown.

CORRESPONDENCE

Clanton, Dec. 21, 1903

Editor Banner—I have been impressed to such a degree with the straightforward, manly, honest letter of Judge Adams, in the Banner of last week, that I am constrained to drop this line of commendation of the sentiments it contains, and of approval of the patriotic, as well as Christian spirit, enunciated.

The best men we have are often misjudged, and who can tell the motives of another—who dare judge? Now that the question of the succession in the office of judge so far as the coming campaign is concerned is disposed of, can we not all agree that Judge Adams has made a good officer, a faithful public servant, and above all an upright judge.

Shoults, Dec. 21, 1903

Editor Banner—Xmas is so near I thought I would drop in a few words. Everybody or almost everybody seems to have plenty and expects to have a good time this Xmas. Let us look around and see if we can't find some poor widow with some little children who are shivering with cold. Let each one that is able to have a good time drop one drop in the bucket and help this poor widow; she may be only an object of pity, and as the holidays pass, you who feel like doing something for the poor, open your wardrobe and see if you can't find some old warm clothes or anything that you think would keep them warm, and send it to them. Let us make at least one heart glad while God has so abundantly blessed us this year. There may be some little children that will not have Santa to visit them this Xmas; remember them and God will remember you. I wish you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Bro. Ike.

CLANTON, ALA.

A gale in the open ocean will lash up the waters into spray, and produce waves which seem of prodigious height to unfortunate in any small boat; but as Nature points out, few of our impressions are more misleading. Dashed from their crests into the troughs between, we say the waves ran "mountains high," but the highest waves in British seas probably never exceed fifteen or twenty feet, and the greatest height observed by Scoresby in the waves of the Atlantic was but forty-three feet. This is, of course, the height of the wave from trough to crest, and has nothing to do with the height to which spray, water or stones may be hurled when the waves break on shore.

Since Poor Lo has stopped facing the setting sun and delivering fourth reader orations he has managed to pick up a considerable portion of this world's goods, says the Worcester Telegram. There are about 238,000 Poor Lo's, and they cost this Government $9,800,000 every year, and of this $3,600,000 goes for education. Still the Indian does not improve much. Sometimes he becomes a ball player or football player, and on one occasion, to the sorrow of his manager, Mr. Burton, he became a singer in opera. The Indians are well cared for. They have free education and they have a good income from the United States. This is increased by a little work, but not too much work, for the Indian does not believe in labor. All told, he has about the best time of any man or race of men on the globe.

After Professor Brander Matthews' enthusiastic prediction of the ultimate triumph of the English language it is rather dampening to learn from Professor G. Stanley Hall that the mother tongue is in great peril—and from what? Is it endangered by thieves' slang, cowpunchers' lingo or the dialect of the Anglomaniacs? Possibly by all these; but still more by the Latin that high school students are supposed to be studying—by the 137 percent increase in devotion to the language that Milton and Pope and Burke unknowingly devoted years of study to; the language of balance, rhythm and sanity. Go to, Professor Hall; if people today write worse English—and it is by no means proved that they do—the cause is not to be sought in their reading of more Latin.

The news that Siberia is shipping beef to Berlin seems of remote interest declares the New York World. Yet Siberia is also sending butter to London, with the result that the New York butter which once supplied the market now reaches it in greatly diminished quantity. The interest here is nearer home. Perishable freight now goes enormous distances in good condition. Texas steers travel to Devonshire, dressed beef to Birmingham. South Africa peaches reach the Fifth avenue restaurant refrigerator and furnish, in their season, the dearest item on the bill of fare. Our California peaches cross the Atlantic, materially reducing the price of what was an absurdly costly fruit in Paris. The refrigerator car and the cold storage ship's hold have made a seeming impossibility a commonplace of transportation.

The value of alligators in the economy was recently demonstrated in Florida. Hunters have decimated the alligators, the muskrats on which the marlans feed began to multiply. For domestic purposes, they honeycombed with holes the river levees. These holes caused leakage, the leakage caused breaks in the banks, and great destruction of property resulted. California has no alligators, but many cousins of the muskrat. Hitherto they have been exceeding troublesome to the farmers along the Sacramento. A remedy for these burrowing rodents is now announced—oil. It not only drives away the gophers and squirrels, but, according to Stockton (Cal.) experiments, retards the washing away of the banks by water, and the loss of the loose earth at the top by high winds. The oil is applied hot from a barge in the river, and contracts have been let for extensive oiling. If experience prove the scheme as valuable as the experiments have led those interested to believe another important use for oil will have been found—not only in California but on all the leveed rivers of this and other countries, where similar conditions prevail.

Congressional Proceedings.

By the vote of 57 to 15, the senate Wednesday passed the bill carrying into effect the reciprocity treaty with Cuba. The final vote came at the close of the day, which was marked by a debate which, while at all times animated, was never acrimonious. The principal speeches were made by Mr. Spooner for the bill, and by Bailey against it. The bill passed carries to execution the treaty between the United States and Cuba which was ratified last March.

The treaty provides for a reduction of 20 per cent from the rates of duty under the Dingley law on all Cuban articles imported into the United States and a varying reduction of from 20 to 40 per cent from the established Cuban duty on articles into Cuba from the United States.

After the passage of the Cuban treaty the senate agreed to the house resolution providing for a holiday recess from December 19 to January 4.

Central American affairs were discussed in the house and also pensions, industrial and agricultural conditions, and labor. The session lasted more than four hours, the house being in committee of the whole almost the entire time on the pension appropriation bill, on which no conclusion was reached.

The house committee on agriculture held a hearing on the bill weevil question. Mr. Burgess, of Texas, made a detailed presentation of the subject to the committee and was followed by Dr. Galloway, chief of the bureau of plant industry, and Dr. Howard, chief of the division of entomology.

It is understood to be the purpose to have the bill reported to the house and taken up immediately upon the assembling of congress after the holidays.

A favorable report was ordered by the senate committee on military affairs on the bill providing for the appropriate marking of graves of soldiers and sailors of the confederate army.

After a session of two and a quarter hours the senate Saturday adjourned until January 4th. The sitting was devoted largely to a speech by Mr. Pettus, of Alabama, on the situation in Panama on which he took the position that the recognition of the republic of Panama by the United States had been premature and of such a character as to render it of doubtful appearance.

Senator Gorman sought but failed to secure an order upon the postmaster general directing him to send to the senate the full record of the post-office department inquiry. His resolution to this effect was defeated for the time by an objection from Mr. Quay.

At the executive session of the senate Mr. Morgan moved to reconsider the motion by which the nomination of W. J. Buchanan to be minister to Panama was confirmed on Thursday last, and the motion was discussed for half an hour without being acted upon. Senators Morgan and Bacon said that they had intended to oppose confirmation of Mr. Buchanan's nomination, but had not observed when it was taken up in the senate and had therefore been unprepared for the announcement of his confirmation. They were not even aware of the fact that the nomination had been reported from the committee on foreign relations. There is no personal objection to Mr. Buchanan and both based their opposition to the act of sending any representative to Panama at this time. No vote was taken on Mr. Morgan's motion, but it has the effect of tying up the matter, as notice of the senator's action had not been sent to the president before the motion was entered.

The house, after being in session for half an hour, adjourned for the holiday recess. A resolution was agreed to by which the postmaster general was requested to forward to the house papers in connection with the postoffice investigation.

The action of yesterday authorizing the committee on expenditures in the postoffice department to request the papers was vacated, the speaker having announced that a careful count of the vote showed that with the speaker.

One Killed, Several Hurt.

Saturday night on the approach to the high trestle one mile and a half south of Dogwood, Ala., of the Three B's branch of the Southern railway a disastrous wreck occurred, resulting in the killing of one and injuring five of the crews of two freight trains.

The dead: Morgan M. Brown, brakeman.

The injured: W. Wallace, engineer. C. B. Anchor, fireman. Thomas Scully, fireman. Caesar Walker, colored, fireman. E. M. McDonough, brakeman.

The wreck was a collision.

Pleaded Guilty.

Charles Banks and Robert Hamill were arrested in Anniston, Ala., on the charge of breaking into the postoffice at Earnest, Ala., and taking $10.35 of postoffice funds, two pairs of shoes, handkerchiefs, pipes and other things. Banks pleaded guilty and his bond was placed at $1,000. The further hearing of Hamill was continued until the 28th. Both men were remanded to jail in default of bond.

On the vote the final vote was a tie—10 to 10, and the previous question had not been ordered.

President Roosevelt transmitted to the house the third installment of papers relating to the recent revolution of the isthmus of Panama. The papers comprise the correspondence between the state department and Minister Deagre relative to the Hay-Herran treaty, consisting of 120 letters and telegrams.

The relationship of the United States to the new republic of Panama continued to be the leading theme in the senate Friday, but the discussion was confined to one senator, and was not so exciting as on Thursday. Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, was the speaker, and he advocated the acceptance of Mr. Hoar's resolution calling upon the president for information relative to the November revolution in Panama.

Senator Morgan introduced a resolution declaring that the president has no right to wage war against any foreign power without the consent of congress when such a country is at peace with the United States; that the provision of the canal treaty between the United States and Panama, guaranteeing the independence of the republic of Panama, is in effect a declaration of war with Colombia, and with the intervention of the United States in preventing Colombia from suppressing the secession of Panama is contrary to the law of neutrality and the law of nations.

Senator Morgan introduced a bill to fix the compensation of the members of the isthmian canal commission. It is almost identical with that under which the present commission is now serving.

The senate, in executive session, ratified the treaty "for the extension of the commercial relations" between the United States and China, and then removed the injunction of secrecy.

The committee on public buildings and grounds authorized Chairman Fairbanks to make a favorable report on the bill making an appropriation of $7,000,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of a building for the department of state, justice and labor.

The house by resolution authorized the committee on expenditures in the postoffice department to request the postmaster general to furnish that committee the papers in connection with the recent postoffice investigation, but not until after a lively debate. The resolution met opposition on the republican side.

Among the measures introduced were the following:

By Representative Morrell, of Pennsylvania—Granting a rebate of 15 per centum of tariff duties on goods brought to and from the Philippine Islands in American ships.

By Representative Shafroth, of California—A constitutional amendment providing the right to vote shall not be denied on account of sex.

The senate Thursday was the scene of debate on the isthmian canal question as effected by the president's recognition of the independence of the republic of Panama. The discussion began with a speech by Mr. Hoar on his resolution of inquiry and lasted several hours. In addition to Mr. Hoar's address there were speeches by Mr. Gorman and Mr. Foraker.

At the beginning of the session Mr. McComas, of Maryland, reported a bill from the committee on privileges providing for the protection of foreign exhibitors of artistic, musical and literary works at the St. Louis world's fair. It was at once passed.

Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, made a speech in advocacy of the bill to aid the Lewis and Clarke expedition at Portland, Oregon. He said that almost half a million dollars should be raised by the sale of stock of the expedition company and that over $700,000 had been raised by different states for the purpose of making exhibits, making a total of $1,226,507 of available money for the enterprise.

When the house convened the speaker signed the bill carrying into effect the Cuban reciprocity treaty, using a gold pen provided by the Cuban minister. The Panama question was discussed and the pension bill passed without division.

Monday was the shortest day in the year.

Brewery Sold.

The plant of the Montgomery Brewery was sold at auction to J. C. Haas, of Montgomery, Ala., the price paid being $3,500, the purchaser assuming $50,000 of bonded indebtedness. The sale was by decree of the United States court. The brewery has not been successfully operated during the past few years and about a year ago the bond holders had it placed in the hands of a receiver. In an interview Mr. Haas stated the purchasers were wealthy Montgomarians and that the plant would be immediately placed in first class condition.

Jeff Vanhorn, charged with the murder of Bud Clark, was given ten years at hard labor by the jury. It is alleged that Vanhorn and Clark became involved in a quarrel while they were on the Frisco train between Cordova and Horse Creek, Ala. Vanhorn, in the row, struck Clark over the head with a large whisky bottle; then, it is said, pushed him from the last moving train. Clark received injuries from which he died in a few days.

POPE LEO'S FORTUNE

$9,000,000 Turned Over to the Vatican.

According to the Tribune $9,000,000 in bank notes, left by Pope Leo XIII, which have been searched for since his holiness' death, have been found and placed in the Vatican.

Cardinal Goti, and Mr. Marzolini carried the money to the apartment of Pope Pius. It soon became known, however, that the bag contained $9,000,000 in bank notes. When Cardinal Goti entered the presence of the pope he sank to his knees, and pointing to his burden, said:

"Your holiness, the lamented, just before his death, confided to me the money which I now lay at your feet, saying that if I succeeded him, I was to use it as I thought best, but if another took his place I was to turn the money over to him, after a period of four months had elapsed. This I now do in the presence of Monsignor Marzolini, who has been the only person to share the secret."

The pope was much affected. Later an electrician while removing the hangings in the late Pope Leo's chamber, in order to get at the electric light wires, found in a hole in the wall several bags, which were carelessly tied. The bags when opened were found to contain $1,850,000.

PRESERVED IN STONE.

Lincoln's Speech at Gettysburg to Appear on Memorial Tablet.

Secretary Root has entered into a contract with the Van Andring company for the erection in the national cemetery at Gettysburg of a memorial of the address delivered by President Lincoln on November 19, 1862, on the dedication of that cemetery.

In February, 1901, congress passed an act appropriating $5,000 for a suitable bronze tablet containing a passage from the address referred to. The plans approved by Secretary Root called for granite exedra, twenty-two feet wide, containing a granite pillar surmounted by a bronze bust of the martyred president. The site selected is as near where the speech was delivered as possible under existing conditions.

Bad Health Caused It.

John Shields, a prominent resident and planter of near Selma, Ala., committed suicide at his country home Sunday morning last by shooting himself through the temple.

Shortly after breakfast Shields went into the bedroom and tilted the mirror on the bureau, and drawing up in front of it a large rocking chair, seated himself in it, and putting a small caliber pistol to the side of his head pulled the trigger, the ball going through his brain and killing him instantly.

Shields has been in very bad health and it is thought that becoming dependent on that account he decided to kill himself. He leaves a wife, daughter and two sons.

Robbers at Work.

A special from Knoxville, Tenn., says:

Three young white men, masked, committed three hold-ups Friday night. They first entered the office of the Precinct Coal company and after demanding in vain that Bookkeeper Murphy open the safe, knocked him on the head and robbed him. Later they shot and killed Corbin Rowe, white, in North Knoxville and robbed him. The third robbery was of Chas. Rodgers, a society leader, who was shot in the leg. Rodgers escaped from the highwaymen. The police have no clue to the guilty parties.

Freight Car Shortage.

Owing to the continued great scarcity of freight cars, the cotton crop of Mississippi is being moved to market chiefly in flat and gondola cars, the buyers and exporters being unable to secure regular box cars for the service. At nearly every principal cotton market point the platforms and warehouses are piled high with the staple awaiting shipment.

Charged With Defaulting.

Hospital Steward J. S. Minor, of the Seventh cavalry, is under military arrest and a warrant has been issued by the United States court at Atlanta for the arrest of Charles F. Hood, a merchant of Park City, Ga., on a charge of defrauding the government. It is alleged on the sworn testimony that Minor, who made the purchase for goods not supplied by the quartermaster, secured his supplies from Hood, and that he marked as correct bills for larger amounts than were actually received. The man is alleged to have then divided up the profits.

Merger Declared Constitutional.

Arguments were delivered before the Mississippi supreme court in the friendly suit between the Southern railway and Mississippi Valley road instituted in the circuit court of Le-flore county to test the validity of the merger bill passed by the legislature of 1902, whereby the latter road, bought from the former the Itea branch now being operated as a part of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley system. The constitutionality of the act was affirmed in the lower court.

FAMILY TROUBLES

Lead to the Killing of J. J. Hamrick By A. J. Mothershead.

With the statement, "You will never ruin another home," A. J. Mothershead, of Pratt City, shot and killed J. J. Hamrick, also of Pratt City, on the streets of Birmingham Friday night. Mothershead surrendered to policemen and is in jail on a charge of murder. The shooting was the result of family troubles. The cause is best told by Mothershead's words a minute after the shooting. He said:

"He robbed me of my happy home. I am the man that did the shooting. I don't care if they hang me or what they do to me. If I had a cannon I would have shot him to pieces. He robbed my home. I have not known the man but two hours. His name is Hamrick, so people tell me."

Mothershead twirled the pistol around on his finger. He was perfectly cool and stood at the clear counter until the policemen arrived when he held up his weapon and said he was the man who did the shooting.

Mothershead is a carpenter and lives with his wife and children in Pratt City.

LIVING OVER AGAIN.

The Scenes of a Century Ago When the Flags Were Changed.

Representatives of three nations, possessors at different times of the territory which Napoleon ceded to Jefferson, joined hands with the people of Louisiana in the celebration of the centennial of the transfer. The exercises included a brilliant reception at the city hall, interesting exercises in the old Spanish cabildo in which a century ago the Citizen Lausant formally transferred the province, a review of the military and the visiting American and French marines and a gala performance at the French opera.

Will Vote as a Unit.

The agreement of the democratic caucus of the senate that hereafter the democratic senators shall vote as a unit on party questions has aroused much interest. The text of the resolution is as follows:

"That hereafter the decisions of the caucus when made by two-thirds majority shall be binding on all the members except when previous pledges have been made by senators to their constituents, or instructions have been received from their state legislatures, or when a question of constitutional construction is involved."

Injunction Granted.

Judge H. C. Niles, of the federal court has granted a temporary injunction restraining the railroad commission and state revenue agent from assessing the Illinois Central railroad $1,000,000 back taxes which the state revenue agent alleges that the road owes. Judge Niles has named Monday, January 18, as the day for the hearing of the case.

Under the Wheels.

W. P. Cost, aged 37 years, was run over and killed by a freight train at Altoona, Ala., Saturday night. In some manner the man was caught between the cars and fell under the wheels, which cut off both of his arms and legs. It is said that he had a wife and children.

Three Killed.

Near Vicksburg, Miss., Thomas Griffin, a wealthy planter of Franklin parish, Louisiana, and two negroes were instantly killed by a boiler explosion Saturday. Mr. Griffin was one of the most prominent men of his section. He was sixty years of age.

The Sugar Crop.

The grinding campaign has been completed on the majority of the sugar plantations in the Louisiana sugar district, and the general results show an excellent yield in sugar from the tonnage of cane available, though the place was short on the majority of latos.

The president issued a proclamation reciting the passage of the Cuban reciprocity treaty and declaring the Cuban reciprocity treaty to be effective.

An agreement has been reached between Governor Taft and the friars, by which the United States will acquire the friar lands for the sum of $7,210,000 gold.

The pope has given his approval of the terms of the settlement, and the approval of the war department is awaited. The settlement provides for the purchase of 403,000 acres, comprising 12,000 acres, including a farm near Manila, which has been sold to a railroad company, and also one sugar plantation. The friars originally asked fifteen millions. Governor Taft offered them six millions.

Notables Coming.

Information received from Washington is to the effect that Admiral Dewey and Rear Admiral Taylor, the latter the chief of the bureau of navigation, will visit Pensacola, Fla., the middle of February, coming on the yacht Mayflower.

Mine workers of Alabama have donated $500 toward the fund for an iron volcano to represent this district at the St. Louis world's fair.

COLLEGE BURNED

A Number of Students Lost Their Lives.

Nine persons are known to have been killed and perhaps thirty more injured, twelve of them fatally, in a fire which consumed the Central Tennessee college for young women, department of Walden university, Methodist institution, at Nashville, Tenn. The building was four stories high, without fire escapes, and occupied by about sixty students, were asleep when the alarm was given.

321 KILLED

Last Year by the Railroads—A Crease from 1900.

Figures show that a total of 321 passengers on railroads in the States were killed during the year ending June 30, 1901. In a little over 110 passengers were killed in that period, which is a percentage of 0.045 per cent of passengers carried.

In again accidents, 124 persons were killed, making the percentage 0.0023. The railroads of the States had a total of 1,244,000 passengers on their pay rolls, and of this number 1,233 were killed, while 1,241 employees were killed. The percentage of the employees killed is 93.

There was a decrease in the number of fatalities to passengers in accidents over the previous year.

FURNACE STOVE EXPLODES

And Entire Plant is Compelled to Suspend for a Short Time.

An over pressure of air caused the stove of a furnace of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company, Ensley, Ala., to explode Saturday morning. James Douglas, a sales man, and a negro were fatally injured. Douglas had both arms broken and was severely bruised.

Considerable excitement was caused in the yards by the explosion. Bricks and blocks were scattered in every direction and the top of the stove was completely demolished, almost half of it being blown away. The fall plate crashed through the top of the stock house, cutting water and gas pipes.

As a result of the explosion it was found necessary to shut down all furnaces.

As the officials refused to give any information it is impossible to estimate the loss incurred by the explosion. There were two theories as to what caused the accident. One thought that it was caused by the explosion of gas in the stove; others that the air pressure was too great causing the stove to be blown pieces. The latter theory is accepted by the officials.

NAVAL ORDERS

About Isthmian Matters Will Not Made Generally Public.

Let Colombians take the hint. The restraining keynote of instructions which Secretary Root has cabled to the American naval commanders in Isthmian waters.

The secretary has taken active part in the shaping of the naval policy of the isthmus and from now on the instructions whether to naval officers will as far as possible be framed at his personal direction. He announced that while the situation of the isthmus is in no way adverse to the Washington government, sufficiently delicate to compel diplomatic handling. For this secrecy has been enjoined on officials in the department regarding the operations of ships and marines. The only official information on the subject will be given out at the discretion of the secretary.

Fire at Guntersville, Ala. Friday night destroyed the Alabama hotel and the residences of J. C. Wilson, J. D. Johnston and Walter Cloud. Loss will aggregate $10,000. No injured.

Found Dead by Camp Fire.

The body of Charles A. Davis, found near a camp at Macon, Fla., with all the clothes burned, Davis had held many important positions with railroads and other corporations and is well known throughout the southern states. He was reported to be wealthy and eccentric. He was a thirty-second degree mason.

Ovens Repaired.

The work of overhauling the ovens of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company at West Pratt is progressing rapidly. Two big ovens of the coke ovens closed down a day ago for repairs and plans for the work has been pushed rapidly. Everything will be in readiness for ovens to start up in a few days.

FARMERS' CORNER

Quality in Cows.

Many agree that give a very large quantity of rich milk are very poor animals, as the cream does not separate from the milk by ordinary methods of churning. There is a quality in the milk which is the only way of determining this undesirable quality in a cow.

Care of Horses.

Many are prone to allow their horses to run out of condition. A horse of worth will last in the stable and on the track for a long time. A horse that is not properly cared for will not last long. A horse that is not properly cared for will not last long. A horse that is not properly cared for will not last long.

The most profitable way of raising pigs is to keep them in a clean, wholesome condition and never allowed to sour. The most profitable way of raising pigs is to keep them in a clean, wholesome condition and never allowed to sour.

Picking a Good Layer.

An old country poultryman makes the following suggestions as a help in selecting good layers. There are certain individual characteristics, one of which is the shape of the bird. It is a straight line from the back of the head to the toes. The hen which is likely to be a good layer will usually have the hinder half of her body larger, whilst a hen which may be suspected of being a poor layer will show more in the front.

The reason being that a poor layer makes the better table bird, and has a larger, longer breast, whilst a good layer makes a poor table bird, and has a comparatively small breast, whilst the egg organs are more fully developed. Birds which are good layers are usually very active. They always look healthy, and in most cases their combs are fully developed, particularly if they belong to the long-combed varieties, which are reputed to be the best layers. A hen with a long comb may usually be regarded as a good layer, and there is not there must be some special reason for the contrary.

Improvement by Selection.

Every one would like to have the ideal hen that begins laying in November, keeps it up all winter and raises a flock of nice plump cockerels, and good laying pullets in the summer when eggs are cheap. To secure such a class of poultry, we would say get some pure-bred foundation stock and then select for the desired end. Selection is the groundwork of improvement, not only in poultry, but also in all farm stock. December laying strains do not come by chance. To get this trait, the pullets are hatched early, fed well to maturity, well cared for in the fall, and when there is a marked tendency shown by a few individuals to get down to earnest work, the eggs of these few are used the following year for hatching, and so the work for improvement goes on. The same course is followed in producing table fowl. Every one can practice this improvement if the trouble is taken, and when the work is undertaken intelligently and with determination the trouble is considerably decreased. The lean, long-legged hen, and the over-fat, idle individual should go to the kitchen early in their existence; then when spring comes and the time for hatching begins, the eggs from the most desirable types need only be used. This systematic selection is the only way in which we can increase the usefulness of our poultry and the profits of poultry raising.

Green Cut Bone.

There is no doubt that green cut bone is all right for poultry feeding in the winter. But the trouble is that it is difficult to secure. In the first place, a bone cutter is expensive, and then you have to see about getting a supply of bone. Then, running a bone-cutter is no child's play; it takes a man to do it, or at least a good, stout, healthy woman.

If there was demand enough and the butchers could be persuaded to run the machine and sell to their customers, that would be an easy way out of the matter. But there are but few people in a neighborhood who use cut bone, so that the demand is not great.

On most farms the men are too busy to pay much attention to the poultry, and running a bone-cutter would not be strictly to the taste of the average farmer. Of course, if a large flock is kept, say one hundred or two hundred hens, it will pay to own and operate a bone-cutter, but for twenty-five or fifty it is doubtful.

In the summer the fowls get enough insects to supply the demand for a meat diet, but the winter season deprives them of all except what is fed to them. But these difficulties do not confront one who undertakes to supply penalty of grit. A hammer and a flat rock are all the tools it takes to pound up bits of broken dishes and glass, and oyster shells can be bought by the sack already crushed. The necessity of grit may be readily discovered by watching a fowl attack a handful of broken dishes.—Successful Farmer.

Dairy Wisdom.

Milk must be properly cooled and its temperature kept regular either by natural or artificial means.

Churning at too high a temperature or churning too long will produce greasy butter in which the grain is injured.

Never use the hands in working butter

as the ice hand contact butter gets the better, also be careful not to overwork it.

Scour cream makes tough butter and is lacking in that delicate aroma that attaches to butter made from cream that is ripe, but not sour, although sour cream churns quicker than sweet.

If the cream is too cold, either the butter will hardly come at all or it will come white and poor flavored.

If the milk is left at too high a temperature the milk sours and becomes rancid before all of the cream rises.

One of the very best foods for milk production is bran, oil meal, corn meal and plenty of good clover hay.

A heifer calf intended for a dairy cow should be trained from birth with this in view and be made gentle and tractable.

Cream should be well stirred and given plenty of time to stir evenly before it is put into the churn.

Fancy Pigeons.

Every variety of pigeon has its lover, and everything is a matter of taste. One fancier is "dead stuck" on pouters or fanfals because their proud and active appearance pleases his taste, others think a good performing tumbler is the only pigeon, while others believe the markings is the most beautiful part of a pigeon, and admires all varieties in which the composition of color strikes their taste. But, alas, the last variety of fanciers is the hardest to please. They differ so much in opinion, change it quite often, follow the leading fads, discard one kind after the other, and through this evolution of taste some varieties have been much neglected.

The most interesting as well as the most useful of all domestic pigeons is undoubtedly the "Working Homer." The large number of entries in the Homer classes at the various shows and the increase during the recent years of homing clubs and societies, which are to be found in many towns and villages, prove the popularity of this breed. Homers are capital pigeons for the novice to make a start with, for they are extremely hardy and excellent parents. In this respect they differ from some of the high class pigeons which are more or less delicate, and in some instances unable to rear their own young. The "Working Homer" can, moreover, be bought for a moderate sum. The showy homer is a much more expensive bird. It has within the last twenty years been bred from selected "Working Homers," and has attained such a perfection that upward of $100 has been given for a high class specimen.—American Poultry Advocate.

Horse Racing and War.

Ever since the time of Henry II. the government of England has recognized the fact that the best way to raise the standard of the horse of the country is to encourage racing, and long before that it was understood that the army having the best horses would win the warfare.

With our territory and extended boundary making the rapid mobilization of troops imperative in emergencies, it is important that our standard of horse should be as high as that of any other country. Then our immense grazing lands put us in a position to produce high class horses at a cost which would enable us to compete favorably in all the markets of the world, and in large quantities. We need only to produce the high standard.

It may be suggested that this might be accomplished without racing, or, at least, without the betting and other accessories; but this has been shown to be impossible. Racing on a large scale cannot be carried on successfully without betting. While you can't prevent gambling, however, you can control it by permitting it on the race courses, under certain restrictions.

In England, the traditions of long years sustain racing as strongly as if it were entrenched behind the laws of the land, and the real object of it has never been lost sight of. In France and other European countries the importance of racing is so well understood that the governments give it their supervision, licensing the associations through their departments of war and agriculture.—Belmont Purdy in Outlook.

A land flowing with milk is an ancient idea, but streets paved with milk is a notion essentially modern. It is being seriously proposed to the municipality of Paris by a contractor of standing. He claims for a pavement of indurated milk the advantages of durability and noiselessness.

pays the entire expense of the mint.

And peace on earth, their message rang.

The message of good will I send—
The loving wishes of a friend,
That happiness may bring us all,
At Christmas time
That comes to-day

At Christmas time in future years—
And all the other days beside,
May life for you always provide

Dorothy Jane knew nothing about society, and did not fully understand Bright Eyes' idea of life. All she could think about was Jennie Reed, and whether or not they would be happy together. "Get that big French doll out, Bill," said the driver to his assistant, as the wagon suddenly stopped. It startled Dorothy Jane, as she had about made up her mind to tell Bright Eyes that she had missed entirely the object of life when she made love secondary. All she had time to say, as she put an unshapely rag hand in one of Bright Eyes' was, "Make that little girl love you." But Bright Eyes tossed her head scornfully as Bill ran with her up the brownstone steps. "If you ever get up into high society call on me," were her parting words.

Bill complained bitterly to the driver about being overworked after he had handed Dorothy Jane over to Mrs. Reed, on the fifth floor of the East Side tenement house. Mrs. Reed took the rag baby and quietly sat her in the fireplace, facing Jennie's little bed.

A MERRY Christmas to you.

Hon. S. I. Bowie has introduced a bill granting certain lands belonging to the United States and situated in the State of Alabama for the use and benefit of the common schools of that State. It was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

THAT was an admirable letter of Judge Adams, published in The Banner last week, in which he stated his determination not to become a candidate for a second term. It breathed a spirit of Christianity for his fellowman, and a tolerance for the opinions of others that may well be emulated by some of our politicians. It is an undisputed fact that Judge Adams has made the county an excellent official, and that his chances for re-election were, to say the least, exceedingly good. Since the demise of the Populist party there have been many mis-statements made,
and wrong motives imputed to those who declined, to be led into the Republican party, and Judge Adams' attitude at this time proves that he, at all events, followed his honest convictions, and that no thought of office interferes with that which he considers right. All honor to Judge Adams.

At a meeting of the citizens of Clanton held at the court house last Monday night, for the purpose of nominating candidates for a mayor and four councilmen for 1904, P. C.
Dennis was elected chairman and Frank Crichton secretary.

The name of J. Osmond Middleton was placed before the meeting as a candidate for mayor, and the gratifying chorus of "Second the motion" attests the popularity of the nominee. For councilmen the following were unanimously nominated: W. I. Mullins, J. M. Potts, E. G. Rollins and W. M. Wilson.
Up to the present no opposition has been spoken of and the probabilities are that the ticket will be elected without opposition.

Since the incorporation of the town, Clanton has made a great stride forward, and the prospects are excellent for further advancement in the coming year.

At the call of Mayor P. C. Dennis a meeting of the citizens of Clanton was held at the court house Monday night to consider a proposition to erect a bridge over the cutting at Fourth avenue. For years the bridge has been deemed a necessity, and now the L. & N. R. company had expressed their willingness to build a bridge across their tracks, free of cost to the town, provided the town would build the approaches and grant the Railroad certain privileges of blocking the crossing at Second avenue and at First avenue. Opposition to granting any concession as to blocking Second avenue, the main street of the town, and the principal highway of Chilton county, at once manifested itself, and after a lengthy discussion the meeting passed a resolution authorizing the Mayor and Council to enter into negotiations with the L. & N. Railroad company for the erection of the bridge without reference to granting any concessions as to blocking the crossings.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Friday morning, Dec. 11th, 1903, the first session of the Chilton county Teachers' Institute for this scholastic year was called to order by Prof. J. W. Moore, County superintendent of Education, at the Union Normal Institute, near Flor-issa.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Prof. H. T. Wallace of Clanton, after which Mr. J. W.
Hayes, representing the people of the Union Normal, welcomed the Institute.

An appropriate response to the foregoing welcome address was made by Prof. J. L. Ruffin of Jenison.

Fundamental Factors in "School Room Education" was the first subject taken up by the Institute. Miss Annie O. Shivers read an excellent paper upon the subject, augmented by short talks from quite a number of teachers, thus showing in the outset of the session that the educators of Chilton county had assembled to work and be worked for the furtherance of the cause of education.

The enrollment was then begun, and twenty-seven teachers became members of the Institute. The morning program being concluded, the Institute was given a recess until 1:30 p.m.

Promptly, as per adjournment, Superintendent Moore called the afternoon session.

Physiology in the primary grades,
was represented by Prof. W. B.
Speer of Stanton, and Miss Alice Strook of Clanton; they showing in connection, that physiology may and should be taught to the child, even before being advanced enough to use a text, thereby entailing the use of objects and models, which tend to firmly fix in the child's mind applicable principles, which enlive this usually dry subject through all the subsequent grades.

A paper, upon the value of object training was read by Miss Turner Belle Mullins, showing the paramount use of objects as memory lessons; and so it is that we retain longest those lessons which are impressed upon us through every avenue of preception.

Prof. J. L. Ruffin delivered an address on Educational Improvements yet needed. He very severely criticized the small salary of the county superintendents of education, and the menial pay of the rank and file of teachers; more money, better schools, and true it is that money paid to a judicious teacher, thereby enabling him to better prepare himself, or herself, as the case may be,
is an investment that will result in the more thorough training of the youth of our country. Better school buildings, and better equipments, is the crying need of our country at the present time.

SATURDAY.

Devotional exercises conducted by Mr. J. W. Hayes. Prof. J. L.
Butlin, Williams, and Miss Strook were appointed a committee on resolutions. Prof. Brewer read an excellent paper on "Order."

Prof. Rasco addressed the Institute on the "Importance of Good Reading, and how to obtain the best results in a class." In his clear-cut and convincing manner, he entertained the Institute with many valuable suggestions, as to teaching reading and gratifying results obtainable even in the rural schools.
Mental arithmetic, was discussed by Prof. E. L. Dodson, of the Union Normal, and Miss Laura McGehee.
They showed very conclusively that Mental Arithmetic, as a mind trainer is without an equal.

Prof. H. T. Wallace gave a short talk on the Value of Term Examinations that was greatly appreciated.
The program being concluded Miss McGehee entertained the Institute with a recitation. Miss McGehee is very clever in her role and the audience greatly appreciated her efforts.

The Committee on Resolutions reported and read as follows:

Report No. 1.—Whereas we, the teachers of Chilton county, realizing that we need some means of professional training, at a cost commensurate with our small salaries; and whereas a training class among ourselves for a term of at least two weeks, would be of great value to us, be it Resolved 1st, that Supt.
Moore appoint two teachers to act with him in arranging for such a training class of teachers, during the latter part of June, 1904. 2, that there should be no cost to any teacher except his personal expenses: 3, that no Instructor shall receive any compensation, nor other person except the members of the committee, and they only enough to cover printing, stationery and postage. 4, that we will endeavor to attend if satisfactory terms can be made for board. Report No. 2.— Whereas, in this session, we have met under the most favorable and pleasant surroundings, with Prof. E.
L. Dodson and the people of Union Normal and have been entertained most royally, therefore be it Resolved 1st that we express our sincere thanks and appreciation to Prof.

Dodson and his people for their hospitality, sociability, and attendance upon our session. 2nd that we ask the Banner and the Union to publish our proceedings. Also that we appreciate their kindness in publishing our programs, announcements, etc., in their papers. J. L. Ruffin, Miss Alice Strook, F. B. Williams.

Comment The specific problems emphasized at this meeting, which in some degree indicate the trend of educational affairs in Chilton county are the following: 1st the urgent need of better school buildings in the rural districts, and better equipments. 2nd the school is as a social center emphasized. Each school should be furnished with a library; every school, however limited its means, can have a small library. 3rd that every school community should see to it that the school is furnished with working tools, such as charts, maps, etc. 4th in the holding of a summer normal for teachers, there are evidences of a forward movement along educational lines in Chilton county. Live issues demand live men and women.
The time has been that if one knew the R's he could take charge of a school. Education, like every other problem, is evolutionary. Only wide awake teachers need expect promotion. Ours is a calling, not a avocation. Let us not through negligence, strand the precious lives entrusted to our keeping. 5th thorough equipment is pre-eminent in the teacher. Thus it behooves every teacher in the county to look forward with the keenest anticipation, to the opening of the normal training class. He or she who would stand in the front ranks as a teacher must surely enlist their sympathies in this movement.

The next session of the teachers will be held, with Prof. Rasco. That just closed was one of the most prosperous sessions of the teachers that has been held for a number of years.
The people of the Union Normal are to be commended very highly for their manner of caring for the Institute. As teachers, we are glad to have held our meeting with them.
Many are the pleasant memories that attach themselves to our two days stay in that enterprising community. Many are the expressions of good feeling to Prof. Dodson for his kindly manner and exertions in behalf of the teachers. Withal our meeting was both pleasant and profitable, and it is hoped that our future sessions may fall along as pleasant lines. Respectfully, J. W. Moore, Supt.
L. E. BYRUM, Sec.

The Clanton Temperance Band will have an entertainment on Wednesday evening, Dec. 30, 1903, at the Methodist church, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock.
The public cordially invited, and solicited to attend.

Don't forget the old man with the fish on his back.

For nearly thirty years he has been traveling around the world, and is still traveling, bringing health and comfort wherever he goes.

To the consumptive he brings the strength and flesh
he so much needs.

To all weak and sickly children he gives rich and strengthening food.

To thin and pale persons he gives new firm flesh and rich red blood.

Children who first saw the old man with the fish are now grown up and have children of their own.

He stands for Scott's Emulsion of pure cod liver oil—a delightful food and a natural tonic for children, for old folks and for all who need flesh and strength.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Dec. 27, 1903
An interesting figure who will go down in American history as the man who made the only unanswerable silver argument ever delivered on the floor of the Senate of the United States, is the Hon. John P. Jones, of Nevada, who for the past thirty years has represented that State in the Senate. Since his retirement from the Senate I have had many inquiries from all parts of the country, from his admiring friends, as to his whereabouts, and what the old gentleman was now doing. I am now able to furnish the information based on a personal interview with the gentleman himself. I met him the other day and he said to me that he had retired permanently from politics and devote the balance of his life to mining industries, and to teaching the people of the country the greatness of his State of Nevada as a mining country, and which in his opinion is the greatest in the world.
He says that the recent gold strikes in the State have been the most wonderful of any yet discovered, and that they will eclipse the great Comstock Lode, which turned out more than $600,000,000 of the precious metal. He said that for the purpose of working for the mining interests of his State, he had opened offices here in Washington in the Colorado Building with Major D. B. Harrison, of New York, in charge. He said that thousands of dollars were annually wasted on fake mining schemes by the people of the country who were misled by conscienceless promoters. It was his intention, he said, to prevent this as far as lay in his power, by giving the people who desire to correspond with him, correct information concerning the mining properties of his State. He is again actively engaged in the mining business himself, being vice-president of the New England Tonopah mine and Annex, at To-nopah, Nevada, and has associated with him some of the wealthiest men in the country. He considers Tonopah the greatest mining camp ever discovered in Nevada. The old gentleman is hale and hearty and bids fair to live yet many years of usefulness.

It is nearing the blessed holiday season of the year when it is meet and proper that we should think of those who deserve our considerations, and send to them in remembrance a gift that will warm the cockles of the heart. Most people recognize this and are glad to comply with the dictates of the heart in this regard. In strange contrast with the actions of most people is that of the great United States Steel corporation, known all over the earth as the steel trust. Last year about this time they gave to their workmen a Christmas present by allowing them to buy preferred stock in their corporation at $24 which today is selling at 52 1/2 thus loosing for their men over thirty dollars apiece on what they bought.
At this Christmas they have reduced the wages of all their men, about 150,000, about twenty percent., thereby taking out of their pockets about $12,000,000, and just at this time when the cost of living is thirty per cent. higher than at any time for years. Such is the Christian feeling of this gigantic monopoly. When will the people elect a democratic administration and congress that will swat this giant? They may expect these things until they do.

The democrats here in Washington who are the leaders of the party have been indulging in a good deal of discussion and speculation as to presidential candidates lately.
It is a favorite theme of conversation wherever politicians do congregate.

Fight Will Be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual re-by fatal determination. Read what T. R. Beal of Beal, Mass. has to

In Memoriam

The death angel came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams last Thursday morning at two o'clock, taking away their little son Berners, aged 3 years, and on the 10th he was laid at rest in the J. L. Culp cemetery. Dear parents, do not weep, for he is gone to a better world than this, his home is in glory forever and ever. It is God's will, not ours, and we must be reconciled with the Lord. The Assessor and Collector will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of assessing the State and County taxes for 1904, and collecting the taxes for 1903:

Clanton, last ten days in the year, commencing December 21.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is so soon to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be ward off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. For sale by all Druggists, Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Dissolution of Partnership

Notice is hereby given that the partnership lately existing between J. H. Middleton, H. F. Chandler and W. F. Middleton, doing business under the firm name and style of Middleton, Chandler & Co., was dissolved by mutual consent on the 17th day of December, 1903.

All debts owing the said partnership are to be received by the said J. H. Middleton and W. F. Middleton or either of them, who will continue the business under the style of Middleton & Co. J. H. MIDDLETON, H. F. CHANDLER, W. F. MIDDLETON.

On my withdrawal from the above firm I desire to thank my friends for their patronage, and respectfully ask them to continue their favors to Middleton & Co. H. F. CHANDLER.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can all ways be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Clanton Drug Co., A. Horn Thorsby.

If we have observed this little miracle on the sandy shore of a coral key, let us walk inland to where the beautiful cocoanut palms rear their tall, slimy mass of fronds. The ground is littered with unripe cocoanuts, and, although we should be prepared for almost any surprise in this wonderland of nature, yet it is rather disconcerting when several of these pups protrude eight legs and scramble away. Cocoanut crabs, of course, with hard brown backs and neat pockets in which eye-stalks, jaws, feelers, claws and legs may be packed away so carefully that there results a cocoanut-identical

Hairpin Has Its Limits.

The British Knack.
The British postal service may be slower than the American, but it has its humors. The story is told that in one of the remotest districts of Oxfordshire—which contains some inaccessible and primitive villages—there has long been a sub-postmaster with a wooden leg. In performing his delivery of letters he drove a donkey cart. But he found it difficult to get up and down. So it has been his custom to take with him a tin bucket full of large stones. These he hurled one by one with steady aim at the door of his neighbors on occasion demanded. That was the postman's knack.

It came from the hole. The cotton-tail came out with a sudden rush. Its first bound landed it on the gun. Its fore feet struck the trigger. The gun was discharged, not barrels going off at once. Reynolds was in a stooping position, his dog near him. He was just far enough out of line of the gun to escape the full force of the charge in it, but two fingers were torn from his left hand, his left calf was badly lacerated by shot, and his left cheek filled with teem.

One of the dog's legs was shot off. The rabbit went on, and is still at large.

Statue of Tattie.
 "If I were a sculptor, I would make a mud statue of the Goddess of the Tattie and tie a gingham apron around it," says Uncle Jim in the Appleton Press. "Or you might make it a potato, put a derby hat on it, put a cigar between its teeth or a dead line of tattie hacco juice about its feet, and stand it on some street corner—without eliciting any comment. THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributions, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it. Men in public life, the President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

PROSPERITY OF THE SOUTH

Brainstreet's in one of its late issues, editorially says: "In no other section of this country are such wonderful and pleasing changes to be seen as in the Southern States. The establishment of large industrial plants is not the sole feature; its reputation of course is being secured thereby, but the farmer, the man of an all means is becoming more independent, he is growing with the growth of the section and his certainty of support, his certainty of being able to supply the demands of his family is giving him time for reflection and to consider what he may become. Caused by abundant crops, the Southern farmer of today is no longer the sports of the seasons; by the use of improved fertilizers, judiciously applied, his land is made as fertile as virgin soil, so that the hopes of yesterday are not blighted by the realities of today."

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

Plan to Interest the Government in the Matter.

The effort to form a union of all organizations that have for their object the beautifying of towns and cities which will be made in connection with the convention of the American Park and Outdoor Association in Buffalo next year will be widely approved, says the Buffalo Express. Most of the large cities and many towns and villages have such associations and would gladly join in the proposed movement.

One of the objects of forming a union is to interest the government in the work and get its support to the extent of collecting and making public information on the subject, with photographs, etc., showing what can be done by organized effort. The government's work would presumably be largely to show what has been done in foreign towns and cities. The individual organizations have accomplished much as it is, but there is a limitless field in which to work, and government aid would be valuable.

Every city in the country and many towns are, for example, filled with unsightly billboards and display advertising in the form of immense paintings on buildings, etc. The improvement societies have given their attention to this matter for a long time, with considerable success. The courts in several states have upheld the right of a city to regulate the size of billboards, and there is every reason for believing that in the not distant future billboards will have disappeared from towns and cities.

The care and planting of trees and shrubs, straightening the sidewalk lines, removal of sidewalk and lot fences and the beautifying of back yards are a few of the other changes which should be made in towns and cities. The question of architecture is another important point. There is plenty of work to be done in improvement, and any movement such as the proposed union of the separate societies which promises to help the cause should be heartily supported.

Revolution Imminent

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, and clarify the blood. Run-down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it does not give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by Clanton Drug Co., Hopkins Drug Co.

EVERYTHING PERFECT.

Now, if we all could live to where everything was perfect this world would be a great deal better to live in than what it is. Just think about the things that are left off that could be carried on, and would make everything, and everybody more happier than what it is. Christmas is here, and I am afraid that there will be things going on that will not be very nice. I don't want to see any young lady that will keep company with a boy that is full of whiskey this week, and not only this week but any other week. I can say this much for her, if a lady respects herself she will not keep any such company. Now, young men and boys, you know if a young lady was to get drunk, and let out where you could see her, don't you know that you would never keep her company? Now, I think she has the same right to do you the same. Oh, how it makes my heart leap for joy to think about how my mother and father talked to me and what good advice they gave me. I thank them right to day for their good talks and advice. I feel like a different boy to what I did two years ago. Oh, how nice it would be to see every boy that is growing up now, take their parents advice and live for the good of their country and to glorify our Father who art in heaven. Some people do not know what a great thing it is to live a Christian life. I have been living with God's people in the Baptist church a little over a year, and I would not give that year for all of my past life. It seemed that everything was brighter than ever to me. Of course, I do not mean to say that I have been perfect in everything; there have been some mistakes that I have made, not on purpose. God knows my heart and everything that I do I try to do it for His glory.

Now, girls, I just want to say one more word to you, then I will stop. If you want to be respected by nice people, please stay away from those little things called parties and dances; that is the ugliest thing that I ever did see a girl do, just to get on the floor and let the boys jerk them around. I wonder how many of our home girls were at Randolph last Fourth of July, and saw those girls and boys—well, what must I call it? In the plainest English that I can state it was nothing but public highway hugging, all the difference that I could see was that they did not hug with but one hand. Now, girls, I would be ashamed of my past life and spoil out and start a new. I have been to a dance myself and I know good and well what I went for.

Well, I think I have said enough for this time. Hope everybody will have a merry Xmas, and remember what this day is for. I will close and come again.

MAN ON THE CORNER

And this is the last day of the year, old year, you have been and one, may none of us see the new year. To many, we are going with all the good resolutions of the new year (although I know experience some of those good resolutions are awfully hard to keep). But no matter, let us all make resolutions, and let the first be, "Resolved, I am making good resolutions for 1904, and when more I am going to keep them. That one alone will help the rest."

1904 is a political year, and there will be differences of opinion among men; let us resolve to argue these differences in a friendly manner, and convince, by the force of reason, we are right. When men differs with us, and will not see that we know it all, and course must be correct, let us bravely resolve that maybe the other man knows just as much about politics (of course he could not know more) as we do, and there is just a possibility that maybe he is right, so we won't call him a traitor and other objectionable epithets, but reason with him. If he won't listen to reason, let him alone, because if we don't leave him alone he may convert us, and the man who begins 1904 with a determination that he will not be left alone, that belief, 1904 will possibly make him see better before its close. And now I wish you all a heartily a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Everybody seemed to have a good time Christmas, the boys especially. On Christmas day so twenty-five or more of our young men, fantastically attired, galloped on their steeds, paraded the town, to the intense delight of the rising generation and the satisfaction of their elders. It was pretty sight and the boys deserve to be encouraged in these picturesque efforts. By the way, it's much better use of their spare time than destroying public property, blowing it up with dynamite. Christmas tree at the court house was a pronounced success, and ladies are entitled to great praise for the artistic arrangement of tree. It was just lovely!

Right away we start electioneering. Thorsby leads off next day with its municipal election. There are two tickets in the race, one headed by E. F. Mead, other by J. Bice. The citizens Thorsby have their choice of good men for mayor. Next comes Clanton, and it appears that ticket headed by J. O. Middle will be elected on January 11 without any opposition. And to A. Smith belongs the honor of commencing the campaign of 1904 announcing his candidacy for office of Judge of Probate; campaign is now open.

Tuesday night Judge Adams called upon to unite in wedding the residence of Dr. Hopkins. J. Watts Moore, one of our popular rising young business men, Miss Emma Mullins, eldest daughter of W. I. Mullins, and one of most charming of Clanton's young ladies. May the Lord bless union of this happy young couple.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the things he saw, and some he saw not.

And this is the last day of 1903. Goodby, old year, you have been a good one, may none of us ever see a worse. To morrow we are in 1904 with all its possibilities before us. Who can tell what the coming year may bring forth—what of good and what of evil? We will thankfully accept the good, so then let us resolve, so far as lies in our power, to avert the evil. I like the practice of making good resolutions at the new year (although I know from experience some of those good resolutions are awfully hard to keep). But no matter, let us make good resolutions, and let the first one be, "Resolved, I am making good resolutions for 1904, and what is more I am going to keep them." That one alone will help the rest.

Lily.

In the post office guide there is no Lily, but "Lilydale" still exists; the fairest, the loveliest little valley in Chilton. So we shall still come once in a while asking a corner in the good old Banner. Yes, the old star route is gone and in its stead we have the R. F. D., and we do not know why everyone should not appreciate the efforts of the government to give us better mail service. We say thankie, Uncle Sam, thankie, and look forward with brighter hopes to the establishment of neighborhood telephones, another important step toward robbing country life of its isolation.

Christmas is quiet here. Many relatives are back in the old home for a few days. The visitors are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony of Decatur; Mrs. Geneva Martin of Talladega; Mr. Crit Jones and wife of Clanton to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seaborn Jones; Mr. and Mrs. Vanderville of Perry and Mr. Joe Malone of Texas to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Malone; Mr. Jonathan Jones of Arkansas to Mr. Robt. Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Carter to Mr. J. H. Rasberry. Besides these we would mention Prof. Lewis Byrum, Prof. Toy Williams, Glaucus Durbin, Ruben Cox, Basil Washburn and Harvey Nix, who were with relatives or their best girl.

The Xmas tree and entertainment by Prof. Speer's school, was highly enjoyed by a good audience. Everything was appropriate to the time and was well received by the pupils. The piece "Little Jean," from Baldwin's Fourth Reader, was rendered in dialogue by the school and was well received. The Calfee-Davenport band discoursed sweet music through the program and everything went merry as marriage bells.

Happy New Year to all and success to the banner. AMIE.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

Says the Lewiston Journal: "The chief Executive of Maine is a great believer in the young man of business, and chatting with a friend recently, said: The talk of overcrowded studies and professions is just as untrue as it ever was and will be. There is more room, more opportunity and more reward for the young man-to-day in Maine than has ever been. It depends on the young man himself. In the language of the day, one might say that it is "up to him." The world is demanding a greater and a growing need for young men with executive ability. The young man who gives to a trade or profession the time that is required to master it, and then applies judgment to the horse sense, is going to succeed. The latter qualities are the two that will place him ahead of the rest who are perhaps been doing the same work that he has. Given them and the position to work and the young man will soon become the man of affairs. It is this combination that makes the manager who succeeds. Many men work under a competent leader, but the man who is to be that leader must have more than the individual ability for work. The business world needs good managers who systematic in their work. Any one can build an electrical railroad if he has the money, but it takes a close manager to make it pay when it is completed. The business man-to-day is looking for the young man who can do it."

AZTEC RACE LIVES ON.

REPRESENTS ONE-EIGHTH THE PRESENT POPULATION OF MEXICO.

These Indians Still Look for the Day When the Montezumas Will Resume Their Empire in the South—Their Famous Sacrificial Stone.

Jose Huber writes as follows from the City of Mexico to the Pittsburgh Dispatch: Aztecs are in this city today, as they were nearly four centuries ago, when Cortez and his soldiers created consternation among them by the free use of the freilander and sword. They are every wild Indian and cling to their old-time traditions with the tenacity of the Chinese. Though they have been conquered and their national existence merged into the present Republican form of government, yet they still cherish the belief that Montezuma will return and their kin will be restored to the possession and control of the land over which their forefathers once ruled with undisputed sway.

These primitive people number 1,500,000, representing one-eighth of the total population of Mexico. You can see them every day on the streets, along the country roads or in their mountain retreats, some of them speaking the Nahuatl language and wearing plain garments of homespun, just as their ancestors did before the eye of Columbus sighted the shore of the western world.

The Aztecs were in some respects an advanced people when they were first surprised by European invaders. They had acquired wonderful skill in working in metals. Their process of tempering copper to the hardness of steel is a lost art. I was shown a copper ax among a collection of Aztec relics that was so finely tempered that a file drawn firmly across its polished surface failed to leave even a trace.

They know how to extract gold and silver from the ore and work them into fine ornaments. They could cut and polish the hardest gems and their skill in making baskets, pottery and feather pictures and in working out quaint and artistic designs in leather, woven fabrics and wood carvings is practiced by their descendants today.

It is astonishing what skill and taste these primitive people display in the articles they supply for the curio market. Take their feather pictures as a sample of what they can do. These works of art awaken the admiration of travelers today, as they did of Cortez and his followers. They represent animals, birds, buildings or sweeping landscapes. Nearly every detail is brought out, with exquisite neatness, not with paint and brush, but by deftly combining feathers plucked from birds of brilliant plumage and fastened on the white surface of cardboard.

In striking contrast with the artistic skill of the Aztecs are their slovenly habits of life. They are careless in dress and content with any kind of a hut for shelter. They are not amphibious by nature, and will cheerfully go for weeks without the application of water even to their hands or faces. As parents, they are affectionate to their children. To domestic animals they are cruel.

The Aztecs take a keen delight in music. They will stand entranced while listening to the soft melody of the guitar or the flood of harmonious strains from a military band. They venerate the memory of the heroes of their race. Guatemotzin, the last of the Aztec kings, is their ideal because of the indomitable resistance brought against the invading Spaniards under his heroic leadership. The colossal statue erected to his memory in this city is a masterpiece of monumental art. In August of each year crowds of Aztecs gather around this monument and hold an all-day celebration, praising their departed ruler in speech and song and honoring his memory by reverently entwining the monument with garlands of flowers.

The Aztecs are inclined toward religion and are most devoted worshippers at the shrine of the Virgin Guadalupe. In the villages they seldom pass a cathedral without removing their hats. I have seen groups of these natives standing at street corners in the quiet of evening and just as the vesper bells begin to peal forth from the church tower, each would quietly remove his pointed sombrero and hold it over his shoulder until the last soft reverberations ceased to float on the balmy twilight air.

The stone images before which the ancestors of these people once stood in abject fear have lost their power over them and are viewed only as objects of historic interest. A good many of these idols have been collected by the Mexicans and grouped in the National Museum of this city.

I have stood before some of these stone idols, tracing their weird outlines cut by some master sculptor from rough blocks of dark stone, quarried from the neighboring mountains, and wondered if only those lips of adamant could speak what stories they could relate of the early life of a vanishing race.

Here is Huitalopochtli, the once dreaded war god of the Aztecs. He is a large, blocky image with a savage, cavernous mouth and a skirt of interlocking snakes. A hollow-eyed human skull is carved on his belt, symbolizing death. It was believed that the destinies of war were in his control. He could decree victory or defeat. Hideous monster that he represented it was thought that only the blood of captives taken in battle could appease his wrath and lend victory to Aztec arms.

The human lives annually offered in agonizing dread to satiate the thirst for blood of this same deity is again

ing. Fifty thousand victims are said to have been sacrificed when he was enthroned in the temple where the Spaniards first saw him.

Serap Dins, who was with Cortez as a chronicler of the expedition, wrote of his first visit to the temple, that the idol was entirely covered with gold and jewels and had around his neck a garland of human heads and hearts made of pure gold and silver, ornamented with precious stones of a blue color. Before the idol was a pan of incense with three hearts of human victims, which were then burning, mixed with copal.

"The whole of that apartment," relates, "both wall and floor, was strewn with human blood." Neither gold nor jewels now adorn the idol. The gold-loving Spaniards stripped these valuables and sent them across the Atlantic trophies of their expedition. This image and other idols in the temple were thrown down and for 300 years kept buried from the sight of the natives. The heathen temple itself was demolished, and on the very spot where that magnificent structure stood the adjacent Spaniards built the Great Cathedral of Mexico, that grand church edifice costing $2,000,000, with altars and shrines lavishly adorned with silver and gold and dedicated to the saints and the God of the Christian faith.

In another part of the museum is the famous sacrificial stone on which the victims to be offered up to the God of War were placed. The stone is dark and three feet high. Its surface is covered with nicely designed carvings. In the center is a bowl-like depression. From this a groove two inches deep leads to the outside.

This stone once occupied a conspicuous place in the temple in the days of Montezuma. Human sacrifice was practiced on this stone almost every day. The supply of human hearts, which were kept burning night and day before the god of war was unending. Blood flowed most freely on feast days, when war was being waged against neighboring tribes, when several hundred victims sometimes would be offered in a single day.

The manner of sacrifice was cruel. The ceremony was performed by five priests, four of whom were robed in long gowns of white, and one, the executioner, was robed in scarlet.

When a victim had been brought forward he was seized by four priests, placed upon the stone, and each, grasping one of his limbs, held him helpless while the executioner, armed with an obsidian knife, stood over him and deliberately extracted the heart, which he then held aloft in view of the shouting thousands assembled around the temple. When the bleeding, pulsating seat of life had ceased to drip, that gruesome object was placed into the vase of hearts, the lifeless body removed and another captive brought forward. The vase of hearts can now be seen in the museum.

FLESH AND BLOOD PARADOX.

The Four-Footed Animal Which Lays Eggs.

The arrival of a pair of Echidnas from Australia at the London Zoological Gardens has attracted a great deal of attention, and for weeks after their being placed on exhibition these little animals were the centre of attraction. The Washington Post calls attention to the fact that the United States government has been in possession of a pair of these animals for over a year, and their presence in the Zoological Garden at Washington has excited little or no attention. Indeed, the Guinea pigs, in a cage near that of the Echidnas, attract a great deal more attention from the visitors at the garden.

The Echidnas are the most curious members of the animal kingdom in a great many respects. They are mammals and lay eggs, which, after being deposited, are carried around in a pouch until the young have been hatched and have developed to a point where they are strong enough to take care of themselves to some extent. The hind legs are turned backward, which is to facilitate the animal's passage through the ground. His feet and legs seem to be especially adapted for this purpose, and it is said that the Echidna can burrow through the ground faster than an able-bodied man with a spade can dig him out. It has a spiny covered body, greatly resembling the porcupine, and in its native country lives on the ants, but it will have nothing to do with the ants of this country, for the reason that the latter contain the disagreeable formic acid. The Echidna has no teeth, but is supplied with a long snout with which it cleans out the passages of the ant-hills which it may come across in its travels.

At the Washington Zoo, says the Post, most people pass them by with the remark "Percepsine!" or "Must be a hedgehog!" and thus the most remarkable animals in the Zoo, animals that are mammals and yet lay eggs; animals equipped with spurs, and yet unable to defend themselves; four-footed beasts that walk forward and backward at one and the same time; animals, sans dents, and yet lacking a bill; creatures which beyond a doubt are the greatest paradox in the animal kingdom, are passed by unnoticed owing to ignorance on the part of the public and their own utterly unattractive appearance.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

At a dinner in London the other day, Bernard Shaw remarked to an American guest: "What a lot of you Americans come over here every summer!" "Yes," replied the fair American, "England has come to be a favorite summer resort for Americans." "Well, we won't complain of that," said Shaw; "but for heaven's sake, don't make it a winter resort also."

VISITING HOUSEKEEPER.

NEW PROFESSION WHICH ORIGINATED IN NEW YORK.

Women of Education Wanted to Increase the Number—A Firm of Women to Do Everything Women Dislike Doing—Bachelor Life Made Easy.

The prophecies of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman and others that the servant question will ultimately be solved by abolishing the mistress; that at least this basis of reason in it; had management creates bad service. The woman who has chaotic ideas of conducting a household can hardly expect her domestic machinery to run smoothly, no matter how many hired servants she pays to attend to the details.

On the other hand, there is no doubt that the dissatisfaction attending the profession of domestic service lies deeper than this. The economic independence of women is reaching out and far, and every woman is beginning to realize that she has the same choice of congenial labor as men. It is not necessary to inquire why choice so seldom points to domestic service. Every one knows the facts.

Mrs. Gilman says that the outcome of the situation is the placing of all household work in the hands of trained experts outside the home. The experts will not be classed as servants, paid as servants, or treated as inferiors.

The Rich Already Provided for.

There are indications that such a state of affairs is likely to be brought about in certain classes of society, especially in the luxurious class, who can afford to pay for exemption from the care of life. One indication is the visiting housekeeper. There are a number of these in New York at the present time. Several keep expensive advertisements in the leading papers and magazines, which is evidence that their business pays well. These visiting housekeepers have a clientele of women whose houses they visit daily or at stated intervals, taking entire charge of the servants, the marketing, the bills, the household shopping, the linen—in a word, the domestic routine. The mistress of the establishment places a certain weekly amount in the hands of the housekeeper, gives her general directions as to the style she wishes her home to maintain, and leaves the details to the expert.

New York is perhaps the only city in the United States in which such a profession could flourish at this present time. Other cities are extravagant, certainly, but not with the all-around generous extravagance of New York. The visiting housekeeper has been welcomed in no other place, not even in Washington, where official duties occupy so many women. Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Chicago have never even heard of the visiting housekeeper, unless in isolated cases. But in New York the profession is being recruited largely every year.

A Firm of Visiting Housekeepers.

A firm of women has recently been formed to do the work on a considerable scale. They are women of experience in luxurious housekeeping, they have a wide acquaintance and a good knowledge of life in cities. They have gone into the work with the intention of expanding it to its fullest possibilities. They propose to do anything and everything in a domestic sense that people dislike doing for themselves. The two things that all women unite in disliking are housecleaning and hiring servants. The very wealthy do not have these trials, except in emergencies. They can afford to employ regular housekeepers, who take all the cares of the establishment on their own shoulders. They never have to close their houses, and if they choose to do so they send a retinue of servants ahead to put everything in order before the family arrives.

The moderately rich, however, are obliged to come home after the summer's sojourn in Europe or in the country to a stuffy house, furniture shrouded in hollands, the odor of moth balls and preservatives filling the air, and a general condition of cheerlessness abroad. The firm of visiting housekeepers undertakes to open houses for returning families. The house is swept, dusted, and aired from garret to basement; the windows washed; china, linen, kitchenware, bathtubs, etc., put in complete readiness for use; even the beds are made; if desired, the wardrobe is stocked. If carpets are to be cleaned, mattresses made over, or curtains renewed, extra charges are made. The fee for putting a house in order, exclusive of extra charges, is $25.

Proposed Scheme for Bonding Servants.

The hiring of servants is a part of the firm's business which is now only partially developed. A few are at their disposal at present, and it is hoped that others will be soon. A decided innovation which the firm desires to make is the bonding of servants. When this is accomplished their patrons will be enabled to leave their valuables to the care of visiting housemaids, butlers, valets, etc., assured of their responsibility. There is a form of insurance against theft which, if made practicable along lines proposed by this firm of women, will make the possession of valuable objects more of a pleasure than it has been.

The bonded servants will be greatly appreciated by those bachelors who have apartments in houses where service is not included and who are obliged to depend on janitor service or on hired maids from outside. The visiting housekeepers devote special attention to bachelors—men and women bachelors. The slang has become a colloquialism, which is the first step towards language. Many professional men and women, unaccustomed from boarding houses, have their establishments which they are only too glad to turn over to respectable hands to be kept in order. Many of these are in apartment houses where service is included in the rent, but less expensive ones are in studio buildings, remodeled dwellings, and other buildings where no service is given.

Furnishing Homes for Bachelors.

A service that bachelors often require is furnishing or partial furnishing. Sometimes the necessary, often the unnecessary part of the furniture has been collected, such things as curtains, linens, bathroom fittings, and the like being neglected. Expert buying of these saves both time and vexation, if not money. Keeping these things in repair is another function of the housekeeper.

To become a visiting housekeeper on a small scale is within the capacity of many women who desire to earn money and are not trained to other than domestic life. An acquaintance, or at least the possibility of obtaining good introductions in the class where such work is demanded, by the first necessity. The qualifications are, besides a thorough knowledge of the art of housekeeping, tact, energy, amiability, and perseverance—just the qualifications needed to succeed in any business venture. The profession is one where education and refinement count as capital. Practically all the women who have gone into it have had these two desirable qualities as a basis for their success.—New York Post.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

The French Grand Prix in sculpture provides the successful artist with means of support for four years in Rome or Athens.

Los Angeles, Cal., has the biggest park in the world. It was presented by a newspaper man named Griffith and is called Griffith park.

Six hundred cases of tiles, reliefs and other objects which once decorated the palace of Nebuchadnezzar have been shipped to Germany from Babylon by Dr. Koldewey.

It is reported that 2573 out of 2894 Congregational ministers in England and Wales are total abstainers, while in Ireland and Scotland the proportion is still larger.

The monks of Chartreuse, who have been expelled from France under the enforcement of the associations law, have been offered large sums for the secret of the manufacture of chartreuse liquor.

The average peasant of Macedonia has a net yearly income of only about $50, of which about $17 goes on taxes. It is a common incident for villagers to cut down their fruit trees to avoid the tax on them.

A London appendicitis insurance company now issues special policies guaranteeing the holders all the medical, surgical and nursing expenses, up to the amount insured, incurred in an attack of this malady.

Successful experiments have been made in generating electricity to light railway trains by placing a fan on the front end of the locomotive. The pressure of the air revolves the fan and produces the power.

An adequate conception of the importance of the silk business of this country can be formed from the estimates made by experts, that when the raw material has been manufactured it will represent a total value of $120,000,000.

The new army rifle will pierce six human bodies or one and a half feet of pine at six thousand feet. The use of such a cartridge in riots would endanger the lives of every person within one and a half miles. For that reason the "riot charge" has been provided. It contains 34 grains of powder and two round balls weighing 42 grains. Its fire is not effective at over 600 feet.

Five years ago C. H. Taylor of Ashland, Mo., found a land terrapin. He engraved his name on its shell and turned it loose, speculating whether he would ever run across it again. The other day he captured it a second time. It has grown one-third, but Mr. Taylor's name was still plainly visible. Other initials were engraved on its back and it was turned loose again.

For a Traveling Kit.

A bottle of lavender water and a dainty cambric pocket handkerchief will be found welcome adjuncts to one's traveling kit on a long journey. It will be found most refreshing, not only on the way, but at the end of the journey. A pair of thin slippers will also help in promoting comfort. Some physicians recommend cold, weak tea as the best drink for a long railway journey, but such things must always be left to the custom and temperament of the individual.

PERSONAL BENEFIT.

Wisdom's Whispers. It is not well to take chances when woman's force of character comes in. Tell a man he is looking bad and he at once imagines he is ill.

A woman's nerve stands by her when she is giving the "social bluff" to another woman.

When a man is in love he wants to make the fact known, but is afraid of appearing foolish.

The girl who is in love likes her girl friends to be made aware of the fact. "Some men go on the principle that whatever they do is sure to be right."

Women often are deceived by the way a man bows to their opinions. Men are inclined to look upon life as a struggle without much in the way of compensation.

The woman who sounds her own praises overlooks the good qualities of other women.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Velvet Wardrobe.

This year the entire wardrobe may be fashioned of velvet. Fashion won't prohibit if the purse does not.

For the street there is the coat and skirt costume of navy blue velvet in walking length.

A long-skirted black velvet gown trimmed with bands of fur is the thing for calling and day occasions.

More elaboration is possible in the lighter velvets. A dove gray trimmed with yellow lace and bands of sable makes a most artistic combination for skirt, coat and waist.

Even the evening gown is built of velvet, in exquisite new whites, rose pinks, blues and greens, against which point lace and jewels make a dazzling display.

Hats and cloaks are of velvet, too. In fact, a woman can have almost every garment in her wardrobe made of velvet and not suffer from monotony so varied are the shades, colors and styles.

The Revival of the Garnet. Garnets, after a long relapse, have come into fashion with a rush, and girls are ransacking their mothers' jewel boxes for ancient garnet necklaces, buckles, and brooches worn by grandmamma in the fifties, and handed down to descendants who proved rather unappreciative of the blessing.

These semi-precious stones are exquisitely becoming for evening wear, when they shine with a brilliant crimson glow most flattering to the skin of the wearer. Brunettes particularly look extremely well in these stones, and nothing can be more becoming than one of the old garnet tiaras still to be found here and there worn in a mass of waved dark locks. For day wear they are rather disappointing, being somewhat jetty in effect.

Carbuncles are the uncut variety of the same stone, large specimens being ground and polished in cabochon fashion. The resulting gem is handsomer than the cut garnet, and dearer. It is not, however, so fashionable as the masses of small, brilliant cut stones, which one generally sees. Garnet buckles are sometimes used in black millinery with excellent effect.

Care of the Eyes.

When reading or working, where eyes are used constantly, rest them now and then for a few minutes. Look away out of a window at the green grass, or far away objects.

Never lie down and read. Have the light falling upon the book from over the left shoulder, if possible. Never sit facing the light, and pull down the curtains when retiring so that a strong light will not glare upon you in the morning.

Bathe inflamed eyes with warm water, not cold.

If a cinder gets in your eye, do not rub the eye, or pull the lids apart roughly. Take a tiny camel's-hair brush, dip in sweet oil, draw gently across the eyeball where the intruder is to be seen.

Lose no time in consulting an oculist when your eyes begin to trouble you. The eyes are good and faithful servants. Do not abuse them.

If overworked, rest them. If ailing, give them medicine. If crippled, give them crutches.

Good eyeglasses are wonderful helps to the general health. Backaches, nervousness, indigestion, and general debility are sometimes the result of eye strain.—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

Qualities of an Entertainer.

A hurried hostess or nervous host whose countenance but badly conceals the worry felt, can do more toward making the guests uncomfortable than if the soup was stone cold and the salad dressing was ruined by a too bountiful quantity of vinegar.

An imperturbable calm and a ready tact are the two important factors in the making of a model hostess. Secure these and you need never fear for the success of any of your entertainments.

There is no quality more to be desired to make a woman a social success than that of tact. Its possessor knows the right thing to do and the right time for doing it, and thus gains a reputation for cleverness and for virtues which a factious woman would never win from her circle of acquaintances, no matter how excellent her qualities of both heart and head.

The tactful woman is not only a patient listener, but she is a thoroughly good one. She knows no weariness even when she has heard the same story more than once from the same person, and she smiles in the right place, and appears to enjoy bearing jokes as much as her companion enjoys telling them. Tact is a weapon guided with a multitude of guileless and feminine wiles by the wise woman, and it is only the wise woman who possesses it.—Cooking Club.

A Woman's Personality. Woman's inexhaustible resource in beginning on the first page of a sheet of letter paper and following the page in their natural order, is well known, says an exchange.

Men find it distracting, and even women correspondents confess that—in others—it is an eccentric practice not calculated to modification and prayer. Beyond this one dreamed of going into this feminine peculiarity served actually to invalidate a woman's will.

The late Isabelle Andrews, of Brooklyn, N. Y., it seems, was one of the women who delight to treat the third page of a sheet of writing paper as if it were the second, the fourth as if it were the third, and the second as if it were the fourth. She made her will that way, too. Starting on the first page, she jumped the provisions of the will over to the third page, which she marked two, and wound up by subscribing and attesting the document on the second page, which she marked three. She used a formula, which was intended to be read on the reverse side of the paper—what in ordinary correspondence would call the back of the page. The will was rejected.

The Supreme Court, to which recourse she had, upheld the rejection, on the ground that a will to be legal must be signed at the end, not in the middle, as the Andrews will was.

Even-Tempered Women.

There is a charm about the woman of even temper which we especially appreciate, says the Chicago Journal. In fact, we are disposed to assert that no more charming woman than the even-tempered one can be found at any time of the year.

How depressing, in contradistinction, is the society of that other woman who is in high spirits one day and has the blues the next. It is usual for such an individual to plead the weather as an excuse. And that reminds us.

There was once a little girl, who, on a certain day, when suffering from what polite people term mental miasmas, but what in reality is peevishness, said with emphasis:

"Rainy days are just hateful! I always feel gloomy when the sky is so dark, and the rain just keeps pouring. I hate bad weather!"

"It was her father, sensible man, who made answer quietly.

"If you give way to that sort of thing you will make yourself and other people very unhappy, and you will have very few friends."

He said it in the decisive way in which some individuals know how to say things, and it made an impression. How much discomfort was saved the friends and relatives of that little girl, not to speak of her future husband, by that short speech, it would be impossible to estimate.

How foolish it is, when one comes to think of it, this fretting because the weather isn't all we would like it to be. As if there were any possibility of controlling it, or as if any good purpose were served by making ourselves disagreeable.

The even-tempered woman seldom notices the weather, unless it be to decide whether to take along an umbrella. She is unaffected by variations of temperature. Her society is rest and relief.

We think this weather test is the very best that young men could apply to the young women they think of as future wives. Many a man has found to his cost that the girl who seemed other than she turned out to be on succeeding days of November fog and February sleet.

Yellow lace scarfs are wound twice around the neck and fastened with a gold pin at the throat. Any of these lighted cloth or flannel waists wonderfully.

A great deal of gold braid is used on hats, so much, in fact, that its use will probably be abandoned after a short time. It has already begun to appear rather cheap.

It is now considered the worst possible taste to wear elaborately trimmed picture hats on the street, and they are not to be tolerated in the country or for outdoor sports.

The once shapeless and dowdy sweater has given way to a neatly fitted and stylish garment, very becoming, and most useful for golf, or for country walking or driving.

Any woolen waist, and especially colored ones, are made twice as attractive, if instead of tight linen collars, airy lace or embroidered lines of lawns are worn with them.

Feathers are used in lovely combinations of colors on dress hats. A hat of pale violet beaver with a long, silky nap has a low crown, scooped out in the middle, and a wide curving brim, quite high in the back.

No woman not as young and fair as she will ever be should yield to the temptation of an ermine hat. For that fur is for youth and beauty. A wide hat of ermine, trimmed with applications of heavy white lace, is charming for the woman who can wear it well. Two long, white ostrich feathers and a swirl of white tulle complete the trimming.

A London buyer has been to the Chicago market engaged in executing an order for artillery horses for the British Government. For these horses from $125 to $150 per head is paid, and their weights run from 1200 to 1500 pounds.

A Happy New Year

Better write it 1904, and it's leap year at that, which makes it more dangerous for bachelors—it's a long time since the last leap year.

LOOKS as if we might have another little war on our hands. Columbia is kicking and threatening to fight, and Uncle Sam may have to whip her.

A. C. SMITH.
The announcement of this gentleman's candidacy for the office of Judge of Probate will be found in another place in this issue. Mr.
Smith hardly needs any introduction to the people of Clanton, having been a resident of the county for many years, and for a considerable time the county solicitor. His legal knowledge eminently fits him for the office to which he aspires, and his general fitness is unquestionable. As a lawyer his training would stand him in good stead as Judge, and as a citizen he is well acquainted with the needs of the people. If nominated and elected he would make the county a thoroughly efficient official.

instead. Taylor escaped and has not been captured. John McNeil

Providence

Early Christmas morn when we awoke to adorn this day in prayer and song to Him who sits on the great throne. Raining! raining! it was. But oh, it was God's will for us to go to His temple to make a full sacrifice. So the rain ceased and quite a number went to the house of God, and there we found a beautiful tree erected waiting for presents.

First, devotional exercises by Rev. W. W. Robinson. Many beautiful songs were sung, and many beautiful prayers were offered to ascend to the heavenly hearer, but most beautiful of all, Miss L. I.
Robinson was invited to the altar, and there we humbly bowed with her in prayer to Him who is listening for every sweet word of man and woman.

Mrs. Julia Parrish, teacher of Primary class, questioned the class with important questions, which they answered. Then she addressed the class and congregation on why are we celebrating this blessed day?
Followed by Mrs. L. E. Parrish, teacher of Intermediate, questioning her class likewise on temperance lessons in two last quarters, and her class answered most wonderfully well. The writer thinks it would have had wonderful effect if all who take just a little to taste could have had courage to come and heard the grand and most noble speech made by the teacher on temperance.

Miss L. I. Robinson, teacher of advanced class, tested her class on questions which they answered as fast as she could ask. Then she addressed her class and the congregation on women's place in church and Sabbath school, which was noble, full of grand truths, taken from the truth itself, which is the blessed Book.

Followed by Rev. W. W. Robinson on the first quarter; J. W.
Thomas, second quarter; R. M.
Robinson, third quarter; W. H.
Robinson, fourth and last. This being too noble exercises of the senior class their teacher, Miss Dora Calloway, addressed her class and congregation, subject: How we have improved in Sabbath school work, which was wonderful on her part and the improvement of the school far exceeding better.

Intermission until all could decorate this beautiful tree with presents, which was done hastily, for the time was growing late. Quite loaded the tree was. A beautiful hymn and all were seated again.
Recitation by Miss Zona Robinson, subject: Around the Christmas tree, which was delightful to all.
Now, for distribution of presents by Messrs. R. M. and B. H. Robinson, G. C. Powell and Misses Fannie Belle Parrish, Cora Robinson, Zonie Robinson, assisted by Rev. W. J. Armstrong and Lucien Calloway. Quite a merry time was spent serving the Lord, who had wonderfully blessed us all.
Revs. W. J. Armstrong, M. J.
Parrish and W. W. Robinson were present to give interesting talks.
Miss Martha Dupree and mother visited relatives and friends at this place Xmas.

Quite a number of our Sunday school attended the burial of Jonathan Calloway, who was buried at Salem cemetery Sunday.

A beautiful singing was enjoyed by many at Mr. Riley Robinson's Sunday afternoon.

So I will say no more before I hear the Editor sigh and think what a long letter, though I hope it may not find its way to the waste basket so many could be delighted to read the Xmas at Providence.

Best wishes to all, and success to the Banner.

A Utterly Mistake.

Blunders are sometimes very expensive. Occasionally life itself is the price of a mistake, but you'll never be wrong if you take Dr.

sia, Dizziness, Headache, Liver or Bowel troubles. They are gentle yet thorough. 25c. at Clanton Drug

Crop Roads

Mr. C. C. Mitchell from Coosa comes every looking out a location in Chilton, and after procuring a home from Mr. W. W. Moore returned home, taking with him Messrs. W. A. Hucklebee, J. W.
Hucklebee and W. T. Grant, and what they did for the little squirrels, birds and rabbits on those Coosa branches was a plenty. We are looking for Mr. C. C. Mitchell and family to move into their new home this week. We welcome all such neighbors as Mr. Mitchell in our midst.

Rev. M. J. Parrish filled his regular appointment at this place the third Sunday and preached an excellent sermon from Luke 2.
After preaching W. A. Hucklebee asked the church to go into a covenant that we would hold family prayer at our homes that morning.
I notice in the last issue of the Banner that some one said that the Sunday school at this place was dead, but I want to say that the writer is sadly mistaken, our Sunday school is likely to die. The Lord has taught His Word that the promise of the faithful, he that is faithful until the end, the same shall be saved.

We have had a very quiet Christmas and the families are beginning to make ready to get to their work.
Mrs. Nina Haywood, who has been making Mr. W. A. Hucklebee's her home for the past twelve months, was happily married to Mr. W. T. Grant, at the residence of Mr. W. A. Hucklebee last Sunday.
Rev. Joe Howell officiating. We wish the young couple a long, happy and a successful life. Hurry up, boys, and let's have another wedding.

How to Prevent Croup

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough.
Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For sale

The Town's Sidewalks.

A little effort on the part of householders would go a long way toward making the sidewalks a source of pride rather than the useless and dangerous pathways that border all too many of the streets. In the interest of beauty, safety and neatness let us have uniform sidewalks and keep them in proper repair.

PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit.

The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children?

Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, December 26, 1903.
The Hon. Jesse Overstreet, of Alabama, is a member of congress from that State, is the Secretary of the Republican congressional committee on Post Offices and Pensions. To this committee has referred the recent report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, on the grafting of looting in the Post Office department. In that report the Post Assistant r. m. o. inveighs strongly against the game of graft by men high places in which they have increased several hundred dollars a year and then place some favorite in that office to draw as a salary the increased allowance for the office.
It now transpires that the Hon. Jesse Overstreet, whose committee has been charged with the work of inspecting Bristow's report, and reporting to the House of Representatives on the same, has been guilty of exactly the same offense that Bristow condemns so earnestly in his report. He got the allowance of some small post office in the State of Indiana increased, and then sent a young lady who had been acting as his secretary to draw the salary thus created by the allowance. It will thus be seen how sincere is the attempt of the republicans to bring any of the offenders to justice when they place the report of the investigation in the hands of a man who is guilty of the same offense as others developed in the investigation.

Until there is a Democratic administration the people need not expect anything to come from this investigation on of rottenness in the Post Office department. Every move on the part of the republicans is merely a bluff to hoodwink the people of the nation. It is up to the people to move to the matter.

The talk about Democratic presidential possibilities is still one of the popular themes of conversation and discussion at the national capital.
Many of the politicians are giving out interviews here to the local papers and to their big dailies of the East, and telling how the people of their respective states feel about the matter in their opinions. The consensus of this opinion is about equally divided between Messrs. Gorman, Hearst and Parker. The chief note running through all this interview matter from the politicians of the party is "anybody, O Lord, to win."
It is perfectly natural that a politician who is an officeholder should place the offices to be obtained by the election of a Democratic president above principle and everything else that Democrats hold sacred.
They seem to forget that there are millions of people in this country who do not hold office or seek office or want office, and that those people must be considered in this matter. These millions of non office holding people have opinions, and they are of as much consequence as are the opinions of the politicians and the officeholders, and they are going to make those opinions known and felt before the conventions are held to send delegates to the national convention. When they do the politicians either will climb into the band wagon suggested by the millions of non office holding voters or they will have to walk. I had a long talk the other day with a shrewd and far-seeing politician who is not an officeholder, and who recently has traveled all over the country, especially in the East and the Central West. His business compels him to come in contact with the great mass of the common people; who are not after office, and who look at this thing of electing a president from the standpoint of principle and not office-holding graft. No compromise with the trusts, with the powers that be in Wall Street, and with principle, will be tolerated by the men who make the next platform. No candidate who represents either a compromise or a delusion like that of the last Cleveland administration will stand any chance of coming under the wire a winner in the next Democratic national convention. And he concluded by saying that the sooner that the politicians and office holders of the Democratic party learn this fact the better for them.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the few candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributions, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it. Here in public life, the President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE.

Method and Cost of Burning It to Ashes.

While the accumulation of refuse in the smaller towns has not so great a bearing on public health as in the larger towns and cities, and many diseases are always desirable, and many diseases are directly traced to carelessness in this matter. Typhoid fever is considered by scientists as a fifth disease. Ignorance and stupidity are often responsible for outbreaks of disease in localities that with trifling care in the disposition of sink drains and garbage would never have occurred. Kitchen refuse thrown in a heap in the back yard, there to fester and rot, is always a dangerous neighbor. What cannot be burned should be disposed of in a manner that will preclude the possibility of its becoming a menace to public health.

The refuse in the district of Ealing, adjacent to London, which has a population of 25,000, is burned in a patent "destructor" which has four cells. It has a chimney 143 feet in height. The fuel used is a fine coke, and the quantity consumed costs 37 cents a day. The cost of the destructor was $10,000. The quantity of refuse burned is 6,120 tons per year. Heat from the destructor is utilized in a boiler supplying steam for a machine which drives the lime mixing machines and clay mixer for the sewerage portion of the works.

The local authorities in the Battersea division of London, with a population of 150,000, have erected a patent destructor with a chimney 150 feet in height. It cost $57,000 and consumes 28,000 tons of refuse a year, and there are no complaints about offensive odor.

How to Protect Life.

Death have been caused, with great loss, and most with the instrument of the most important medical achievement of the world.

Never step into an elevator before you get out of the car.

Do not permit yourself to be run by a street car or railroad train.

Under no circumstances allow brick to drop from the top of a building on to your head.

Be careful not to be in a place with a bolt of lightning strike it.

Never fall from the top of a building.

Do not take hold of a live electric wire. Both you and the wire cannot remain alive.

Training is necessary.

The time has come when, to be master in any line, it requires long years of careful training and preparation.

It is true that the opportunities open to young men are greater today than they ever were before; but, on the other hand, there never was a period in the world's history when the qualifications requisite for success in any line of worthy endeavor were of a higher character, says Success.

The artisan, the farmer, the business man, the clergyman, the physician, the lawyer, the scientist, each in his various rank must prepare to reach up to ever enlarging ideals if he would attain his full height.

Revolution is necessary.

A boy big enough to have reached the subject of races of men—not horses—in his geography class was asked to describe the negro. His answer, "The negro has kicking hair and projecting lips," showed that he had at least heard the teacher when she spoke of the "kinky" hair and "projecting" lips characterizing his dark-skinned brother.

His answer really was not so funny as the remark made by a woman who in speaking of her sister said feelingly, "Oh, she's all misconstrued, so we had to take her to the hospital for a performance."—New York Herald.

Revolution is necessary.

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, and clarify the blood. Run-down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it doesn't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by Clanton Drug Co., Hopkins Drug Co.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

Plan to Interest the Government in the Matter.

The effort to form a union of all organizations that have for their object the beautifying of towns and cities, which will be made in connection with the convention of the American Park and Outdoor Association in Buffalo next year will be widely approved, says the Buffalo Express. Most of the large cities and many towns and villages have such associations and would gladly join in the proposed movement.

One of the objects of forming a union is to interest the government in the work and get its support to the extent of collecting and making public information on the subject, with photographs, etc., showing what can be done by organized effort. The government's work would presumably be largely to show what has been done in foreign towns and cities. The individual organizations have accomplished much as it is, but there is a limitless field in which to work, and government aid would be valuable.

Every city in the country and many towns are, for example, filled with unsightly billboards and display advertising in the form of immense paintings on buildings, etc. The improvement societies have given their attention to this matter for a long time, with considerable success. The courts in several states have upheld the right of a city to regulate the size of billboards, and there is every reason for believing that in the not distant future billboards will have disappeared from towns and cities.

The care and planting of trees and shrubs, straightening the sidewalk lines, removal of sidewalk and lot fences and the beautifying of back yards are a few of the other changes which should be made in towns and cities. The question of architecture is another important point. There is plenty of work to be done in improvement, and any movement, such as the proposed union of the separate societies, which promises to help the cause should be heartily supported.

Roads as an Attraction.

The board of supervisors of Nevada county, Cal., met recently and unanimously adopted the following resolutions: "Whereas, The public roads of Nevada county are in a deplorable condition, for which reason immigration to Nevada county is discouraged; and, whereas, the funds of the several road districts as well as the general road fund of said county are in a depleted condition, which renders it impossible for the road commissioners of said county to place said roads in proper condition; and, whereas, in the opinion of this board nothing would tend more to aid in the work of inducing immigration to said county than the placing of the roads in better condition, which improvement would also incidentally advertise the agricultural, mineral and manufacturing interests of said county; now, therefore, be it unanimously ordered by this board that the sum of $1,000 be appropriated from the general fund of the county to the general road fund to aid in the work of inducing immigration to said Nevada county by so improving the public thoroughfares."

MRS. CECILIA STOWE, Author, Echo News Club.

176 Warren Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 22, 1902. For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

Mrs. Stowe's letter shows every woman how a home is saddened by female weakness and how completely Wine of Cardui cures that sickness and brings health and happiness again. Do not go on suffering. Go to your druggist today and secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui.
